SCOUTING IN THE NORTH IA. COUNCIL

A Series Of Articles By W. Earl Hall, Editor Of The Globe-Gazette, Mason City, Ia.

(Special To The Times)

The Trail Of A Scout

The movement known as the Boy Scouts of America is nearing its 20th birthday in the United States. It's 21st birthday, internationally, was celebrated last summer in a huge Jamboree of 50,000 Scouts representing 43 countries of the world. This Jamboree was held at Birkenhead, England, just across the river from Liverpool. Eight boys were in attendance to represent Iowa. Two from the North Iowa Council, Bob Moody of Nora Springs, and Thayer Curry of Mason City. The Jamboree was a huge birthday party for Sir Robert Baden Powell, the originator of Scouting for boys.

Scouting came to the United States in 1916 and has grown rapidly. Today it serves some 800,000 men and boys throughout our country. From the large cities and towns it has spread to the small towns and villages and beyond that to the farm boys. The whole United States is organized into councils under the direct supervision of a man known as the Scout Executive.

In north central Iowa, Mitchell, Worth, Winnebago, Hancock, Cerro Gordo, Floyd, Butler, Frankin and Wright counties comprise a Scouting unit known as the North Iowa Area Council with J. C. Underwood the Scout Executive. Assisting him with his work is L. Osam, the Field Scout Executive, and some 250 men, the volunteer workers in this Scouting movement.

The Scouting Trail in the North Iowa Council leads the boys out-of-doors where there is an abundance of fresh air and sunshine. There, under adequate adult leadership, they find an opportunity to satisfy a number of normal urges, chief among which is the urge to supremacy.

The Scouting Trail In The Home

The Scouting Trail also leads into the home. Scouting comes not to replace either home, church, or school, but rather to supplement each of these institutions in their own endeavors.

Scouting teaches obediance. Not through force or coercion, but the desire to do ones share. Cleanliness, likewise, is a phase of Scouting. It is taught in the eleventh Scout law, "A Scout is Clean.' Not "must" or "shall be" clean, but "IS" clean. Parents find that Scout sons bring smiles to their faces and remove the wrinkles of worry.

The Scouting Trail In The School

Scouting is being spoken of more every day by the nations great educators as one of the most vital phases of a boy's development. Through its Merit Badge program and its advancement scheme that offers a Scout an opportunity to make his own choices, Scouting is teaching a boy "to want to learn." One superintendent of schools says, "It is one of the biggest things Scouting does.' In the North Iowa Council, almost 100% of the School Superintendents are Scouting volunteers.

The Scouting Trail In The Church

Scouting is a movement for ALL boys, Catholic, Protestant or Jew. It is non-sectarian, yet very definitely religious, leaving the religious training to the institution to which each boy or his parents belongs. Scouting recognizes that one cannot develop into the right type of man and citizen without recognizing his obligation to God.

A Scout, when he accepts the Scout Oath and the training under the Scout Laws, dedicates himself to right living, to the service of God and the brotherhood of man.

The Counter Attack

Every boy who mingles with the crowds cannot help but make contact eventually with that evil and insidious propoganda that causes much trouble and worry for parents.

Scouting has a counter attack for this element in a program full of worthwhile activities to occupy idle hands and much worthwhile and constructive material to read and learn about under the direction of the best man any community can produce.

No finer thing could come to the boys of North Iowa. It is a challenge to any right thinking man or woman.

Learn about Scouting through the series of articles to follow.

Scouting Is World Wide

Scouting for boys started in England as a result of projects carried out by Sir Robert Baden Powell in Africa during the Boer War. His work there proved to the young men of England the advisability of knowing something concerning the great out-of-doors and being able to care for oneself under adverse conditions.

A number of the outdoor games, hikes, etc. were carried back to England by these young men, and outdoor clubs sprang up all over the Island. Because of the growing interest in this type of work, Sir Robert Baden Powell was asked to head it up. This he did after resigning from the army. Scouting under his direction, as a program for obys, grew and developed. Eventually, it spread to many other countries until today it is in force in 44 countries of the world.

Scouting In The United States

Scouting came to the United States in 1910 through an incident characteristic of the program. W. D. Boyce of Chicago was hopelessly lost in a London fog and asked the assistance f a young treet urchin in finding his way to his hotel. The boy went along with Mr. Boyce to the hotel where Mr. Boyce offered him a "tip," regularly given to errand boys and bell hops in Chicago, but the street urchin immediately came to salute and told Mr. Boyce that the "tip" could not be accepted inamuch as the lad was a Boy Scout, and was not permitted to take tips for courtesies or good turns.

This idea was entirely new to Mr. Boyce. Inquiring further, he found that Sir Robert Baden Powell was heading up a movement known as a British Boy Scout Association in England. The next day Mr. Boyce was directed by this same lad to the office of Sir Robert Baden Powell where he learned more of the Scouting idea. As a result of this "good turn" Scouting was brought to the United States by Mr. Boyce In commemoration of this incident, a large bronze buffalo has been et up in London by the Boy Scouts in memory of the unknown Scout.

Scouting was rganized and incorporated in the United States in 1910 and after having proved its worth and attractiveness to the boyhood of America, it was duly chartered by a special act of Congress in 1916. The movement of Scouting spread rapidly through the larger cities of the United States and eventually has worked its way into the smaller towns, villages and even to the rural sections of the country. Practically the whole United States is now organized under a plan known as the Area Council, whereby from two to as many as forty-seven counties are organized into one unit.

Nine Counties In The North Iowa Council

In Iowa there are some sixteen councils covering practically every county in the state. The North Iowa Council of which Klemme is a part, is composed of nine counties, namely; Mitchell, Floyd, Butler, Worth, Cerro Gordo, Franklin, Winnebago, Hancock and Wright with the Area headquarters or 'service station" in Mason City.

In 1919 there were three troops functioning in Mason City separately. A group of men in Mason City realizing the advisability of having these three troops operate under one head, approached the National headquarters for suggestions toward the organization of a first class council.

National headquarters suggested that the whole of Cerro Gordo county be organized into a council. The suggestion was followed out and this council functioned successfully for a number of years. So successfully in fact that other towns in surrounding counties made known

LARGE SHIPMENT OF LIVE STOCK

TWELVE CAR LOADS OF LIVE STOCKED SHIPPED SATURDAY

Linden Ranch Had Bulk Of Stock With Five Car Loads

The large shipment of live stock out of the local yards Saturday evening is an indication that the shipping season this year will again be as large or larger than last year. Saturday night there were a total of twelve car loads of live stock shipped, ten cars going to the U. S. Yards at Chicago, and two cars to Iowa Falls.

The Linden Ranch lead the list with a total of five carloads of fine cattle for Chicago. John Larson, Klemme farmer shipped two carloads of cattle to Chicago. C. A. Larsen, local buyer, shipped one car load of cattle to Chicago. The Klemme Shipping Association, of which Joe E. Johnson is the manager, shipped one car load of cattle and one car load of hogs to Chicago, and one car load of hogs to Iowa Falls.

Summed up the results are as follows:

Linden Ranch, 5 cars cattle.
John Larsen, 2 cars cattle.
C. A. Larsen, 1 car cattle and 1 car of hogs.
Shipping Association, 1 car cattle and 2 cars of hogs.

"AVERY AMBITIOUS ARISTOCRATS" MET DECEMBER 28th

Were Entertained By Eva Stokesbary At Mrs. C. A. Arnold Home

The "Avery Ambitious Aristocrats" were entertained by Miss Eva Stokesbary at Mrs. C. A. Arnold's home on Saturday, December 28th.

The program opened with a club song, "Some Folks."

Roll call was answered by 'A Christmas present I received."

Minutes of the previous meeting were then read, and "Newspaper Clippings," given by the Club Reporter.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Eva Stokesbary; Vice President, Marjorie Anderson; Secretary and Treasurer, Jane Dutheridge.

The duties of the various officers were fully explained.

The balance of the program was then given as follows:

"Hose Selection," Esther Gealow.

"Report of the 4-H Banquet," by La Vohn Sherwood.

Piano Solo, "Mavis Waltz," by Eva Stokesbary.

Reading, "Making Him Feel At Home," by Jane Dutheridge.

Reading 'The Going of the White Swan," by Eva Stokesbary.

Six members, twenty visitors and two mothers were present, and one girl, Idella Lauen, joined the club at this meeting.

The leaders then conducted their meeting at this time.

Clarice Johnsin is the 4-H club member who canned the most quarts of fruit and vegetables and she was awarded one dozen fruit jars. Clarice had canned 199 quarts of fruit and vegetables.

Refreshments were served and all those present enjoyed the program and a delicious lunch.

STUDENTS GATHER FOR RE-UNION

KLEMME ALUMNI BANQUET HELD FRIDAY EVENING

Three Course Dinner Was Served By The Royal Neighbors

The Alumni of the Klemme High School held their annual banquet and class re-unions Friday evening at the Royal Neighbors Hall.

The banquet was well attended this year by graduates of the local school, there being twenty-six present at the one long table which was decorated in green and white, the Klemme High School colors. Three attractive center pieces were arranged in their proper places on the table, adding to the beauty of the decorations and colors used.

The banquet was prepared and served in three courses by the ladies of the Royal Neighbors Lodge, and they were praised by the former students for their fine dinner and fine way they carried out the serving.

During the course of the banquet Mr Frank Gibbs was toastmaster and in turn caled upon representatives of the various graduating classes for toasts. Clarence Elder, of the 1924 class, the first to graduate from the 12 grade system, responded for his class. Miss Adalia Schroeder, representing the second class, or 1926, responded with a toast. The class of 1927 was without a representative. Harvey Nelson, of the 1928 class was next, and Claire West represented the latest class, that of 1929, to graduate.

Following the banquet and the program the balance of the evenings entertainment was carried out at the Idle Hour Theatre, below the R. N. A. hall where games of all kinds, stunts and fun and some dancing comprised the program.

A part of this meeting was devoted to business. All enjoyed very much the reading of the minutes of previous meetings.

The following are the Alumni ocicers: Hallie Greiman, President; Gladys Wilson, Vice President; Leona Lau, Secretary and Treasurer.

COUNTY CLERK AND RECORDER FILE FOR OFFICE

Two More Announcements Arrive At Times Office Today

The fore part of the week we received Mr. Oxley's anouncement for Supervisor. Our morning mail contained two more.

For County Clerk

Chris J. Johansen, our present clerk of the district court is again a candidate for that office.

Chris is so well known all over the county, but should there be anyone not familiar with him we will say for their information that without a particle of doubt, Mr. Johansen is the best clerk Hancock County has ever had. Chris certainly "knows his onions." And as far as we are concerned Chris can have the office for several more terms.

This county business is a big thing now days and we believe in keeping efficient men in office. All right Christy, go to it!

For County Recorder

Fern Peck Katter, our present Recorder is again a candidate for the office. Mrs. Katter has been very efficient in her work in caring for the records of her office.

At the time she ran for office the first time she made a very good race and will no doubt have a large following again. She is now serving her second term.

Mrs. Katter is deserving consideration by the voters, as we know of none better suited to the office.

CORRECTION

The name of Mr. and Mrs. Werner Schlawin was missing in our list of guests of the Henry Wille home coming Christmas Day. Pardon us Werner!

KLEMME INDEPENDENTS TAKE GAME FROM DIAMOND BREAD

Fast Game Was Played On Local Floor Monday Night

The Klemme Independents won by one score Monday night on the local floor from the Diamond Bread quintet of Mason City, the score being 29 to 28.

The game, refereed by Lloyd Wistey, was fast from start to finish and at no time during the game did either side have a safe lead. Donald Gibbs, playing forward, dropped in five field goals, with Stokesbary and Frank Gibbs right on his heels with four each. Tanner slipped in a field goal and Koerner chalked up a free one, for Klemme.

For the Diamond Bread Strickland made four field goals, Krough three field goals, and two free ones, Lennan, three; Moeller two and Patterson, one.

The Diamond Bread boys made good two free throws from a possible five, both made by Krough. Klemme had two free chances and made one of them good for a counter. Following is the line-up and the scores made:

Klemme	FG	FT
O. Stokesbary	4	0
Don Gibbs	5	0
Frank Gibbs	4	0
Kermit Koerner	0	1
Diamond Bread	FG	FT
Krough	3	2
Strickland	4	0
Lennan	3	0
Moeller	2	0

Referee—Lloyd Wistey.
Time Keeper—A. Klotzbach.

Independent To Play Hayfield Here Friday Night

The Klemme Independents, the town basket ball team, will play the fast Hayfield town team on the local floor this Friday night.

HARRY PRINGNITZ AND MISS FLORENCE TRUMBELL WED

They Start The New Year Right By Being Married Last Day of 1929

Announcements are out that Miss Florence Trumbell and Mr. Harry Pringnitz were married Tuesday, December 31, 1929.

The bride is a daughetr of James Trumbell of Mason City, and a sister of Sumner Trumbell of Klemme. After completing her school studies she took up the profession of teaching and taught in schools near Kanawha and at Goodell. Sh eis a fine young lady and possess those qualities which go to make up a good home maker and help mate.

Harry is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Pringnitz and is one of the popular young men of our community. He is well versed in the art of farming and will follow that line, and the young couple will go to home keeping on the farm which at present is occupied by Alfred Schlei.

They are a fine young couple, and have a large host of friends who wish them much happiness and success.

IS CANDIDATE FOR REELECTION AS SUPERVISOR

The county political pot begins to boil and soon there will be many candidates out looking for political plums.

The first announcement to reach the Times is that of Mr. Fred J. Oxley, of Corwith, who seeks the office of Supervisor.

Mr. Oxley is at present a member of the Board, as Chairman. As far as we know, Mr. Oxley has served the county efficiently and well.

He wil, no doubt, receive strong support at the coming primary.

KLEMME SCOUT COURT OF HONOR IS POSTPONED

Will Be Held Sometime In January Says Headquarters Staff

The Court of Honor which had been scheduled for Monday, January 6th, at Klemme, has been postponed, according to information received from Scout Exedutive J. C. Underwood. No date has been set, but it may be held sometime during January.

USHER IN NEW YEAR WITH PARTY

BIBLE CLASS ENTERTAINED BY EPWORTH LEAGUERS

Young Folks Enjoyed Watch Party At School House Tuesday Eve

The Young People's Bible Class of the Reformed Church were the honored guests of the Epworth League of the Methodist Church at a New Year's Eve Watch Party held at the high school gymnasium Tuesday evening.

The party which began at 8:00 o'clock was attended by about ninety young people of the community and was one of the finest gatherings ever held in Klemme.

The evening was spent with a varied program as entertainment, and included an hour and a half of games, stunts and fun. A program and pantomime was given by the Leaguers which was followed by a lunch from 10:30 to 11:00 o'clock.

Following this a one hour devotion period was enjoyed, followed by lantern slide pictures and talks. At exactly 12:00 o'clock all joined hands, formed in a circle and repeated, "Blessed be the tie that binds.'

Short talks by Rev. Grosshuesch and Rev. Whyte were enjoyed.

The party was very successful and no doubt will become an annual affair. It displayed the fine relationship existing between the churches of Klemme.

EVENTS OF 1929 PASS IN REVIEW

Noteworthy Happenings of the Year in the United States and Other Countries.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

MANY happenings contributed to making the year 1929 highly interesting to the observers of human events, and at times exciting for some of the participants therein. First in international importance were the long strides taken toward the establishment of peace and amity throughout the world. These were the unprecendented visit of Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain to President Hoover, followed by the announcement that under their administrations the two great English-speaking nations would co-operate to prevent war, and by the invitation to France, Italy and Japan to participate with the United States and Britain in another conference for naval limitation; the formal acceptance of the Kellogg-Briand pact by nearly all nations; the readjustment of German reparations by the Young commission, the liquidation of other World war problems and the beginning of the evacuation of the Rhineland by the allies.

Mars was almost idle throughout the year. The only serious armed conflicts were the "unofficial" war in Manchuria between the Chinese and Russian; the perennial civil war in China; a bloody but futile rebellion in Mexico, and a bitter struggle for the throne of Afghanistan. An uprising of Arabs against Jews in Palestine cost many lives but was speedily quelled by the British.

In the United States the most talked-of event was the collapse in the autumn of inflated stock prices on the exchanges, which took from a host of amateur speculators paper profits of many billions of dollars. The calamitous depression that might have resulted was averted when President Hoover called into conference the leaders of industry, finance and labor and obtained their pledges to support his program for continued and increasing prosperity. At the same time Secretary of the Treasury Mellon announced that the administration would recommend that corporation and individual income tax rates for 1929 be reduced by 1 per cent, and this plan was supported by leaders of both parties and acted on with celerity by congress in December. In its special session during the summer congress enacted a farm relief law and a federal farm board acting under its provisions was soon in operation with ample funds to aid the agriculturists. The house also passed a tariff bill, raising many of the rates; but the senate, controlled by a coalition of Democrats and radical Republicans, re-wrote the measure on other lines and the controversy went over to the regular session that opened on December 2.

INTERNATIONAL

WHEN Gen. Charles Gates Dawes, after doing a little job of revising the public finances of Santo Domingo, went to England as American ambassador, he immediately began conversations with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald with a view of clearing up the differences between the United States and Great Britain concerning limitation of naval armament and preparing the way for another conference of the chief naval powers. The two statesmen found agreement easy, and early in October Mr. MacDonald came over to discuss that and allied questions with President Hoover. Their conversations were equally satisfactory and they announced that the two nations would renounce war with each other and cooperate to preserve peace throughout the world. The spirit of good will infused all their utterances, and even the suspicious French were reassured when both Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald declared this Anglo-American entente was not designed to take the least advantage of any other nation.

The ground thus being made ready, France, Italy and Japan were invited to participate in a conference in London in January for the purpose of extending and supplementing the Washington treaty of 1922. They were told that the British and American governments still desired the abolition of the submarine but recognized that no final settlement on this subject could be reached except in conference with the other naval powers.

President Hoover named, as American delegates to the conference, Secretary of State Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Adams, Ambassadors Dawes, Morrow and Gibson, and Senators Reed of Pennsylvania and Robison of Arkansas.

Adjustment of Reparations.

German reparations were readjusted by the commission of international experts headed by Owen D. Young of the United States, and the plan offered was accepted by all nations concerned, though Germany professed to be disappointed with it, and Great Britain would not accept the division of payments at first suggested. The Germans were consoled by the resulting evacuation of the Rhineland long before the time set by the treaty of Versailles. Withdrawals from two of the occupied zones was completed late in the year, and by the middle of December all the British troops had departed.

One of the most important features of the Young plan was the setting up in Basel, Switzerland, of a Bank of International Settlements.

The allied nations and Germany settled most of the remaining World war questions, including the payments to Belgium for the worthless German marks left in that country. Premier Briand of France, being then in an optimistic mood, presented to the representatives of 28 European countries his plan for a federation of the continental powers, asking that it be submitted to their governments. It was received politely and widely discussed.

Russia and China, disputing over the control and management of the Chinese Eastern railway, came to blows along the Manchurian borders, and though there was no declaration of war, the fighting continued for months. The Russians were the aggressors, making frequent raids into Chinese territory and destroying a number of towns. "White" Russians in Manchuria were especially the objects of their attacks. Finally, late in November, China appealed to the powers to persuade Russia to abide by the Kellogg-Briand pact, which both Russia and China had signed. President Hoover led the way in response to this request, but meanwhile negotiations had begun between Moscow and the provincial government of Manchuria, and Moscow resented the American note as unnecessary and "not a friendly action."

Italy and the Vatican at Peace.

Early in February negotiations for the resumption of friendly relations between Italy and the Vatican were completed and a treaty was signed by which Italy recognized the full sovereignty of the pope and the quarrel which had lasted 50 years was ended. The separation of church and state in Italy was made official, and the Vatican, with some adjacent land given the status of an independent state. It was called "Vatican City" and Pius XI promulgated a constitution for it.

One other old quarrel was settled amicably, through the efforts of President Hoover. This was the Tacna-Arica dispute between Chile and Peru. The territory was divided and every one was satisfied except Bolivia, which had hoped for an outlet to the sea.

Elihu Root's formula for adhesion of the United States to the Court of International Justice, commonly known as the World court, was accepted by the League of Nations and the court itself. It satisfies in the main the reservation long ago made by the senate, but it will be necessary for that body to pass on the matter again. The protocol was signed in December on behalf of President Hoover by J. P. Moffat, American charge d'affaires at Berne, Switzerland.

FOREIGN

PRIME Minister Stanley Baldwin's British government grew steadily weaker through the first part of the year because of unemployment, housing, pensions, taxes and a dozen other domestic problems which it could not meet to the satisfaction of the nation. David Lloyd George put the rejuvenated Liberal party in the limelight with ample promises, and the Laborites looked forward to the general elections of May 30 with a confidence that was fairly justified. When the ballots were counted it was found that the Conservatives had been badly defeated, so Baldwin and his cabinet resigned. No one party had secured a clear majority in the house of commons, but the Laborites were strongest. Therefore Ramsay MacDonald was given the post of prime minister and proceeded to form a new government. The portfolio of minister of labor was given to Miss Margaret Bondfield, the first woman to enter a British cabinet. She was one of fourteen women elected to parliament. Arthur Henderson was put at the head of the foreign office.

The Liberals had elected fifty-nine members and held the balance of power. They virtually agreed to support the Labor government so long as the policies it put forward were not too socialistic; and it was freely predicted that Mr. MacDonald's chief troubles would come from the radical members of his party. His plans for the alleviation of unemployment were almost upset in July when the great cotton industry was tied up by a strike that involved 500,000 operatives and closed 1,800 mills in the Lancashire area. The prime minister took an active personal part in the settlement of this trouble. He also made progress toward ending the old disputes between the coal mine operators and their employees.

France Reasonably Prosperous.

France had a fairly prosperous year, her people fattening on big crops, reparations and American tourists and amusing themselves as always with the game of politics. Premier Poincare continued in office, despite ill health, until he had secured the ratification of the war debt agreements with the United States and Great Britain. This action was taken by the parliament on July 26, and M. Poincare, who had so long and so well served his country, immediately resigned. Aristide Briand, veteran cabinet member, was made premier, and as the Radical Socialists refused to participate, he made no changes in the ministers. Under his rule repressive measures against the Communists were continued with vigor, and their meetings of protest were broken up by the police. Through the summer unemployment was almost nonexistent, and in August a French commission reached an agreement with the government of Rumania by which 10,000 laborers were to be transported from that country to France.

In October Briand's support in the chamber of deputies dwindled, and on the 22nd of that month he and his cabinet resigned. Eduard Daladier tried in vain to form a new government, and the job was then done successfully by Andre Tardieu. Briand remained in the cabinet as foreign minister and it seemed that his policies would be carried forward by the Tardieu government.

Fascism Grows Stronger.

Premier Mussolini of Italy, quite scornful of his detractors, further strengthened the power of Fascism, if that were possible. The new legislature was set up early in the year, and in April the Duce assumed full control of the regulation of capital and labor. Not having much confidence in disarmament conferences, the premier took steps to make Italy's armed forces more efficient and declared that while the nation desired peace with all the world, it was spiritually prepared to face any crisis. The settlement of the old quarrel with the Vatican was a feather in his cap, but later developments showed that much bitterness remained. In December the king and queen paid their first visit to Pope Pius XI in the Vatican.

Afghanistan achieved the front page at various times during the year. King Amunallah found that the western reforms he tried to introduce were causing such violent opposition that he rescinded them in January and abdicated in favor of his brother. The rebellious tribesmen were still not satisfied, and under the leadership of one Habibullah Khan, they captured Kabul, the capital, and drove out the new king. Habibullah, who really was Bacha Sakao, a bandit, assumed the crown and lasted until October, when Nadir Khan occupied Kabul and proclaimed himself king. Bacha was taken prisoner and executed.

Race War in Palestine.

Palestine was the scene of a bloody uprising of the Arabs against the Jews in August and many of the latter race were massacred in Jerusalm and other places. The immediate cause of the outbreak was a dispute over the Wailing Wall which the Jews have used for centuries as a place of prayer; but it goes back to the deep resentment of the Arab against the British mandate and the predominance of Jewish influence in the government of a country which they consider belongs to them. The local authorities were unable to stop the fighting, so the British stepped in with warships, troops and airplanes and speedily forced the belligerents to cease their killings and depredations. The situation in the Holy Land was still considered so serious that the British government sent out a commission of inquiry.

China's Nationalist government, besides the quarrel with Russia, had to contend with the seemingly unending civil warfare that keeps the huge nation relatively powerless. This conflict died down and revived several times during the twelvemonth, and in December reached perhaps its most serious stage.

Mexico's annual revolutionary outbreak came in March and spread rapidly in eight or ten states, becoming really formidable though belittled by President Portes Gil. The rebels were under the general leadership of Escobar, while General Calles, minister of war, led the government forces in person. For weeks there was bloody fighting in Orizaba, Monterey, Juarez, Manzanillo, Jiminez and Torreon, with fortune favoring first one side and then the other. Gen. Jesus Aguirre, rebel leader in Vera Cruz, was captured and executed, and on April 3 the federal forces won a great victory at Reforma. By the end of April the rebellion was in collapse, and generals by the dozen were fleeing across the United States border. With this off its hands, the government proceeded to squelch the "religious rebels" who had been active along the west coast.

The Presidential election was held on November 17 and resulted in victory for Pascual Ortiz Rubio, candidate of the Grand Revolutionary or government party, over Vasconcelos of the Anti-Re-election party. The election itself was reasonably quiet but was preceded by sanguinary riots in many cities.

DOMESTIC

DURING the last two months of its life the Seventieth congress passed a number of necessary and wise measures, including the army and navy supply bills, the bill authorizing the construction of fifteen cruisers, and one providing for deportation of alien gunmen and bootleggers. Resolutions were adopted ordering a survey of the Nicaragua canal route and giving federal approval to the Chicago centennial exposition of 1933, and the senate ratified the Kellogg-Briand pact outlawing war. Another measure passed both houses that was looked upon by a considerable part of the citizenry as neither necessary nor wise. This was the Jones bill to punish offenders against the Volstead law by a maximum of $10,000 fine or five years in prison or both. The bitter opposition of the wets was appeased somewhat by an amendment stating that congress did not intend that such severe penalties should be imposed for slight or casual violations.

Then came Herbert Hoover, who, with Charles Curtis as vice president, was inaugurated as chief executive on March 4. In a vigorous inaugural address the new President promised that his campaign pledges would be fulfilled, and dwelt especially on the problems of law enforcement, farm relief, and the tariff. He announced that the first of these would be subjected to a searching investigation by a national commission which he would appoint, and urged congress to do its duty in respect to the others.

Mr. Hoover's cabinet was headed by Henry L. Stimson as secretary of state and contained two hold-overs—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Secretary of Labor Davis. The names of Mellon and Davis were not submitted to the senate for confirmation, and a little later the foes of the head of the treasury tried in vain to impeach his right to hold the portfolio.

Farm Relief and Tariff.

The President called congress to meet in special session on April 15, asking that it confine itself to passing bills for the relief of agriculture and revising the tariff especially for the benefit of farmers and industries that had not been prosperous. The house in ten days passed the Haugen farm relief bill; and on May 28 it gave its approval to the Hawley tariff measure which revised most of the schedules and generally increased duties.

In the senate the Republican radicals and the Democrats insisted on putting in the McNary farm relief measure a provision for the debenture or export subsidy plan, though they knew this would not be accepted by President Hoover. In this shape the bill was passed on May 14, and for a month the house and senate conferees struggled over it, the house finally winning and the debenture scheme being eliminated. Mr. Hoover signed the measure on June 15, and soon after named the members of the federal farm board authorized by the act. Alexander Legge of Chicago, president of the International Harvester company, was appointed chairman and the board proceeded to promote the formation of farmers' co-operatives, which would be aided with loans from a revolving fund of $150,000,000 that had been voted by congress. This work continued throughout the year, meeting with general approval.

With the question of tariff revision the senators got tangled up in a fight that seemed interminable. A coalition of Democrats and radical Republicans was formed that succeeded in tearing to pieces the bill reported by the senate committee which resembled that passed by the house. This anomolous majority professed to be acting for the farmers and even inserted in the tariff measure the export debenture plan. The re-writing of the bill could not be completed before Thanksgiving, and so was passed on to the regular session that opened on December 2.

In their spare time during the autumn the senators investigated the activities of lobbyists, especially those concerned with tariff rates, and from some witnesses, notably Joseph Grundy of Pennsylvania, they heard comments on them and their doings that were not pleasing.

President Hoover on May 20 appointed his commission on law enforcement, consisting of eleven eminent men and women with George W. Wickersham as chairman. It was understood this commission would take several years for its investigation, making recommendations from time to time.

Stock Market Collapse.

The great debacle mentioned in the introductory paragraphs came in late October and continued for two weeks. It was the culmination of many months of frenzied gambling by amateur speculators in a sensationally rising market. Prices fell rapidly and paper profits of about seventy billion dollars vanished. The government could do nothing to check the collapse, but when normal levels had been reached President Hoover came forward with a program for the stabilization of business and industry and the continuation of prosperity the country had been enjoying. He called groups of leaders in all lines to conferences in Washington and received from them assurances that they and their organizations would co-operate with his plans. At a final meeting of big industrialists and financiers a permanent committee was named to watch out for weak spots in business and apply remedies.

In his message read to the first regular session of the Seventy-first congress the President expressed the confidence that the measures taken had re-established confidence and that a very large degree of unemployment had been prevented. He recommended increased expenditures for waterways, buildings, and other public works, and asked congress to authorize the income tax cut of 1 per cent, effective for one year. The President also dwelt at length on the matter of law enforcement, declaring it to be the most important issue before the people and recommending various changes to help the enforcement of prohibition.

The house speedily passed the tax reduction resolution and the senate accepted it in due time. One of the first acts of the upper house was the adoption of a resolution which denied a seat in the senate to William S. Vare of Pennsylvania on the ground of corruption and fraud in his nomination and election three years previously. Governor Fisher promptly appointed Joseph Grundy to fill the vacant seat, and he was sworn in after being severely castigated by a number of senators.

Riotous demonstrations against President Borno of Haiti and his American advisers broke out in December. The United States marines were constrained to shoot down a few natives, and President Hoover asked congress to authorize the appointment of a commission to study the unsatisfactory conditions on the island.

Secretary of War James W. Good died on November 18, and Patrick J. Hurley of Oklahoma, who had been assistant secretary, was given the portfolio.

Mr. Hoover's diplomatic appointments were highly commended. He sent Gen. Charles Gates Dawes to London, Senator Walter E. Edge to Paris, John W. Garrett to Rome, Gerritt J. Diekema to Brussels, Henry F. Guggenheim to Cuba, Irwin B. Laughlin to Madrid, Charles C. Hart to Persia, and A. B. Geissler to Siam. Dwight F. Davis, former secretary of war, was appointed governor general of the Philippines; Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., was made governor of Porto Rico, and Lawrence M. Judd governor of Hawaii.

There were echoes from time to time of the oil scandals. The Supreme court upheld the conviction of Harry F. Sinclair for contempt of the senate and of court and he was in prison from May 6 until November 20. Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, was found guilty of bribery in the oil lease cases and was sentenced to one year in prison and $100,000 fine.

The annual convention of the American Legion was held in Louisville, and O. L. Bodenhamer of Oklahoma was elected commander. The Grand Army of the Republic met in Portland, Maine, and chose E. J. Foster of Worcester, Mass., as its commander in chief.

An interesting event was the celebration on October 21 of the golden jubilee of Edson's electric light. The entire civilized world recognized the occasion but the big doings were at Henry Ford's reconstructed old-time village near Detroit, President Hoover, Mr. Edison and a host of other notables being the automobile manufacturer's guests.

While in the Middle West the President took part in the celebration of the completion of canalization of the Ohio river, delivering addresses at Cincinnati and Louisville.

There were two elections that attracted especial attention. In Virginia the regular Democrats defeated a coalition of Republicans and anti-Smith Democrats led by Bishop Cannon. In New York Jimmie Walker was re-elected mayor, easily beating Congressman La Guardia and other aspirants. Other elections in various parts of the country indicated that the Democratic party was regaining strength.

AERONAUTICS

MOST spectacular of the year's events in aeronautics was the flight of the huge German dirigible Graf Zeppelin in August and September from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst, N. J., and thence eastward around the world, with stops only at Friedrichshafen, Tokyo, Los Angeles and Lakehurst. On September 4 the big ship arrived safely at its home port in Germany. The trip was made without mishap though a severe storm was encountered soon after leaving Japan. Plans were laid to use the dirigible in Arctic exploration.

The Atlantic was crossed three times by airplanes. Jiminez and Iglesias of Spain flew from Seville to the Brazilian coast late in March; and in June three French pilots in the plane Yellow Bird crossed from Old Orchard Beach, Me., to the coast of Spain. Next month Williams and Yancey, American flyers, hopped off from Old Orchard Beach for Rome, but they were forced to land near Santander, Spain, by lack of gas; later they completed their trip. All other attempted transatlantic flights were failures, some of them tragedies.

Setting New Records.

All records for sustained flight were broken in January by the army plane Question Mark which remained up 150 hours and 40 minutes, being refueled in the air 36 times. In May this was surpassed by Robbins and Kelley of Forth Worth, Texas, whose endurance flight lasted 172 hours and 31 minutes. In July Mendell and Reinhart at Culver City, Calif., put both records in the shade with a mark of 246 hours and 43 minutes, and then, later in the same month, Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, in the St. Louis Robin plane, settled the contest for the year by remaining aloft for 420 hours and 21 minutes. Lieut. Apollo Soucek of the United States navy established a new altitude record of 39,140 feet. Capt. Frank Hawks flew from Los Angeles to New York in 17 hours and 44 minutes, and George Haldeman flew from Windsor, Ont., to Havana in 12 hours and 56 minutes.

The Schneider cup race for seaplanes was won by Lieutenant Waghorn of England, who averaged 328.63 miles an hour over the 218 mile course. A few days later A. H. Orlebar drove the same plane at the record speed of 355.8 miles. Over in Germany a plane propelled by rockets was given its first tryout, Fritz von Opel flying six miles. The Germans also boasted of the biggest airplane, the Dox, which made successful flights carrying 169 persons.

The American national air races were held at Cleveland in August. In connection with them the women, who were becoming very active in aviation, had an air derby from Santa Monica, Calif., to Cleveland, Louise Thaden of Pittsburgh was the winner. The races for 1930 were awarded to Chicago.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was a busy man during the year, and after his marriage to Miss Anne Morrow in May he usually was accompanied on his flights by his bride. In February the colonel inaugurated the United States-Panama air mail service, and in September he and Mrs. Lindbergh opened another new route by a flight from Miami to Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana. On the way home they stopped to make flights over the jungle of Honduras and Yucatan to photograph hitherto unexplored Aztec ruins.

On Thanksgiving day Commander Richard Byrd and three members of his expedition made a difficult and hazardous airplane flight over the great Antarctic plateau in the course of which they looped the South pole, returning in safety to their base in Little America. Byrd thus became the first man to fly over both poles.

NECROLOGY

SOME of the greatest actors in the drama we call the World war were taken by death during the year. France lost Marshal Ferdinand Foch, supreme commander of the allied armies; Georges Clemenceau, the "Tiger," premier during the later years of the war, and General Sarrail, the defender of Verdun. Among the Germans who passed were Field Marshal Liman von Sanders, commander of the German forces in Turkey, and Dr. Gustav Stresemann, the eminent statesman who was German foreign minister at the time of his death. Myron T. Herrick, beloved American ambassador to France during the great conflict and at the time of his demise, passed away in March. Three United States senators, Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, L. D. Tyson of Tennessee and F. E. Warren of Wyoming, and James W. Good, secretary of war, were among America's noted dead.

Other notables who died in 1929 were:

In February: Maria Christina, queen mother of Spain; Edwin Denby, former secretary of the navy; Lily Langtry, Lady de Bathe; Melville E. Stone, journalist; Vice Admiral Sir Francis Bridgeman of England; Frank Keenan, actor; Mrs. Ogden Goelet of New York; Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, pulpit orator; Harvey O'Higgins, author and playwright.

In March: Harrison M. Wild, musician; Thomas Taggart, Indian Democratic leader; Moses Clapp, former senator from Minnesota; D. D. Buick, automobile pioneer; Allen B. Pond, architect; Samuel Rea, former president of the Pennsylvania railway; Ex-Gov. W. R. Stubbs of Kansas; Brander Matthews, author.

In April: E. Lester Jones, director of United States coast and geodetic survey; Count Shimpei Goto, Japanese statesman; J. W. Bailey, former senator from Texas; Flora Annie Steel, English novelist; Lord Revelstoke, British banker; Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the ex-kaiser; E. F. Carry, president of the Pullman company.

In May: Edward Payson Weston, famous pedestrian; Earl of Rosebery, English statesman; Garrett P. Serviss, writer on science; Wallace Treat, American diplomat; Maj. Harry A. Smith, U. S. A.; W. B. Thomas, Boston capitalist.

In June: Admiral Sir Cecil Burney of British navy; Bliss Carmen, poet; Count Julius Andrassy, Hungarian statesman; Charles F. Brush, inventor of the arc light; Gen. Bramwell Booth, former head of the Salvation Army; Don Bouclcault, actor; Duarte Felix, Brazilian journalist.

In July: Dutsin Farnum, stage and screen actor; Maj. Gen. Eli K. Cole, marine corps; Rear Admiral E. W. Eberle, U. S. N.; Mrs. Katherine Tingley, Theosophist leader; Robert Henri, American artist; Mrs. Lillian Bell, author; Henry B. Fuller, novelist; Judge N. J. Sinnott of United States Court of Claims.

In August: Archbishop J. J. Keane of Dubuque; Emile Berliner, phonograph inventor; H. C. Witwer, author; Chaucey Keep, Chicago capitalist; Cyril Keightley, English actor; Sir Edwin Ray Lankester, British savant; Rear Admiral A. P. Niblack, U. S. N.; Dr. J. W. Jenks, president of Alexander Hamilton institute.

In September: W. E. Dever, former mayor of Chicago; Owen T. Edgar, last of the Mexican war veterans; Congressman O. J. Kvale of Minnesota; Jesse Lynch Williams, author; Cardinal Dubois, archbishop of Paris; Miller Huggins, manager of New York Yankees; U. S. Grant, son of the late President Grant; Baron Tanaka, Japanese statesman.

In October: E. A. Bourdelle, French sculptor; Dr. Gustav Stresemann, German foreign minister; Bishop J. G. Murray, head of Protestant Episcopal church; Jeanne Eagels, actress; W. J. Connors, Buffalo capitalist; Bishop Edmund M. Dunee of Peoria; Mrs. Lemira Goodhue, mother of Mrs. Calvin Coolidge; Rev. E. S. Shumaker, Indiana Anti-Saloon league chief; Rev. John Roach Stratton of New York, noted fundamentalist; Sir Graham Balfour, British author.

In November: W. G. Lee, former president of Railway Trainmen; Prince Max of Baden, last imperial chancellor of Germany; T. P. O'Connor, "father" of the house of commons; John Cort, theatrical producer; Rear Admiral Henry W. Lyon; Daniel F. Appel, president New England Life Insurance company; Raymond Hitchcock, actor; Father Tondorf of Georgetown university, earthquake expert.

In December: Prof. E. M. Shaw of University of Iowa; Robert Reid, American mural artist; Congressman W. W. Griest of Pennsylvania; Dr. J. W. Stryker, former president of Hamilton college; Col. Charles Goodnight, noted Texas pioneer; Brig. Gen. D. A. Aultman, U. S. A.

FARM POULTRY

EGG PRODUCTION CUT BY SKIMPING

Fresh Water Must Be Furnished in Clean Vessels.

If Biddy is well-bred and properly managed, she will produce for her owner 144 eggs a year. But to lay those 12 dozen eggs weighing 18 pounds requires from 70 to 90 pounds of feed.

"Skimping on feed simply means that egg production is being cut down," says G. T. Klein, extension poultryman, Kansas State Agricultural college. "Out of every five pounds of feed a hen eats while in good laying condition, four pounds are used to maintain her body and one pound is turned into eggs."

Another item in egg production must be kept in mind—eggs cannot be produced unless the feed contains the materials from which eggs are made, cautions the poultry specialist. By way of strengthening this point, he says that an egg, exclusive of the shell, is made up of 74 per cent water; 15 per cent protein; 10 per cent fat, and 1 per cent mineral.

Water for the egg must be furnished by means of plenty of fresh water in clean drinking equipment.

Protein is manufactured from bugs, worms, insects, milk, meat scraps, and alfalfa.

Fat is made from grain and starchy feed.

Lime, found chiefly in the shell, comes from oyster shell or limestone.

In stressing the need for mash, Klein assures poultry raisers that if home-grown grains are used a ration composed of 100 pounds each of corn, wheat, and oats with 75 pounds of meat scraps added may be mixed for approximately $2.00.

High Ceilings Cause of Low Winter Production

Poultry experts at the Minnesota Agricultural college have found that high ceilings and much unused space above the hens are among the most common causes of low winter egg production. Hen houses are warmed with heat produced by the hens, and if too much unused space must be warmed, it uses up hen energy which otherwise might be used in producing eggs. This trouble is most easily remedied by building a straw loft in the hen house at a height of about six feet above the floor.

Besides making the house easier to heat, the straw loft absorbs moisture and helps to solve the ventilation problem. Simply nail boards or poles at the right height and cover them with at least two feet of straw. Burlapped or slatted windows should be left in each gable near the peak to carry off the moist air, or regular ventilating heads can be installed on top if desired. Plenty of fresh air will usually enter through cracks, around windows and doors, and around the outer edges of the straw loft.

Poultry Notes

Clean ground is the most important item in raising chicks successfully.

Mate the flocks three weeks before hatching eggs are desired to insure a high per cent of fertility.

Keep the water containers in the poultry house above the floor to prevent contamination from litter.

Serious cases of feather plucking have been traced to lice infestation, and an examination of one or two birds will provide information on this point. Where such a state exists the remedy is obvious.

Houses located and built to promote sanitation, provide comfortable quarters with fresh air and to admit direct sunlight (unfiltered through ordinary glass) add materially to the content of the owner.

It is quite probable that the pullets will lay enough more eggs when kept by themselves to compensate for the few less eggs the hens will lay if allowed to range in winter.

Flock owners who trapnest some of their layers will want to make sure that the birds get credit for every egg that is laid.

Anyone with experience knows that where pullets and hens are housed together the pullets fail to develop as well as when kept by themselves.

Where they are to be sold as green ducks at ten to twelve weeks, the young ducks are usually not allowed to range but are fed heavily from the first.

Free range on ground that is clean and free from disease producing organism is much better for hens than confinement in houses.

If the poultry house is in good condition, put the pullets in in September. If it is dirty and full of mites leave them out.

"Lucky Strike" Is Champion Steer

Miss Jennie Brown of Rose Hill, Iowa, with "Lucky Strike," the Aberdeen Angus steer awarded the grand championship at the National Live Stock exposition held at the Union stock yards, Chicago, Ill. The steer was raised by Miss Brown's brother, Elliot Brown, and had previously won honors at Kansas City and Omaha.

Improvement of Pastures Begun

Forage Specialists Start Work in Many Areas in East and South.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The task of reviving old, worn-out pastures in the East and replacing the native grasses with improved varieties of the South is a job forage specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture have undertaken as a part of an extensive program of pasture improvement. Results already obtained show that application of fertilizer, reseeding, and getting rid of weeds are the first steps in reclaiming run-down pastures.

Start Experiments.

During the past year co-operative pasture experiments have been started in Pennsylvania, Michigan and Georgia. Similar work will be started in Louisiana and Mississippi next spring. Pasture experiments in Florida have been under way for the last few years. Other states are anxious to co-operate with the department as soon as arrangements can be made to begin the work.

In these experiments various grasses are grazed under similar conditions and their value compared. Then the same grasses are grazed under different conditions to determine which system of grazing is best. In many cases grasses and legumes new to the region are added and their growth is carefully measured in terms of gains in the animals pastured. Numerous tests designed to ascertain the kind and amount of fertilizer to use are included in the experiments.

Loss During Winter.

Records from New York show that cows on pasture during the summer months returned a profit of 24 cents a day on the milk sold. During the winter, because of the high cost of feed, there was an actual loss of four cents a day. This is due in large measure to the small labor cost of maintaining pastures. Results in Pennsylvania show that the labor cost of producing one ton of digestible nutrients in a hay-grain rotation is 20 times as much as the labor cost for the same amount of feed in the form of good pasture. Experiments in Florida have shown a net return of $7.82 per acre from improved pastures grazed by beef steers.

Harm Sheep's Wool

If the sheep lot happens to be adjacent to a field of fall plowing, the winter and early spring winds are apt to blow considerable dirt into the sheep's fleeces. Dust and sand storms do the same. If there is sufficient dirt in the wool to darken the fleece, this wool is classed as dark, or as semi-bright if the dirt occurs in smaller amounts. Semi-bright wool is discounted from 6 to 7 cents per pound, and dark wool is even less valuable.

Dehorning Favored

Experience has proved the great advantage from every standpoint of dehorning commercial cattle. A great benefit would accrue to the live stock industry if all commercial cattle were dehorned. Every effort should be made to attain this object, and all institutions and organizations interested in the live stock industry should encourage the practice of dehorning all horned commercial cattle between March 5 and April 15.

Antiseptic Treated Seed Best Insurance

Don't Risk Loss From Black Rot or Black Leg.

Cabbage, cauliflower and Brussels sprout seed should have antiseptic treatment unless the grower is sure that the seed comes from a perfectly healthy crop, says the New York State College of Agriculture.

Black rot and black leg, two of the most serious cabbage diseases, are carried with the seed.

The treatments are simple, inexpensive and take little time. To prevent black rot, dissolve one tablet of corrosive sublimate in a pint of water or one ounce of the poison in seven and one-half gallons. Tie the seed loosely in cheesecloth and place in the solution for from 20 to 30 minutes. Stir the bundles until all the air is removed from the cloth to make sure the seed get wet. Remove the seed, rinse it in clean water and dry.

If black leg is known to be present, treat the seed with hot water, if it is not too old or is not otherwise weakened so that the germination might be destroyed by the treatment. A little of the seed should be treated first and then tested to see if it will germinate. If the most of the seed sprouts, tie the rest loosely in small cheesecloth bags and place in water kept at a constant temperature of 122 degrees Fahrenheit for 20 or 25 minutes. Then remove the seed quickly, and plunge it into cold water until it is cooled. It may then be dried or, if preferred, it may be planted while still slightly wet.

Agricultural Notes

Black walnut, white oak, black oak and ash are best to leave.

Let all young trees grow to a foot or so in height; then cut out undesirable ones.

Ordinarily one ton of burnt lime is used to lime an acre and this amount gives about the same results as two tons of ground limestone.

Slaked lime is very disagreeable to apply through a grain drill and only a few hundred pounds per acre can be applied at one trip over the land.

The agricultural marketing act, creating the federal farm board, stresses the importance of co-operative marketing of farm products as never before.

In picking a ram for breeding purposes, remember that half of the flock next year will carry his blood lines. Choose for improvement instead of cheapness.

Hogs should always be permitted to follow baby beeves to utilize any grain which may be wasted by them, also the undigested grain found in the droppings.

When selecting a boar, pick one that has plenty of size for age and shows strong constitution and ruggedness. A strong back, deep smooth sides, and straight legs are important.

Putting the farm horses into the hard spring grind without preparation is an inadvisable practice. Good care and proper feed are essential in conditioning them for the season's work.

LIVE STOCK

NEED FOR 1,000,000 COLTS EACH YEAR

Animals Wanted to Replace and Maintain Work Stock.

Even on the farm, his last stronghold, the horse is now giving way to the automobile and tractor at the rate of 500,000 a year, reports C. D. Lowe, Department of Agriculture statistician, writing in the Farm Journal. Where there were 21,555,000 farm horses in America in 1918 there are barely more than 14,000,000 today.

Of course, an abnormal increase in horse and mule breeding marked the war year, when the animals were shipped overseas by the million, but the years since have seen a distinct falling off even from normal pre-war figures.

"The Department of Agriculture puts the total number of horses on farms in the United States at 14,029,000 head, and mules 5,447,000 head," reports Mr. Lowe. "This is a reduction in horses of approximately 500,000 and in mules of 85,000 in a year.

"Assuming that the average life of a farm-work animal is 15 years, about a million foals annually are required to maintain the work-stock population at its present level. At present it is only on a half-rate replacement basis."

However, the horse has and will hold his place in the city where he has been found more efficient than the motor truck for certain types of heavy hauling in congested traffic, and on the hilly farm, as well as in sport, where he can never be replaced.

Mr. Lowe's Farm Journal figures indicate a trend toward more heavy-duty horses and the selective breeding of riding and racing types. The draft breed stallions now being licensed, he points out, outnumber the lighter type stallions by approximately 12 to 1.

Live Stock Does Best on Fresh, Warm Water

Good feeders have long recognized the value of liberal quantities of water to all classes of live stock. Hogs "do better" and are more thrifty, and cows give more milk when they drink freely. One justification of the old slopping method of feeding hogs was the fact that it encouraged them to drink great amounts of water.

Experiment station tests and farm experience have established beyond question the value of warm water for stock during winter weather. In one test with fall pigs, the use of automatically heated waterers saved $1 per pig in feeding costs. A cow producing 5 gallons of milk a day will drink about 20 gallons of water. If she is compelled to drink that amount of ice water, much of her energy is required to heat it to body temperature, and her production suffers.

Tank heaters and automatic waterers help solve the problem of warm water in winter. Some of the automatic waterers can be used to heat water in cold weather and to keep it cool in summer.

Cottonseed or Linseed Oil Meal for Fattening

A recent test was made at the Illinois experiment station to see if cottonseed meal could replace the linseed meal in the drylot supplement of two parts of tankage, one part of linseed meal, and one part of alfalfa meal. Two lots of 20 63-pound pigs were fed for 112 days in drylot on shelled corn with the two supplements, and each lot had access to a mineral mixture. The gains in both lots were practically identical. More of the cottonseed meal supplement was eaten, but less corn was consumed than when linseed meal was used. Somewhat less feed was required for 100 pounds of gain when cottonseed meal was used. No harmful effects were noted from feeding cottonseed meal, but it was considered that pigs fed cottonseed meal lacked somewhat in luster of coat and finish at the end of the experiment as compared with the linseed meal group.

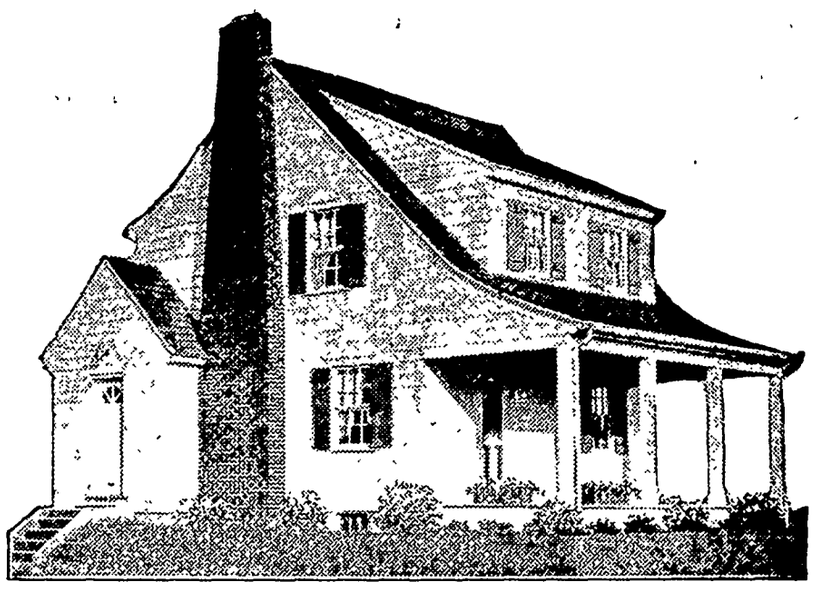
With Corn Plentiful Fattening Ration Easy

Where corn is plentiful this year the fattening ration is simple, as corn is the best as well as the most commonly used fat producer. It is usually one of the most economical feeds for hogs and should comprise the greater portion of the ration. Corn alone is not a complete ration. It should be balanced with about three to five pounds of tankage for each 100 pounds of corn for fattening. It does not pay to soak, grind, or cook corn for fattening hogs.

Legume and Grain Needed

Young stock cannot make normal growth during the winter season on cornstalks, silage and prairie hay. Such feeds furnish enough heat to maintain the body temperature but do not provide the nutrients necessary for building bone and tissue. Legume hays such as clover and alfalfa should be furnished in addition to the poorer grade roughages. For the best possible growth it is necessary to feed some grain to young stock during the winter.

Real "Down-East" Colonial Home Suggests Comfort and Hospitality

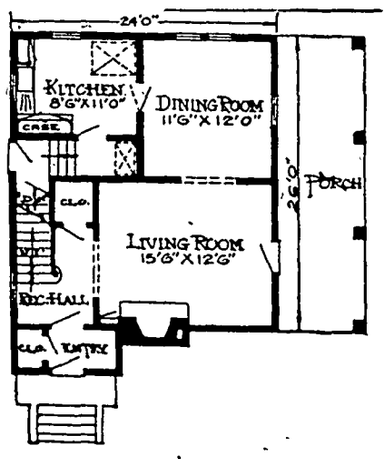


A compact home of six rooms and bath. The exterior is broken up neatly with the gable over the entrance which tends to soften the roof lines. Study the floor plan and see how convenient the rooms are laid out. Here is a genuine home feeling.

By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

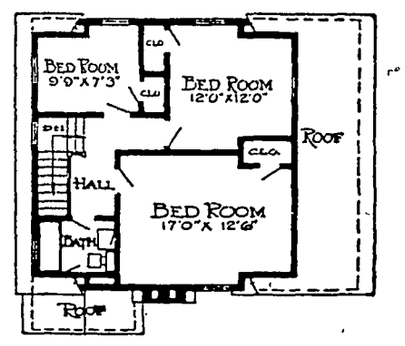
Those who have traveled through Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey will recognize at once that the colonial type home shown in the accompanying illustration is patterned after the homes that were built in those states a hundred or more years ago. The design of this home is almost an exact copy of those built by the second or third generations of the settlers of those states. While it is not the type of colonial home that is found in New England, it is suggestive of them in that it has the shuttered windows and the clapboard siding.



First Floor Plan.

This is a compact home design, six rooms and bath. The exterior is broken up neatly with a gable over the entrance, the wide dormer and the broken lines of the pitched roof which extend out to form the porch roof. An outside fireplace chimney of brick is also a distinctive feature.

The entrance at the corner leads into a reception hall. Off this reception hall is the living room 12 feet 6 inches by 15 feet 6 inches. At the rear through a cased opening is the dining room 11 feet 6 inches by 12 feet, and adjoining it is the kitchen 8 feet 6 by 11 feet.



Second Floor Plan.

Stairs to the second floor run out of the reception hall and end in a side hall upstairs. Here are three bedrooms, each a corner room. The one at the front corresponds with the living room in size, while the one at the back corresponds with the dining room. The third bedroom is small and is over the kitchen. At the front and at the end of the upstairs hall is the bathroom.

This house is 24 feet by 26 feet, exclusive of the porch projection. It is of standard frame construction set on a concrete foundation with the basement the same size as the house.

This is a distinctly American home and will suit the ideas of a great many prospective home builders. The rooms are commodious and the exterior of the house is attractive. The wide deep porch is inviting and when this house is set on a site which permits of plantings of trees and shrubs, it will make a most attractive home.

Cheerfulness in Home Aided by Use of Paint

A home is not a home if it belongs to the past generation. And yet how many houses of today bespeak the mid-Victorian era! True relics of the past they are, with their somber walls, their cluttered-up rooms and their antiquated furnishings. What young people care to entertain in such a house or even to spend their evenings at home? For them it simply eliminates home life. The older people, too, while they may cling tenaciously to the objects which seem endeared to them likewise suffer. Not only because they find no companionship or home life with their children, but quite unawares they are affected by the dark and gloomy atmosphere which is necessarily depressing. There is nothing cheerful or even restful about this once fashionable mode of decorating a house.

A modern house demands modern decoration. A fortunate aspect, however, is that even the far removed interior of the mid-Victorian era can quite easily be brought up to date. The most important item, by far, in effecting the transformation is color. For color has psychological as well as actual value.

The first and perhaps the most important thing to be renovated is the walls. Their large expanse of unattractive designs in dull tans and browns or even red or dark green must be obliterated. Painted walls of restful, cheerful hues are the decree of beauty, fashion and economy. In choosing your color scheme select a warm color, such as yellow, or rose or cream, where sunlight is lacking and a cool color, such as blue or gray, where you need no warmth of tone. Light, soft shades are now the vogue. Do not be afraid to use them because of the eternal showing-the-dirt problem, for painted walls are easily and satisfactorily washed. Thus you can have shell pink for your bedroom and apple green for the sun parlor, intensely practical without having that practical look.

The woodwork, too, will, of course, want to be painted in keeping with the new walls. A darker tone of the same color is most attractive, or a harmonizing or blending color may be used. Your interior will then be ready for its transformed furnishings.

There are few pieces, even mid-Victorian, which cannot successfully be transformed with the paint brush or hidden beneath gay slips of chintz. The latter is the best solution for the heavy chairs and sofas with obtrusive lines and carvings. Other pieces may often be improved by cutting down the legs, for very low furniture is best suited to modern decoration. Carvings and extraneous additions, such as arms supporting the mirror over a dresser or knobs on brass beds, may be removed, the holes filled with crack filler and the entire surface hidden beneath the all-concealing power of paint. Thus a cumbrous lot of antiquated pieces can be converted into a charming modern set. Choose gay colors for your furniture. The once bizarre combinations such as green trimmed with pale yellow, yellow with blue, or rose with cream are now the rule. Give the house the life and cheer which is demanded by the modern scheme of things.

If your interior is all out of harmony with life of today—which it must be if it is either somber or heavy—do not permit this injustice to your family or to yourself. Brighten things up by painting your walls some soft, gay color and bringing your furniture up to date. You will then know what it is to enjoy your home.

Best Footing Design Extends Six Inches

The principle of footing design is to make them proportional to the load supported and the bearing power of the soil. In residences the load is rarely great enough to stress the soil heavily, so the footing is made only broad enough to stabilize the wall. It It is good practice to extend this six inches on each side of wall, making it ten inches in depth of good concrete. Under special circumstances different measures will be necessary.

Removing Screens

Little gummed stickers, purchased at the "5 and 10," make excellent labels to mark screens when they are removed. With the markings the task of fitting them again in the spring is made much easier.

Short Stair Carpet

Don't start a stair carpet and stop it before the end of the stairs. In the dark one may feel for it on the last few treads and stumble for lack of it.

their wish to affiliate with the Cerro Gordo organization in any way possible. These towns were given all help possible with the funds and material at the command of the Cerro Gordo County Council. Eventually, by 1927, these affiliated towns were demanding so much attention and had become so numerous as to greatly affect the successful operation of the Cerro Gordo County Council, as much, due to the fact that its officers were finding themselves more than overloaded.

At that time, the extension program of the National Boy Scout Organization was going into effect and it was suggested that the nine counties named above be organized into a First Class Council, dissolving the Cerro Gordo County Organization.

In May, 1928, the North Iowa Council was set up with headquarters at Mason City and fourteen towns carried the financila burden of the Area outside of Mason City. This worked very successfully for the balance of 1928 and 1929. So successful was the plan that it is the goal of the Area Executive Board to extend Direct Executive Service to every town in the Area by January 1, 1930.

At the present time there are 1,1316 Scouts and approximately 2,500 volunteer adult leaders carrying the Scouting Program in the North Iowa Council, an average of two men to a boy.

This work is being done under the direction of Dr. B. Raymond Weston, President; Jay Decker and F. C. Lovell, Vice Presidents; W. P. Butler, Court of Honor Chairman; Ralph Lloyd Jones, Finance Committee Chairman; W. Earl Hall, Education, Publicity and Civic Service Dr. J. C. Powers, Hampton, Troop Organization; F. T. Adding New Beauty To Outstanding Performance

New Ford Bodies, In Beautiful New Colors, Will Be On Display In Klemme

Saturday, January 4th

The Model A Ford was a good car when it was first introduced. It has constantly been made a better car. As soon as improvements are found and tested they are passed on to the public. That work goes steadily on.

Now comes the time when another forward step can be taken and this policy of constant improvement given still further expression. Saturday, the NEW FORD will be on display in Klemme.

The introduction of these new Ford bodies is of interest to every motorist. In flowing grace of line and contour—in the carefully plannd harmony of every detail of design— they set a new high standard for a low-priced car.

A new, fresh beauty has thus been placed within the means of every one.

All of these new Frod bodies are finished in a variety of beautiful colors, with bright Rustless Steel head lamps, radiator shell, hub caps, tail lamp and cowl finish strip. All have roomy interiors. All bring you the safety, comfort, power, speed, acceleration, ease of control, economy and long-lived reliability that have given the Model A Ford such a high place in the regard of millions of motorists.

Come into our garage Saturday and see these new Ford bodies. You will be particularly interested in the manner in which new beauty has been added to outstanding performance. In appearance, as in mechanical construction, craftsmanship has been put into mass production. Come in and see this new Car Saturday, January 4th.

Honoring Franklin at the Hall of Fame

Franklin at 17 Crossing New Jersey

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, whose birthday we celebrate on January 17, has been called many things by the many men who have written of him. One biographer has called him "The First Civilized American," and another "The Apostle of Modern Times." He has been characterized as "the most versatile American," and the phrase, "the many-sided Franklin," has become a commonplace. Recently there has appeared a new biography of Franklin, the title of which is at once an apt characterization and a tribute. It is called "The Amazing Benjamin Franklin."

The book itself is unique. Published under the auspices of the Philadelphia chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution by the Frederick A. Stokes company of New York, it is especially designed and printed by the Franklin Printing company, founded by Franklin himself in 1728. Unlike all other Franklin biographies, it is not the story of this great American as told and interpreted by one man. But it is composed of the accounts of the many roles played by Franklin, as told by many men, no less than forty in number, each eminent in his field and speaking as the representative of some important organization.

These accounts, compiled and edited by J. Henry Smythe, Jr. of New York, founder nationally of the celebration of Franklin Day and an authority on Franklin, lead off with a special message by President Hoover who says "Benjamin Franklin's services to his country were not alone in the great foundations of the Republic, but in his original mind and his homely wisdom which have stimulated and fertilized the thought of every succeeding generation in our country." Then, under three separate classifications, "Franklin, the Public Man," "Franklin, the Printer," and "Franklin, the Versatile," the outstanding men of today pay their tributes to the genius of "Poor Richard."

Charles E. Hughes, former secretary of state, calls him "the greatest diplomat of all time"; Alexander Millerand, ex-president of France, tells how he cemented the friendship of France and America; Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador at Washington, tells of "Franklin, the Man of Character"; Harry S. New, former postmaster general, calls him the "Father of the United States Postal Service"; Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy, tells of his connection with that branch of the service, and Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott tells some little-known facts about "Franklin, the Soldier." Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, gives him the title of "The Father of Thrift in America"; William M. Jardine, secretary of agriculture, tells of his contribution to farming; James J. Davis, secretary of labor, discusses Franklin as "the Laboring Man and the Business Man," and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declares that he is "Labor's Patron Saint."

Now these are only a part of the tributes to him as a public man by public men. Franklin was a printer, but he was more than a printer when it comes to his connection with the "art preservative of all arts." So A. E. Giegengack, president of the International Association of Printing House Craftsmen, pays tribute to him as a craftsman; Alfred Stephen Bryan of the International Advertising association discusses his contribution to that modern miracle; Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, but before and after that career, an editor, hails Franklin as the first great American editor; Charles H. Sykes, one of the leading cartoonists of the country, tells us that Franklin was "America's first cartoonist," and Charles H. Grandgent of the Simplified Spelling board, informs us that he was the "first American spelling reformer." Hamlin Garland of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, tells of Franklin as author; Cornelia S. Adair,, president of the National Education association, bestows upon him the title of "Prophet of American Education," and Asa Don Dickinson, librarian at the University of Pennsylvania, calls him the "Friend and Founder of Libraries."

All of which would seem to be enough to indicate that never before or since the "days of Poor Richard," has there been a man of such wide and varied interests. But in reality this is only the beginning. For there is yet "Franklin, the Versatile," to consider. Beginning with Michael I. Pupin, who tells of Franklin as the natural philosopher, leading authorities in various fields reveal him as a scientist, meteorologist, the inventor of bifocal lenses, an economist, an athlete, a Mason, a friend of the negro, and a fire insurance pioneer. And to his titles may be added these "Patron Saint of the Music Industries," "Father of Daylight Saving" and "America's First Great Humorist."

No wonder there could be no other title for such a book than "The Amazing Benjamin Franklin!"

Interesting as are all the tributes in the book, there is one chapter in it which, better than any other, leaves with the reader the feeling that there never before was, and probably never again can be, such a man as Benjamin Franklin. With the "text" from the Iliad of "Strange that Ulysses does a thousand things so well," Franklin's outstanding achievements are listed one by one. And the effect of this simple, concise record is all but overwhelming. Somewhat abridged, it reads as follows:

1. Franklin discovered that lightning is electricity . . . and proved it first by observation and logic, and second by actual test with his kite.

2. He invented the lightning rod which Dr. Charles Steinmetz said is still the best and most reliable protection we have against lightning.

3. He was the first to discover that a current of electricity has a magnetic effect, i. e. that it can magnetize a piece of steel. This is the fundamental principle on which the telegraph, the telephone and the electric motor are based.

4. He gave the world the best theory of electricity . . . modern science has finally adopted his early conclusions. These were that electricity consists of very minute particles, so small that they can pass between the atoms of ordinary matter. . . . They are now called electrons. It is by means of these that we send wireless telegraph and telephone messages and are able to broadcast concerts and speeches so satisfactorily.

5. He was the first man to discharge an explosive, located at a distance, by an electric current sent over a wire.

6. He invented the Franklin stove, the first successful wood-burning stove used in this country.

7. He invented the invaluable contrivance by which a fire consumes its own smoke, and made the first smoke-consuming stove or furnace.

8. He delivered mankind from the nuisance, once universal, of smoky chimneys. His pamphlet "Cause and Cure of Smoky Chimneys," revealed the correct principles of chimney construction and rid the world of smoky chimneys and fireplaces.

9. He caused Philadelphia to be paved; he invented a better type of street lamp for lighting the city; and he organized the first street cleaning. More than this, he reorganized the antiquated city watch and caused the city to be efficiently policed, and he established the first fire engine company to protect the city from fire. He established there the first academy, the first library and the first hospital.

10. He helped establish the first chartered fire insurance company in America.

11. He invented a copying press for taking copies of letters or other writing.

12. He invented double spectacles—near and farsight glasses—making a pair for his own use.

13. He is credited with the invention of a laundry mangle. In his "Diary," Washington records seeing a demonstration of this machine.

14. He invented the Harmonica, or Armonica as he called it, which was a musical instrument consisting of graduated glass bowls, pierced by a spindle, and revolved by a foot treadle. The music was produced by holding one's finger against the moistened glass.

15. He was one of the first American song-writers. He wrote among other songs, a "Sailor Song," "The Mother Country," "My Plain Country Joan," and "Fair Venus Calls." . . . He was a leader in the musical world of his time, wrote on musical harmony, and played on several musical instruments including the harp, guitar, violin and the Harmonica or glassychord which he invented.

16. Among his many inventions should be included a three-wheel clock, a library chair that could be converted into a stepladder, an artificial arm for taking books down from high shelves in a library, a one-arm chair that could be used like a desk or table for writing, the pulse glass and an electric jack for turning a roast of meat over the fire. It was his fixed policy to give his inventions to the world, and not to secure patents on them or to make any profit out of them.

17. Although not the discoverer, he was the first to demonstrate the production of cold by evaporation, a fact up to that time unknown to science.

18. When there were no bathtubs in American homes, and the general custom was to bathe but seldom, he was an advocate of frequent bathing, and took a hot bath twice a week. He also advocated and practiced air-bathing.

19. He was the originator of the modern science of the art of ventilation. He was the first to discover the poisonous quality which repeated respirations impart to the air in a room. He was the first to call attention to the folly of excluding fresh air from hospitals and sick rooms. When all the world slept with bedroom windows tightly shut, he was the only effective preacher of the gospel of pure air and ventilation.

20. He made tests of various colored cloths on snow which showed that black and dark colors attract the heat of the sun and that white does not attract the heat. He made recommendations regarding white clothes for the tropics and white cloth helmets for the troops in India which were adopted many years later by the British.

21. He pointed out the advantage, later adopted universally, of building ships with water-tight compartments, taking the hint from the Chinese.

22. He was the first to discover that the temperature of the Gulf Stream is higher than that of the surrounding water, and the first to have the Gulf Stream charted.

23. He was the first to demonstrate that oil on the water will still the waves.

24. He was the first to discover that northwest storms come out of the southwest, in other words, that storms travel in an opposite direction to the winds.

25. His investigations concerning the weather resulted in the establishment of our United States weather bureau of which he is today acknowledged to be the father.

26. He was perhaps the best swimmer in the American colonies, taught swimming and his swimming feats when he went to England were the talk of that nation.

27. With Lord Despencer, he revised the Prayer Book of the Church of England. This was not adopted in England but was later adopted in part in America. His purpose was . . . "To extinguish theology, which he thought divided and distracted mankind to no purpose, and to restore religion, which he believed tended to exalt, refine, unite, assure, and calm the anxious sons of men.

28. He conceived and organized the Junto, the forerunner of all Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and Civitan clubs of today. The Junto developed into the American Philosophical society, America's first organization of scientists, in which he took great interest and pride and of which he is justly acknowledged to be the founder.

29. He conceived the idea and established in Philadelphia the first successful circulating library, the mother of all our free circulating libraries of today.

30. He founded the University of Pennsylvania.

31. He originated the elective system of college studies and also the so-called "group" system, adopted later by many of America's leading universities. He was the first writer on education to recommend the teaching of modern languages such as French and German, in preference to the exclusive study of Latin and Greek. He was the first American educator to appreciate the importance of advanced teaching of history, political economy, and the science of government, also of technical training in agriculture and in the arts and sciences. He was likewise the first to prescribe athletics as an adjunct to college education.

32. Franklin, and not Thomas Jefferson, should be credited with having started the study of vertebrate paleontology in America, for he wrote a letter to George Croghan discussing the so-called elephant's tusks and grinders that had been found near the Ohio river. . . . Fifty-eight years later Cuvier gave the name of mastodon to the animal whose bones had attracted Franklin's interest and study.

33. He introduced the following useful plants or grains into America: Scotch kale, the kohlrabi, Chinese rhubarb and Swiss barley. He promoted silk culture in Pennsylvania. He introduced the yellow willow into America for basket making. He taught the farmers of Pennsylvania to plaster their land. He introduced broom corn into Pennsylvania from Virginia. . . . He was probably the first American to direct attention in a published writing to the value of education in agricultural science; and probably the first also to suggest the insurance of crops against storms, plant diseases and insect pests.

34. He was the first American economist. He was the first president of the Society for Political Inquiries of Philadelphia, the first society in the United States interested in promoting the study of political economy.

35. He started the first thrift campaign. . . . His maxims of "Poor Richard" did more to encourage thrift and industry in the Colonies than any other one thing and they were circulated all over the world. . . . They have been more often translated and printed than any other work of an American author.

36. He was the first to propose daylight saving.

37. He devised a reformed alphabet which was based on simplified or phonetic spelling.

38. He devised the first scheme for uniting the Colonies, more than 20 years before the Revolution, and his plan of confederation was finally adopted in all its essential features and binds our Union together today. If this plan had been carried out when Franklin proposed it, he believed it would have prevented the Revolution and would have secured our independence without a single battle.

39. He organized our postal service and was our first postmaster general.

40. More than any other man, he was instrumental in securing the repeal of the Stamp Act.

41. Thomas Paine who wrote the propaganda that inflamed the colonies and kept the Revolution alive during its darkest hours was induced to come to American through the advice and encouragement of Franklin.

42. If he did not originally suggest the Continental congress, he was one of the very first to approve it. . . . He prepared the first plan of confederation of the Colonies to be presented to that body and suggested a name. "The United Colonies of America."

43. He helped Jefferson write the Declaration of Independence.

44. He was our greatest diplomat and secured for us the aid of France in the Revolution and millions in money without which our independence at that time could not have been established.

45. He edited the best newspaper and the most successful newspaper in the Colonies. He was the first to attempt to illustrate the news in an American newspaper, and also the first to publish questions and answers in a newspaper. He is said to have drawn the first newspaper cartoon, the picture of a snake cut in sections to represent the Colonies before the Revolution.

46. He was instrumental in establishing eighteen paper mills in the Colonies.

47. He was "the first to turn to great account the engine of advertising, now an indispensable element in modern business."

48. He established in 1732 the Philadelphia Zeitung, the first American newspaper to be printed in a foreign language.

49. He made a comfortable fortune in the printing business in 20 years. He retired from active business at forty-two years of age so as to be able to devote the remainder of his life to scientific study and "to doing good."

50. In the French and Indian war, after Braddock's defeat, he was called upon to help save the Province of Pennsylvania from the attacks of Indians. . . . He organized and commanded a regiment of 560 men . . . marched up the Lehigh Valley to Gnadenhutten and built three forts in that vicinity. At the opening of the Revolution he planned the defenses of the Delaware, built forts and batteries, and the famous chevaux-de-frise which delayed the British fleet two months in its advance up the river.

51. Of all the patriots, Franklin was the only one to sign all five of the great state papers—the Declaration of Independence, the Treaty of Amity and Commerce with France, the Treaty of Alliance with France, the Treaty of Peace with England and the Constitution of the United States.

52. He is "easily the first among the giant race of pamphleteers and essayists most of whom went before, but a few of whom came immediately after the war for independence."

53. He was a master propagandist—America's first. He constantly issued pamphlets, or wrote newspaper articles, to promote the interests of his city, of his country, or the good of mankind. His methods were always the same in promoting a cause: To develop informed public opinion on the question he first wrote something for publication that would attract public attention.

54. He was the originator of the idea of a League of Nations. He suggested "a united party of virtue, an international organization . . . which would consider world matters from the viewpoint of all nations. He was the first advocate in the United States of a policy . . . of legal condemnation and punishment of a nation which commits aggressive warfare."

55. His last great work for his country was in the Constitutional convention. . . . Although eighty-one years of age and part of the time so weak that he had to be carried to and from the convention in a sedan chair, he attended regularly, five hours a day for more than four months. . . . Washington and Franklin worked together and carried the convention through in spite of obstacles and differences of opinions that, but for them would have proved fatal to the establishment of the Constitution at this time. . . . Several times the delegates broke up to return home, but Franklin got them together and persuaded them to continue.

A Few Little Smiles

SO COOL HE FORGOT

A few minutes after an alarm of fire was given in a hotel, one of the guests joined the group that was watching the fire, and chaffed them on their apparent excitement. "There was nothing to be excited about," he said. "I took my time about dressing, lighted a cigarette, didn't like the knot in my necktie, so tied it over again—that's how cool I was."

"Fine," one of his friends remarked, "but why didn't you put on your pants?"

No "Excuse It, Please"

"Yes, lady, getting the wrong number got me here," said prisoner No. 71123.

"Dear, dear!" exclaimed the old lady visitor, "I suppose you used such profane language the telephone company complained."

"No," replied the prisoner; "you see, the officers found I had three wives."

WHEN IT LOOKS DARK to a weak, nervous or ailing woman, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes to her aid. Women in every walk of life today say Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a reliable medicine. It is made from roots and herbs, sold by druggists, in both fluid and tablets.

One woman who used it said: "I had a general breakdown. My nerves were all gone, had no control of them and my back ached as though it would break. I got so thin, weak and rundown I was not able to do anything but after taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for a time I regained my health. It seemed to restore my nerves and built me up in general way."—Mrs. J. H. Harbour, 1412 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa.

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all the sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike the burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Discord Among Senate Drys and Officials Over Law Enforcement.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DISSENSION among the dry leaders of congress and dissatisfaction with President Hoover's law enforcement commission marred the good will toward men that is supposed to characterize the Christmas season. United States District Judge Paul J. McCormick of Los Angeles, member of the commission, who had been sitting on the federal bench in New York, started the fireworks when on his return home he found occasion to make some very caustic remarks concerning the prohibition problem.

"A man's home is his castle," said the jurist, "and the practice of entering it in the course of prohibition enforcement without legal procedure should be abolished."

The national commission, the judge said, already has determined that two major problems require immediate settlement: One is the solution of prohibition enforcement and the other is the removal of "governmental lawlessness" and restoration of constitutional rights to citizens.

"Speaking as an individual," Judge McCormick pronounced fanaticism one of the most serious enemies of prohibition. He said fanatics were to be found in the ranks of both wets and drys.

William J. Harris of Georgia, one of the leading drys in the senate, was moved to immediate action and demanded that the President remove the Los Angeles jurist from the commission.

"Judge McCormick's statement shows that just what I feared was being done is being done," said Senator Harris. "It really is an encouragement to violators of the law and gives Judge McCormick to be such a plea against the prohibition enforcement law that, no matter how honest he may be, he is unfitted to hold office on the commission. Under the commission stops its secret methods and comes out in the open, its usefulness is impaired to such an extent that its report will be given no weight. The prohibition forces of the country will be greatly disappointed if the President does not remove this man who has encouraged anti-prohibitionists as well as violators of the law."

Senator Harris was joined by other senate drys urging that Mr. Hoover ask the commission to make an early report on the liquor question. Senator Glass of Virginia wants to hear from the commission soon, but he does not think Judge McCormick should be removed from that body.

"I do not participate in Senator Harris' view of the matter at all," said Senator Glass. "It is not my idea that the commission was appointed to recommend something that would please any particular group in congress, but was appointed to ascertain the facts, regardless of what conclusion the facts might signify.

"Judge McCormick or any other member of the commission or the commission as a whole has found out what Judge McCormick seems to imply is the business of such individual members of the commission or of the commission as a whole to report the result of his or its investigations without respect to whom it might please or displease. That was the purpose of the investigation and I am not going to join with anybody in asking for the resignation of any member of the commission merely because he may fail to find what I might have wished him to find."

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, another dry leader, expressed the belief that a report from the crime commission would be of little value in securing better dry law enforcement conditions. What is needed, he said, is an improvement in the personnel of enforcement officers.

"The commission report," Borah said, "they will not tell us anything we do not know, either as to the law or as to the facts. We still will be back to the proposition that with the present personnel nothing will be accomplished."

This brought a sharp retort from Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran, who declared that such a "sweeping condemnation" of the prohibition unit "is most unfortunate and bound to have a disheartening effect upon the morale of the service."

"To say that prohibition cannot be enforced with the present personnel," the prohibition director added, "comes perilously near to saying that it cannot be enforced at all."

ONE more killing by prohibition enforcement agents marked Christmas day. Coast Guardsmen at Buffalo fatally shot Eugene F. Downey, Jr., son of a policeman, in a motor boat on the Niagara river. They declared he did not heed their signals to stop, but it was said they found no liquor in Downey's boat. The man was arrested recently in connection with liquor smuggling and was out on bail.

CHRISTMAS joy at the White House was almost ruined by a fire that completely wrecked the interior of the executive offices wing of the mansion. Mr. Hoover helped in the removal of his personal and business papers and then stood in the cold for two hours watching the firemen fighting the flames. The cause of the fire was found to be an overheated fireplace chimney in the office of Secretary Newton.

Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant III, director of public buildings and public parks, estimated the damage to be approximately $50,000. Inspections showed that, although it will be necessary to completely rebuild the structure, there was no irreplaceable damage.

At the time of the conflagration Mrs. Hoover was hostess of a children's party in the White House dining room. While the President and the other men present hurried out, Mrs. Hoover, in order not to frighten the children, had the Marine band strike up a lively air and then presided over the celebration without a hint of what was happening a few hundred feet away. On Christmas day there a happy family party in the White House, followed by a dinner to members of the cabinet and their families.

TERRIFIC gales with rain and cold carried disaster and death to the Atlantic coast of Europe from the Orkney islands to Spain on Wednesday. The worst accident reported was the loss of the Norwegian steamer Aslaug near Vigo, Spain, with its entire crew of 24. Many other steamships were reported in trouble. One went aground near Blankanese, Germany, blocking the River Elbe, and two were driven on the rocks off Porspol, France.

PRESIDENT YRIGOYEN of Argentina narrowly escaped death at the hands of an assassin. Three bullets were fired at his car as he was on his way to his office in Buenos Aires but none of them hit him, though his chief bodyguard was wounded. Police guards in another car opened fire on the assassin, killing him. He was identified as Gualterio Marinelli, a dental mechanic, but his motive was not discovered. The police decided he was not the agent of an organized band, though they have arrested a number of suspected anarchists. President Yrigoyen took the attempt on his life more calmly than anyone else, going on with his work as usual.

SENATOR BORAH, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, and the United States Department of the Interior appealed to Russia for help in searching for Carl Ben Eilson and Earl Borland in the wastes of Siberia, and the Soviet foreign office replied that an airplane had been dispatched to hunt for the two missing American aviators who failed to return to Alaska six weeks ago from a flight to aid an icebound fur ship. They are believed to have been forced down near North cape.

The foreign office announcement said also two other airplanes would be dispatched immediately to aid in the search for the airmen. Semyon Shestakov, national air hero of Soviet Russia since his flight from Moscow to New York, was selected to head the rescue expedition. Three powerful cabin planes and five experienced Canadian aviators were conveyed to Alaska from Seattle on a coast guard cutter to help in the search.

GENERAL RICO, military commander at Nogales, says, in a report to the Mexican government on the recent execution of Gen. Carlos Bouquet, that Bouquet made a signed statement that he had been commissioned by Jose Vasconcelos, defeated candidate for the presidency, who now is in the United States, to recruit revolutionists on the Mexican Pacific coast and that he had gone to Nogales to receive orders, money and munitions from a revolutionary directorate established at Tucson, Ariz.

IRWIN B. LAUGHLIN, our new ambassador to Spain, presented his credentials to King Alfonso on Tuesday, was introduced to the queen and exchanged formal calls with Premier Primo Rivera. He is now engaged in a long series of calls on government officials and the heads of all the other embassies and legations.

The king received the American ambassador in the uniform of a captain general, with red trousers, a blue coat and many decorations. He made a striking martial figure. The simple evening dress of Ambassador Laughlin and his staff was in contrast with the gorgeous uniforms of the Spanish court.

ORTIZ RUBIO, president-elect of Mexico, visited Washington last week and was accorded all the honors due the head of a state during his three days' stay. He made a formal call at the White House, and President and Mrs. Hoover departed from long established precedent by returning the call at the Mexican embassy. On Friday Senor Ortiz Rubio and his wife were entertained at a state dinner at the White House.

ONE of the great disasters of the dying year, if measured by loss of life, was the foundering of the Chinese steamer Lee Cheong, plying between Hongkong and Swabue, in a heavy storm. Two hundred and fifty Chinese passengers perished, as did the members of the crew and 44 Indian guards. Only two men escaped, by clinging to a raft.

WAR in Manchuria between China and Soviet Russia appears to have come to an end. The foreign commissariat in Moscow announced that Simanovsky and Tsai Yun-Shen, plenipotentiaries of the Soviet union and Mukden governments, had signed a protocol at Habarovsk, Siberia, restoring the status quo ante on the Chinese Eastern railway and immediately restoring Soviet consulates and commercial organizations in the Soviet Far East.

It was stated that peace would follow on the frontiers, to be followed by withdrawal of troops of both sides. All prisoners are to be released and the Chinese promised to disarm the White Guard Russians. Full restoration of diplomatic relations will not be brought about until after a conference that will open in Moscow on January 25 for the settlement of all outstanding questions.

GERMAN Nationalists made a dismal failure of their latest attempt to prevent adoption of the Young reparations plan. In a public referendum their bill "against the enslavement of the German people," which would have the Young plan rejected, failed to obtain more than one-fourth of the vote required to give it effect. The reichstag last November defeated a similar measure by an overwhelming majority.

The DAIRY

LARGE COWS ARE MOST ECONOMICAL

Survey Shows Big, Roomy Animals Pay Most Profit.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The small, refined dairy cow may look best, but the big, roomy cow pays most profit to her owner, according to a survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture. In making the study large and small cows within one breed were compared, both pure breds and grades of every age being included.

On an average the largest cows—those weighing 1,500 pounds—exceeded the smallest cows—those weighing 800 pounds—by 98 pounds of butterfat per cow. Their cost of feed was $20 higher, but they returned $43 more per cow in yearly income over cost of feed.

An analysis of figures obtained in the survey shows that as size of cow advanced 100 pounds for each group there was a fairly uniform gain in production of milk and of butterfat, in cost of feed per cow, and in income above feed cost. On the other hand, there was a slight decrease in the butterfat test, but this was not enough to merit special attention.

Though the group figures always favored the large cows, it was found that many individuals among the large cows in each breed were unprofitable producers and that many small cows in each breed were profitable producers. Therefore in selecting dairy cows of any breed it is not wise to select on the basis of size alone. Size, however, is a factor of great importance.

Grain Mixtures for Any Medium Producing Animal

Since there is seldom a deficiency in carbohydrates and fat when the dairy cow has all the roughage that she can eat, a roughly balanced ration may be obtained by balancing the protein of the grain mixture to go with the roughage and disregarding the carbohydrates and fat. For low to medium-producing cows good alfalfa hay and corn meal make up a reasonably good ration. To go with alfalfa hay, some grain mixtures are as follows: Mixture 1.—200 pounds corn, 100 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 100 pounds linseed oil meal. Mixture 2.—100 pounds barley, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 100 pounds linseed oil meal. Mixture 3.—100 pounds barley, 100 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 300 pounds corn oil meal. Mixture 4.—200 pounds corn-and-cob meal, 200 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 100 pounds cottonseed meal.

If prairie hay is used as roughage the ration may be as follows: Mixture 1.—100 pounds corn, 100 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 250 pounds linseed oil meal. Mixture 2.—100 pounds barley, 100 pounds alfalfa meal, 100 pounds corn oil meal, and 200 pounds linseed oil meal.

Underfeeding Will Cut Profits From Any Herd

Underfeeding, or feeding of an incomplete ration, keeps down or wipes out profits in many a dairy herd. One reader goes so far as to say that dairy cows are now better bred than fed; that starved pure breds are no better than starved scrubs. There is still room for improvement along both lines.

The point is, every dairy cow should be fed a complete ration, and as much of it as she will turn into profit. It is the wrong way to feed as little as the cow will get along on, and still show a profit or just break even.

Cow testing records prove that liberal feeding is not an expense, but an investment.

Dairy Hints

Now is the time to plan for a future supply of alfalfa, sweet clover or common red clover.

Dairymen find silage to be the best substitute for the fresh, green grass of early spring.

Many dairymen find that the most satisfactory way to handle silage is to build two silos, one for winter feeding and one for summer.

Dairying without legumes is an uphill proposition for legumes cheapen the cost of production as well as make the rations more effective.

Good winter management of the cow herd will pay big dividends in the spring calf crop.

Soviet Planning Vast Use of Electric Power

An electrified country is the aim of Soviet Russia. The current is to be used in every industrial field of operation. Millions are being appropriated by the government. Every possible kind of fuel—peat, oil waste, anthracite waste, lignite—is to be utilized, says the Providence Journal.

The rivers are being dammed and sidetracked, so that they may spread their power over the industrial regions and at the same time offer better transportation. Canals are to link the improved rivers.

A system of waterways will connect the Baltic sea, the avenue westward to the Atlantic, the Black sea and Soviet Russia's trade routes to the East. The basin of the Volga river, which empties into the Caspian sea, is to have its canal to the Don, and through the Don basin its outlet to the Black sea and the Mediterranean.

Needless Pain!

Some folks take pain for granted.

They let a cold "run its course."

They wait for their headaches to "wear off."

If suffering from neuralgia or from neuritis, they rely on feeling better in the morning.

Meantime, they suffer unnecessary pain. Unnecessary, because there is an antidote. Bayer Aspirin always offers immediate relief from various aches and pains we once had to endure. If pain persists, consult your doctor as to its cause.

SCOUTING IN THE NORTH IA. COUNCIL

A Series Of Articles By W. Earl Hall, Editor Of The Globe-Gazette, Mason City, Ia.

(Special To The Times)

Scouts Take The Oath, Learn The Law And Keep It

The gist or "Big Idea" of all we have said in past articles and will say in those to follow is contained in the things a Boy Scout does. All that he does hinges back into the Scout Oath which he takes and the Law he pledges to obey.

1316 Boys In The North Iowa Council Are Scouts

Every one of them have taken the Scout Oath and pledged themselves to the Scout Law. They have agreed to do their best toward developing into real men. When you have read over the Oath and Law you will be in a much better position to measure the moral effect of such a group of boys in these nine counties of which we are a part. Here it is!

The Scout Oath And Law

As a Scout, the boy willingly accepts as real and vital, the universally accepted principles of life set forth in the Scout Oath and Law.

The Scout Oath

ON MY HONOR I WILL DO MY BEST:

1. To do my duty to God and my Country, and to obey the Scout Law.
2. To help other people at all times.
3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight.

The Scout Law

1. A SCOUT IS TRUSTWORTHY—A Scout's honor is to be trusted. If he were to violate his honor by telling a lie, or by cheating, r by not doing exactly a given task, when trusted on his honor, he may be directed to hand over his Scout badge.
2. A SCOUT IS LOYAL—He is loyal to all to whom loyalty is due, his Scout Leader, his home, and parents and country.
3. A SCOUT IS HELPFUL—He must be prepared at any time to save life, help injured persons, and share the home duties. He must do at least one "Good Turn" to somebody every day.
4. A SCOUT IS FRIENDLY—He is a friend to all and a brother to every other Scout.
5. A SCOUT IS COURTEOUS—He is polite to all, especially to women, children, old people and the weak and helpless. He must not expect pay for being helpful or courteous.
6. A SCOUT IS KIND—He is a friend to animals. He will not kill nor hurt any living creature needlessly, but will strive to save and protect all harmless life.
7. A SCOUT IS OBEDIENT—He obeys his parents, Scoutmaster, Patrol Leader, and all other duly constituted authorities.
8. A SCOUT IS CHEERFUL—He smiles whenever he can. His obedience to orders is prompt and cheery. He never shirks nor grumbles at hardships.
9. A SCOUT IS THRIFTY—He does not wantonly destrop property. He works faithfully, wastes nothing, and makes the best use of his opportunities. He saves his money so that he may pay his own way, be generous to those in nede, and help to worthy objects. He may work for pay, but must not receive tips for courtesies or "Good Turns."
10. A SCOUT IS BRAVE—He has courage to face danger in spite of fear, and to stand up for the right against the coaxings of friends or the jeers or threats of enemies, and defeat does not down him.
11. A SCOUT IS CLEAN—He keeps clean in body and thought, stands for clean speech, clean sport, clean habits, and travels with a clean crowd.
12. A SCOUT IS REVERENT—He is reverent toward God. He is faithful in his religious duties, and respects the convictions of others in matters of cutom and religion.

2500 Men In North Iowa Are Scout Leaders

In the nine counties composing the North Iowa Council, 2500 men are connected with the Scouting movement either as Scoutmasters, Assistant Scoutmasters, Deputy Scout Commissioners, Troop Committeemen, Community Committeemen, District Committee members, Merit Badge Counselors, Board of Review members and Council members.

The intense interest manifested by the men of North Iowa augurs well for the future of Scouting among the counties involved.

Retired Klemme Farmer Figures Out The Old Horseshoe Story

We have something out of the ordinary to offer our readers this week, thanks to one of our very good retired farmer friends, who frequently drops into our office for a visit. We enjoy those visits for this old gentleman always has for us an interesting story. Sometimes he tells of how things were done fifty and more years ago, when Klemme and vicinity was thinnly settled. It was at about that time that the horse shoe story came up and goes about as follows:

A very stingy, hard old farmer lived in the community and always wanted everything cheaper than his neighbors were obliged to pay, and always argued about the price until he succeeded in "jewing" the store keeper or other business man out of a few pennies.

One day that farmer drove to town with his team and wagon. He wanted his horses fitted out with new shoes, and so visited the village blacksmith. As was the old farmer's custom, he at once began to "jew" and argue about the price. Finally the blacksmith (who was a very bright man) said: "Mr. Skinflint, I'll tell you what I'll do. You have given me much work, but you have always "jewed" me down to where I couldn't make very much. This time I will make you a very good proposition. You have two horses, you want them shod both front and rear; that means eight shoes. In each shoe there are eight nails. I will give you the eight shoes, I will also give you the eight nails for each shoe. I will charge you a small amount for my labor only. For the first nail I drive I will charge you just one mill; the second nail, two mills; the third nail, four mills; and so forth, doubling the number of mills each time. Now, then, shall I shoe your horses."

The old farmer considered a minute and thought that was a real bargain, for what did a few mills amount to, it took ten mills to even make one cent. He thought the blacksmith was a fool and replied that he would take him up on this offer. He was afraid the blacksmith might then throw up his agreement so the old farmer insisted that a contract be drawn up and both signed it. So the blacksmith went to work. And as he drove the nails the old farmer paid—but not for long, as he soon found that there was enough money in the world to pay the job.

That is the story told us by our friend, whom we shall call "A. B."

The results he obtained in figuring the cost of that horse shoe job amounted to Ten Quadrillion, One Hundred Sixteen Trillion, Five Hundred Seventy Seven Billion, Seven Hundred Five Million, Nine Hundred Thirty Four Thousand, One Hundred Twenty Five Dollars and Fifty Eight cents and One Mill!

If you don't believe it, figure it up. We have the figures to prove it in our office.

HAYFIELD INDEPENDENTS DEFEAT KLEMME 29 TO 24

The Hayfield Independent cagers defeated the local town team here Friday night by the score of 29 to 24. At the half frame Klemme was leading 13 to 12. It was a good game all the way through and was nobody's until the gun cracked.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR LEO ELL HELD HERE

Born In Garner; Spent Boyhood Days Around Klemme

Leo Archie Ell was born at Garner on January 27, in the year 1894 and died at Iowa City on Sunday, December 29, 1929, at the age of 34 years, 11 months and 2 days, of Heart Pneumonia.

Mr. Ell spent his boyhood days and grew to young manhood at Klemme.

In the year 1909 he was united in marriage to Miss Lily Hanson, of near Klemme, and moved to Mason City where he resided until death. To this union were born five children, three girls and two sons, namely: Minnie, Violet, Wava, Harry and William Duane. Beside the members of his family he leaves to mourn his demise his father, Phillip Ell; and four brothers, Charles, Edward, Herman and Leslie, and a host of relatives and friends.

A short service was held at his residence in Mason City Wednesday. January 1st, at 1:00 o'clock, after which the remains were taken to Klemme where funeral services were held in the M. E. Church, Rev. James of Mason City, officiating.

Interment was made in the Klemme Cemetery, with Andrew Wellemeyer, undertaker, in charge.

Card Of Thanks

We hereby wish to express our sincere, heartfelt thanks to the friends and relatives who so kindly and graciously assisted in any way during the illness and death of our husband and father.

Mrs. Lily Ell and Children. 1c

COUNTY POLITICAL POT NOW BOILING IN GOOD SHAPE

Several Candidates Have Come Out Since Last Week

Since publishing the Times last week several candidates have sent in their announcements to the Klemme Times.

Wants To Be Supervisor Again

Mr. A. O. Christianson, of Crystal Lake, made a personal call at the Times Office last week. Mr. Christianson is at present on the Board and as far as we know he has made a very good officer. He says he is running on his past record and will not made an extensive campaign. He said that if the voters saw fit to re-elect him, he will appreciate it very much and will give the office his careful and conscientious attention.

Thompson Out For Office

Now comes another candidate for Supervisor, Thos. H. Thompson, of Kanawha, who needs no introduction to Hancock County people. Mr Thompson served the county several years ago as Treasurer. He is very well known over the county, and if elected promises to give his fullest attention to the office. "Tommy" says the prospects look good to him at this time and that he will make an earnest campaign.

Suurballe Seeks Office Again

John Suurballe, present County Treasurer, asks for re-election to that office. So far John has a clear field before him. The office of Treasurer is a very important one and needs a man who is capable of handling large sums of money and doing it accurately. John has demonstrated his efficiency along that line. In the past John has always made a real run for the office and left his competitor far behind in the race, which is an indication of just how well he stands with the taxpayers of the county.

Wahlert For Sheriff

E. H. Wahlert, serving his first term as Sheriff, seeks re-election for the customary second term. Mr. Wahlert has served well as Sheriff He is a good, clean man and stands squarely for law enforcement. As to the clerical duties of his office he has served efficiently in that capacity. He is deserving of a second term.

COUNTY HAS RAISED TAX ON DOGS FOR THIS YEAR

Better Get Rid Of Your Cur Before Assessor Calls On You

According to information given The Times by one of the Assessors the Board of Supervisors has raised the tax on dogs to the limit. This is in accordance with a general move throughout the state on higher dog taxes.

The tax in Hancock County is now $3.00 per year county tax on male dogs and $5.00 per year on female dogs. The former price was $1 and $2.

By having a higher tax on dogs will mean that our dogs will be got rid of and better dogs and pure breds will take their place. This is as it should be, for it has been found that most damage to sheep and other stock has been caused by cur and mongrels. Purebred dogs seem to be content to remain at home where they belong.

The tax on dogs in Klemme is $2 for males and $4 for females. This means that the owner of a male dog in Klemme will have to pay a total of $5.00 in taxes, and the owner of a female, $9.00.

If you don't want to pay that much you better get rid of your dog before the assessor calls.

AUXILIARY LADIES WILL GIVE MASQUERADE DANCE

Date Has Been Set For Friday Eve, January 17th

The Legion-Auxiliary Ladies of Klemme will put on a masquerade dance at the Idle Hour Theatre on Friday evening, January 17.

Kelly's Orchestra has been secured and will play both popular and old time music, so there will be real fun for young and old. Plan to take in the masquerade dance.

ANOTHER COUNTY ROAD FOR KLEMME

TWO ROADS FOR KLEMME MAY BE POSSIBLE

Board Of Supervisors Opproved A Plan For Second County Road

If the plan as presented by the Board of Supervisors, is approved by the State Highway Commission Klemme wil have a second County Trunk Road, a feature not enjoyed by any other town in the county

The proposed new County Trunk Road will pass through the north part of town and will be a continuation of the present County Trunk Road coming in from Liberty township ffrom the west, past the R. G. Ludeke farm to the town limits, and conecting with the County Trunk Road running east from Klemme to the Cerro Gordo County line.

This proposed improved will give a road running directly west from the Ventura-Meservey road, through Klemme, and straight west to the Britt-Kanawha Road, or Highway No. 111.

The plan as above outlined has been worked out by the Board of Supervisors who have presented it to the State Highway Commission, and it practically certain that body will approve of the plan.

About a year or more ago a number of men interested in getting a better road into Klemme succeeded in having the corporation lines drawn in and through the regular channels of procedure eventually turned a former town road into the County Trunk System, and since that time the County graded and graveled the road into town, enlarging the corners at the highway approach and doing other work which gave Klemme a first class road.

This action of course stirred up some oposition from residents on the north road, who feared that they might be left out entirely. However, with two roads now assured, all should again feel quite happy, as where we had practically no decent roads before, we will now have two mighty fine county roads leading into Klemme.

Will Improve River Bridge

The County Road going west from Klemme, through Liberty, is on the road imporvement program for next year, and considerable work has been planned for this road.

About a half mile west of town where the road crosses the river, an improvement will be made there. At this point the road at present curves around a bend in the creek The river bed at that point will be straightened and the bridge swung around onto the new road bed and the curve will be eliminated. It is also possible that a new bridge may be built.

A half mile further west where the present road makes two short ogs at the Stille farm, these two short corners will be eliminated and the road will make a diagonal cut through a corner of the Stille farm and a small part of the school house yard.

The entire stretch will then be graveled the following year, as is customary after improvement.

FIREMEN USE SIREN AS SIGNAL FOR MEETINGS

Many Residents Did Not Know Why Siren Was Sounded Tuesday Eve

Hereafter when you hear a few short blast on the fire siren keep your shirt on. It's only the firemen calling in the gang for a meeting, as was the case Tuesday evening.

They hold their regular monthly meeting on the first Friday night of the month, when the siren will call them to the meeting.

For special meetings the same signal will be used, but at fifteen minute intervals.

A LOCK OF HAIR FOR REMEMBRANCE

(©, by D. J. Walsh.)

THE first time Mary ever saw Brant Millington lingered in her mind with a strangely maternal desire to laugh at him; it had been snch a little-boy sort of thing he had said.

Mary had rushed into Joe's barber shop at 11:40 and Joe's chair was empty, while Brant occupied the one next to it. And Joe went swiftly about the business of clipping Mary's sleek, straight locks in the very brief style she affected for comfort's sake. And as Joe's shears sang through her thick shining hair, Mary's alert ears overheard the conversation going on in the next chair to hers:

"Cut the pesky stuff off short, Ben; the gang all think I curl it and I'd cheerfully rather be bald than have anyone think that of me!" And, of course, Mary, having struggled with sleek, straight hair all her life and simply yearned for even the minutest curl imaginable, turned swiftly around and inspected the young man guilty of delivering such an alien thought, looked and almost wept to see the slaughter of the thick, curling bronze hair that was being quickly demolished under the onslaught of Ben's skilled shears. "Going to let it grow this winter, Miss Mary?" asked Joe with all the interest of your family barber.

"Oh, no; I would if only I could manage the ghost of a wave to it, but it's too beastly unmanageably straight," and Mary blushed slightly as she became conscious of the interested inspection of the occupant of the other chair.

"You could use pomade, Mr. Millington," advised the hopeful Benjamin. "Nope; leaves the hair too messy," objected Mr. Millington firmly, and Mary smiled a warm, friendly smile; it was such a relief to know a truly fastidious man existed in these days of makeup and what not.

"Ever think of trying a permanent, Mary?" offered the solicitous Joseph.

"Loads of times, but common sense always rescued me at the eleventh hour," confessed Mary, aware that Mr. Millington was now frankly listening to her, and not only listening but casting frequent interested glances her way.

"First man I ever heard kick about his hair curling," offered Ben.

"Steam," advised Joe, thoughtfully, "will curl most hair. After your shampoo you just lift your hair by strands and hold it over a boiling teakettle . . ."

But Mary and Brant were no longer interested in the barbers' conversation, and as they emerged into the street shoulder to shoulder Mary flushed ever so lightly and cast a shy, friendly glance at Brant, who looked very boyish and embarrassed as he tipped his hat and hurried ahead of Mary into an office building.

"Why," gasped Mary a few moments later as she alighted from the elevator in front of her office door, "he works here, too! Fancy that! And we to meet in a barber shop!" And Brant, looking up as he deposited hat and coat on a rack, knew a definite thrill of gladness to discover that that wonderful girl named Mary worked in his own office, too!

And, of course, they might have met and passed each other day in and day out without ever becoming any nearer the goal of their separate, secretly hoped-for goal of friendship had not fate interceded in their behalf with a few well-aimed happenings that were destined to bring them nearer together. The janitor of the office building was suddenly called to the death-bed of a near and dear relative and in his haste to arrive lest it be too late he locked the cellar, forgetting to adjust the furnace properly, and consequently at about 5:10, when most of the other occupants of the vast offices had already departed homeward, a faulty radiator in Mary's room gave way under the added pressure of an over-hot furnace, and although the safety-valve on the furnace was blowing a shrill siren of warning there was none to heed it, and consequently the weakest link in the chain broke, and in a few brief moments the big room was so filled with steam that even the windows were dimmed from view and Mary fled in fright to the outer desk telephone and was frantically trying to ring the janitor when Brant came in. The door to the steam-filled office was closed, but the glass window was so thickly misted with steam that Brant stood for a brief moment rooted to the spot, watching Mary's frantic efforts toward telephoning, thinking that it was smoke he saw in the glass window of the door.

"We'll have to put in an alarm, Mary," he said after an instant, and Mary stopped her frantic efforts with the telephone, and, facing him, said simply, "The fire department wouldn't care to fix a leaky radiator!" And the tense lines of his face relaxed and he advanced toward the closed office door, but Mary was ahead of him, and in an instant both were making desperate efforts to get up to the whistling, pounding radiator.

"It's no use; we simply can't do anything but get burned. We'll have to let it go and get some one to fix it," wailed Mary, her face dripping with moisture and even her eyelashes beading with the steam.

"It'll spoil everything in this room in the meantime. Let's try," answered Brant, and he made a futile effort to turn the radiator off, but to no avail, for the handle spun around either way, telling its own story of broken thread or whatever it is that makes a radiator backfire.

Fifteen minutes in a supercondensed Turkish bath, however, is likely to dampen the ardor of even the original trouble shooter of this world, and Brant finally agreed with the anxious Mary that they were wasting their time and could much better dispose of it in locating a janitor or somebody who understood the steam-radiator better than they.

Coming from the steam-clouded room, Brant wiped his face and turned to look at Mary, and then started in utter, unbelieving amazement. Mary's hair clung to her head in a mass of tightly curling ringlets! And Mary, staring fixedly at Brant, discovered that the steam had removed whatever trace of curl there was to his hair, and it hung in limp strands about his face as though he had been swimming!

"Mary!" gasped Brent. "Your hair is all curly!"

"And yours is all straight, Brant!" stammered Mary as she drew forth a minute mirror to gaze upon the miracle.

"Mary," began Brant shyly as Mary prepared to don hat and coat, "would you let me cut just one of those adorable curls for remembrance?" and, startled, Mary paused an instant and then said, slowly, "Yes, Brant, if you'll return the favor!"

So they very solemnly clipped a lock of each other's hair and then strolled out into the star-studded dusk of a gorgeous spring evening conscious that in exchanging a lock of hair they had gained something infinitely more precious! And Brant, not knowing Mary's last name even, knew—even as she did—that ere fall came Mary would be sharing his name gladly!

Jurist Had Odd Reason for Apparent Slumber

The late Chief Justice White was perhaps the most thorough interrogator of counsel among his generation of Supreme court justices, and in that connection a somewhat amusing circumstance might be cited.

It was the fixed habit of the chief justice to sit during the course of an argument with his eyes closed and with his head thrown back on his chair. To the casual observer he seemed sound asleep. This often proved exceedingly embarrassing and disturbing to lawyers, who felt that they were addressing a man whom they not only failed to impress, but whom they could not even keep awake.

However, the venerable jurist never failed at some stage of the argument to open his eyes, lean forward, and propound a question summing up practically everything the speaker had said from first to last. That was intended to show the pleader that, after all, his argument had not fallen upon deaf ears.

A judge of a lower court once asked the late chief justice why the latter appeared to sleep upon the bench, when as a matter of fact he was wide awake all the time. The answer was that by a curious freak of mind the chief justice had formed the habit of watching the mouths of lawyers in action while they were making their arguments.

He unconsciously became so absorbed, he said, in the facial expressions of the men before him that he lost the thread of the argument. In order, therefore, to do full justice to every cause pleaded before him, the chief justice found it necessary to close his eyes and shut from his mind the grotesque picture of the human mouth before him.—J. Frederick Essary in Scribner's Magazine.

Measuring Human Skin

There are from 14 to 18 square feet of skin on the average adult human body, says an article in Pathfinder Magazine. Of course, the surface area of the body, which is practically equivalent to the number of square feet of skin, varies with the sex, age, height and weight of the individual. Obviously the body of a tall, thin person might have a much greater surface area than the body of a short, fat person who weighs the same. The method of obtaining the surface area of the body is complicated and involves many factors, but charts have been devised whereby it can be estimated with a high degree of accuracy if the sex, age, height and weight of the individual are known.

Singing for Exercise

Besides being a pleasure to the singer and sometimes to those around, the act of singing is a better exercise than most persons have any thought of. It is good exercise for the throat, lungs and chest and now it is recommended for the ears. A western physician who is called upon to do a great deal of driving over the country says that after a particularly hard experience of this kind, his ears always seem to be affected, probably by the noise of the car and vibration of the engine. In this event he raises up his voice and sings to the best of his ability and this treatment soon relieves the ears.

Immense Swamp

The Great Dismal swamp is a morass in southeastern Virginia and northeastern North Carolina. It extends from near Norfolk 30 to 40 miles southward. It contains Lake Drummond and is traversed by the Dismal Swamp canal, which connects Chesapeake bay and Albemarle sound. Part of the swamp has been reclaimed. The biological survey says that the following animals are found in the Dismal swamp of Virginia: Bears, wildcats, rabbits, deer, opossums, squirrels and raccoons.

DAIRY FACTS

COW REGISTERED BY PHOTOGRAPHS

Camera Useful in Studying Growth of Dairy Animals.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The importance of a camera on livestock farms is emphasized by the recent decision of two dairy breed associations to accept photographs in lieu of the color sketches of animals intended for registration. The breeds concerned are Ayrshire and Holstein-Friesian.

Dairy specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture anticipate increased interest in animal photography as a result of this decision, and call attention to Department Circular 371-C, which discusses the use of the camera in studying the growth and development of dairy animals. This circular gives many practical suggestions, and may be obtained by writing the Department of Agriculture at Washington.

Photographs have been used by research workers in the Bureau of Dairy Industry for a number of years, and it has been found that they furnish a prolific source of information which could hardly be secured by any other method of record keeping. These specialists are hopeful that the new ruling of the breed associations will stimulate a much wider use of the camera on dairy farms throughout the country.

Handle Milk Promptly During Winter Season

There is fully as much need for the prompt handling of milk during the midwinter as there is in midsummer. In warm weather the average milker will hasten to cool fresh milk simply for the reason that "keeping cool" is an objective at this time of the year that is always in the background of his thoughts. In winter, however, it is the nature of things to "cool off." Therefore, why hurry the cans to the cooling vat?

It is in midwinter, perhaps more than in midsummer, that milk is apt to possess an off-flavor unless care is exercised in handling it. The heavy feeding incident to midwinter—the liberal use of legume hays, concentrates, and so on, imparts flavors all their own to milk during these months which one may only hope to minimize by cooling it as promptly as possible.

In winter also the milking stable is tightly closed. The accumulation of manure in the gutters is naturally heavier due to the fact that cows spend more time in their stanchions than during the other seasons. So the chances of milk absorbing off-flavors are increased.

Production of Milk and Profits Vary Directly

"Milk production and profits vary almost directly according to the amount of grain fed," says G. W. Tallby, Jr., of the New York College of Agriculture. A group of cows which consumed $20 worth of grain produced an average of 5,261 pounds of milk and had a return over feed cost of $91.

Another group which was fed an average of $50 worth of grain per year averaged 7,771 pounds of milk and had a return over feed cost of $119. Third and fourth groups of cows producing averages of 10,254 and 11,937 pounds of milk were fed $85 and $99 worth of grain per cow per year. Net returns from these groups were $153 and $194 per cow.

In other words, the more grain the more milk, provided, of course, that the cows have the inherent ability to convert the feed into milk.

Picking Dairy Bull on Records of Ancestors

In selecting a dairy bull on the basis of the records of his ancestors consideration should be given to the conditions under which the records were made, says the United States Department of Agriculture. An investigation by the bureau of dairy industry at Beltsville, Md., showed that when cows were milked and fed three times a day instead of twice, confined in box stalls instead of in stanchions, fed enough to make them fat instead of keeping them in ordinary flesh, and bred to freshen at intervals of 15 months instead of 12, the production was increased 50 per cent.

A herd improvement association record of 400 pounds of butterfat, if made under ordinary farm conditions, the bureau says, is equal to an advanced registry or register of merit record of 600 pounds.

Dairy Herd Records

The first official dairy herd production records on the Hettinger (North Dakota) substation herd were recently received from the Holstein-Friesian advanced registry office. The average production for the 15 cows was 11,393 lbs. milk and 419.4 lbs. butterfat. Eight young cows in their first lactation were included, and their average production was 424 lbs. butterfat. The highest individual record was 16,531 lbs. milk and 523.5 lbs. butterfat.

COME AGAIN SOON

The vacation season being over, the steamer was coming to take returning vacationists from Christmas Cove. A sweet girl and a nice young man with a suitcase were sitting on the pier. He was going, but she was going to stay a little while. As the gangplank was thrown out they rose and she reached up and kissed him.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "I'm so sorry to have you go!"

"Yes," he replied, "I'm so glad to have met you!"

Not So Wonderful

POULTRY

PREVENTING ROUP IN COLD WEATHER

Poultry Require Feeds With Vitamine A Content.

What's sauce for the goose is also sauce for the gander, and some of the things which are healthful in the diet of the family, are equally so in the diet of the poultry flock. Carrots, cod-liver oil, and green vegetables belong on the table of the flock as much as on that of the family, according to P. B. Zumbro, extension specialist for the Ohio State university poultry husbandry department. "These foods carry vitamine A, a preventative of nutritional roup, a disease which often strikes flocks when they are housed during the winter and unable to obtain green feed on the grange," says Zumbro.

Symptoms of nutritional roup include nasal discharges and swelling of the face, which are characteristic of ordinary roup, but the nutritional roup also causes lesions in the eyes and mouth. Post-mortem examination usually shows the kidneys to be very pale; and marked with a network of white lines, and a deposit of white material on the surfaces of the liver and heart.

Comeplete discussion of the treatment of nutritional roup and other diseases, as well as of problems of incubation, brooding, feeding, and management, are included in a correspondence course given by the poultry husbandry department of the university.

Feeding Poultry Flock for Profit During Year

Does your poultry flock return a good profit over the cost of feed during the year? It has been found that when laying hens are fed all the grain they will consume Leghorns and similar breeds eat from 70 to 80 pounds of grain a year. Breeds like the Plymouth Rock, Rhode Island Red, and Wyandotte eat from 80 to 95 pounds. All breeds eat from two to three pounds of oyster shells and about one pound of grit a year.

The average farm hen lays less than 60 eggs a year, principally from March to June, the season of lowest prices. Yearly profits in eggs depend largely on production in fall and winter, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Rations for laying stock should include scratch grains, mashes, meat feed, green feed, mineral feed, grit, and drink. The scratch ration should be scattered through the litter in the poultry house so that the hens will get plenty of exercise.

Crushed Oyster Shells Are Valuable for Hens

New feeders of crushed oyster shell report an average of 30 extra eggs a year from each hen. According to other experienced poultrymen this is a modest estimate. Many who trapnest their hens and keep an accurate record of production find that the average is higher. If eggs are figured at three cents each that means 90 cents more in actual cash from each hen. As the bird will eat only about three cents' worth of oyster shell during the year, the net profit is 87 cents. Multiply that by the number of hens in your flock and you'll have a tidy sum.

People wonder why doing such a little thing makes so big a difference. The answer is simple. It's plain chemistry.

Turkeys Easily Picked if Killed in Right Way

For dry picking, the turkeys are usually hung by their legs at a convenient height for killing. The jugular vein is cut by the single stroke of a sharp knife and the point of the knife is then pushed through the roof of the mouth into the brain. The last operation is known as "sticking" and when properly done paralyzes the bird and loosens the feathers so that they come out easily. Turkey feathers can be removed more easily than can chicken feathers, the proper bleeding and sticking being the most difficult part of the operation.

Contented Birds

Contented, unworried pullets will get into production early and will tend to keep up their production. When pullets are first brought in from the range, they have a tendency to be rather excitable until they become accustomed to their new surroundings. When approaching a pen, whistle or call softly or knock on the door, so as to warn the birds of your approach. This practice may help to get several additional eggs every day from the pullet flock.

Ability to Lay

The ability to lay is inherited and thus depends more on breeding than on feeding; but pullets should be well developed in body before they start to lay. If the pullets seem to mature too rapidly do not feed them wholly on grain to slow up their inclination to lay; anything that checks laying is also apt to stunt permanently the growth of the birds. Feed a mash along with scratch grain, as it is more complete in protein minerals and vitamins.

Strict Obedience

When Mary entered an east side grade school, she promised to obey her teacher. A few weeks later her mother was shocked to see her little daughter, with a hot water bottle at her feet and a damp cloth on her forehead.

"Why, Mary, are you sick?" asked her anxious mother.

Mary replied, "Teacher told us to always keep our feet warm and our heads cool. Don't you want me to mind my teacher?" — Indianapolis News.

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

AFTER OPERATIONS

"I was three times under an operation and I was very weak and nervous and could not eat. I suffered for ten years. I learned about Lydia E. Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food. It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them joyful, energetic, full of life. And any bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 119 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it helps."

Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Prohibition Enforcement Is Still the Chief Topic in Washington.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PROHIBITION enforcement continued to be the dominant question in Washington, and the dry leaders in congress were especially vocal in the controversy. The most important development of the week was the statement by Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington that during conferences with members of the Hoover crime commission he had been glad to learn that the commission is unanimous in agreeing that its function is to devise the best means possible for enforcement of the Eighteenth amendment. Senator Jones averred that the commission holds that the wisdom or unwisdom of the amendment is not involved in its work.

This was held to be a severe blow to the hopes of the wets, though it is hard to see how the latter could have expected the commission to try to determine the practicability of prohibition.

Senator Jones asserted that the dry phase of the commission's work should be completed by July 1 and warned that a clear and convincing showing of its need will have to be made before funds for prolonging the prohibition inquiry beyond that date are made available. As Jones is prospective chairman of the senate finance committee, he will be in a position to supervise funds asked for the commission's work.

The Washington senator continued: "I find that an important report has already been given to the President. It will be submitted to the congressional joint committee sought by the President as soon as created and ready for work. Other reports will be ready soon.

"All seem to view the industrial alcohol situation as the most difficult one to solve properly, as well as one of the most important phases of prohibition enforcement. In working this out the commission should shield no individual and no line of business."

Senator Borah of Idaho repeated his attacks on the present dry enforcement personnel, asserting that "practically open saloons" are to be found all over the land. "When I say this," he said, "I do not mean simply New York or Chicago. I mean to state a condition which prevails throughout the country. I do not assume that you can catch every bootlegger. But the open flaunting, defiant, persistent disregard of the law, day after day and month after month, with no effort being made to stop it, calls for discussion."

Mr. Borah sent one or two letters to President Hoover, and though their contents were not made public it was understood the senator offered proof of his assertions, and it was indicated that if the administration did not make use of the information given he would lay his evidence before congress.

Then came F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, with a statement in which he took issue with Borah's charges.

"The prohibition department has been doing good work, but there are places where conditions can be bettered," McBride said. "These will be found and corrected. The Department of Justice has had some bad spots. Mr. Mitchell has been active in correcting these but the job has yet to be completed.

"The most hopeful sign about the situation is the fact that the legislative officers, as well as the administrative officers, including the President, are not sidestepping responsibility as has been true under some former conditions and the fact that in the Capital and all over the country enforcement is responding to official insistence."

Senator Brookhart of Iowa, the unrelenting foe of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, renewed his demands that President Hoover remove the secretary from his cabinet, and also declared that Undersecretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, Assistant Secretary Seymour Lowman and Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran should be dismissed.

COAST guardsmen seeking to prevent the landing of liquor near Newport, R. I., opened fire on a rum running boat, the Black Duck, and killed three members of the crew. Their action was upheld by their superiors, but the incident serves to provide more ammunition for the enemies of the Eighteenth amendment.

In old Faneuil hall, Boston, the Liberal Civic league held a mass meeting that sent to President Hoover a message asking a searching investigation of the slayings by the coast guard, and after the meeting a mob attacked the coast guard station.

Celebrants of New Year's eve in the larger cities found their activities were subjected to rather less interference by the enforcement officers than in recent years. The supply of intoxicating liquor seemed unlimited, though it is admitted most of it was synthetic with bogus labels.

THOUSANDS of Washingtonians and visitors to the National Capital attended the New Year's day reception held by President and Mrs. Hoover. Among the callers were the members of the cabinet, the handsomely garbed diplomatic corps, senators and representatives and many high officers of the army and navy. Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador, and Lady Isabella were the first of the long line of diplomats to wish the Hoovers a happy New Year.

The chief justice and Mrs. Taft were missing from the White House reception for the first time in years, owing to the death of Charles P. Taft.

Over in Berlin President von Hindenburg for the first time held a similar reception. The diplomats there disputed over the matter of precedence, for their dean is the ambassador from Russia and the representatives of the United States and other powers that have not recognized the Soviets naturally would not follow him. Finally it was agreed that the French ambassador, De Margerie, should lead the way and present to the president the good wishes of the diplomats.

IF JOUETT SHOUSE, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, knows what he is talking about, we are not likely to have a new tariff act in the near future. He issued a statement in Lexington in which he said that either the coalition tariff measure, which attempts to carry out the promise of real tariff benefits for the farmers, will be enacted or there will be no tariff bill at all. "That latter," he said, "is the more probable outcome, which means that months and months of congressional sessions have been utterly wasted because of the effort to jam through a tariff revision that had no reason in economy or justifiable excuse at this time."

INDIA'S Nationalists under the leadership of Mahatma Gandhi have taken a bold step toward independence for their country. The national congress, with only six dissenting votes out of 2,000, adopted Gandhi's resolution for a middle course toward the objective. The resolution authorized the all-India congress committee, an executive body of about 300 members, to launch, whenever it thinks the time ripe, a program of civil disobedience to include non-payment of taxes and similar resistance to British rule.

The Indian Liberal federation has accepted the British declaration of ultimate dominion status for India.

ALL British Samoa was stirred by an event that, while not bulking large in world affairs, was a real tragedy to the natives of those islands. Two white men who have championed the demands of the natives that they be treated by the New Zealand government as equals instead of subjects returned to Apia and the Samoans gathered to welcome them. The police tried to arrest one of the white men and a riot resulted. The police opened fire with machine guns, and nine men were killed, including Tamasese, high chief and an opposition leader. Western Samoa has been under mandate to New Zealand since 1920 and the natives are forced to pay heavy taxes for the support of a horde of useless officials, as well as being subjected to oppressive laws and regulations. The Mau, or native league, is trying to get New Zealand to give up its mandate, wishing the islands to be taken over by the United States and consolidated with Eastern Samoa. Of course the New Zealand government refuses to consider such a plan.

PRINCE CAROL seemingly is still trying to gain the throne of Rumania, and Italy is reported to have espoused his cause in a way that has aroused the anger of the Rumanians. Recently Signor Preciosi, Italian minister to Bucharest, called at the Rumanian foreign office and informed it in the name of the Italian government that Italy considered it necessary to regularize the dynastic succession to the Rumanian throne and that Prince Carol should be recalled to Rumania and crowned king.

The Rumanians do not dare to make effectual protest against this interference in their internal affairs for they fear they would be isolated in their quarrel with Jugoslavia, which they and Italy regard as an enemy.

THERE was great rejoicing and celebration in China over the announcement of the Nationalist government that extraterritoriality was to be summarily ended on January 1. But the state council's mandate evidently was issued for home consumption and it had little or no effect in the treaty ports, where the foreign officials still declined to let their nationals be tried in native courts. Foreign Minister C. T. Wang said his government was prepared to consider and discuss, within a reasonable time, any representations made by foreign nations with reference to the Chinese decision to end the consular court system and assume legal jurisdiction over foreigners.

SENATOR FREDERICK M. SACKett of Kentucky has been selected as ambassador to Germany. He was cruising in the West Indies when informed of this fact and that the German government had announced that his appointment was acceptable to it. Mr. Sackett started back to Washington at once, saying he would resign from the senate and soon be ready to leave for Berlin.

KENNETH HAWKS, movie director and sportsman, and nine other men engaged in the filming of venturesome air "shots," were hurled to death in the Pacific ocean in two tangled, blazing monoplanes off the Palos Verde hills, 25 miles from Los Angeles.

Eyewitnesses said that one of the two planes poised above the other and then, as if the pilot had lost his vision in the piercing rays of the setting sun, had darted down and struck the top of the lower plane. After a momentary shudder a wing broke and one of the planes exploded. The other plane, tangled in the debris of its blazing companion, became engulfed in flames and the two swept down to the depths of the ocean.

SCOTLAND'S worst tragedy of 1929 came just at the close of the year. A moving picture theater at Paisley was thronged with children attending a gala performance when fire broke out in the projection booth. Panic ensued, and within a few moments seventy little ones were dead and scores injured.

MOST noteworthy of the deaths of the week was that of Charles P. Taft, Cincinnati newspaper publisher and half-brother of William Howard Taft, former President and now chief justice of the United States Supreme court. Eighteen months ago Mr. Taft was stricken with pneumonia and he never had fully recovered. He had a distinguished career as a lawyer and publisher, served one term in congress and was prominent in state and civic affairs.

NEW YEAR'S day was Football day in California. In the great Rose Bowl at Pasadena the University of Southern California met the undefeated team from the University of Pittsburgh and fairly swamped it, winning by a score of 47 to 14. In San Francisco teams of star college players from the East and the West battled in a game for charity, the Easterners scoring 19 points to 7 for their rivals.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

"Hello! Hello! How Much Does Happiness Cost?"

Only the price of learning a simple health rule, this smiling youngster finds!

"Happiness is on the other end of your phone too," says little Barbara

"HAPPINESS just radiates from our baby since we began giving her—"

What was it that Mrs. Fred E. Schmitt of 2023 Stone Street, Falls City, Nebraska, discovered, which she could give to her baby that made her happy, well, strong and buoyant?

Not a medicine; not a drug of any kind; just harmless bodily lubrication. Only that, and nothing more. Mrs. Schmitt's discovery that little Barbara kept well when she was made regular as clock work is the same discovery as has been made by millions of other people, who are enjoying the happiness of health because they use Nujol.

Babies, old folks, people in the prime of life—all alike need to have the bodily poisons (we all have them) regularly cleaned out. Nujol just gently, naturally, normally lubricates the action of your body which needs lubrication as much as any other machine.

Please remember that Nujol contains no drugs; is non-fattening; is not absorbed in any way by the body; can form no habit; cannot hurt you, no matter how much you take. All it can do is keep you internally clean, and make you continually feel better. Colorless, tasteless as pure water, Nujol will make you see the bright side of life; it will help you to get the most out of your life; it will make you wake up in the morning feeling fit, and help you to do a good day's work with a smile.

Millions of people have discovered this fact—why don't you? You can buy Nujol in sealed packages at all drug stores. It costs but a few cents, and makes you feel like a million dollars. Get a bottle today and see how brimming zestful health will boost your day's happiness.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDED NEW YEAR'S EVE PROGRAM

The Entertainment Was Presented By Young People Of Church

The Church was packed New Year evening with a crowd htat had turned out to see the entertainment put on by the young people of the Liberty Church.

Two plays were given. The first a Biblical Play entitled, "The Gift." This play will be given in the M. E. Church in Klemme this Sunday evening. The second play was called "The Neighbors," and sure produced quite a laugh through the entire play and was much enjoyed by all, especially the children. Two pantomimes were also put on and much appreciated by the crowd.

Earl Josten sang, "Stranger of Galilee," which was very beautiful. The Misses Ethel and Mildred Schoenwetter gave a piano and violin duet, and Ruth and Madeline Abele gave a piano duet.

After the program the crowd was invited to the basement where refreshments were served to over 200 and a social hour was spent together.

SCHOOL NOTES

Both students and teachers are back from their vacation and well started on the work of the new year 1930.

The twelve contestants are at work preparing the the next contest to be held the latter part of January or early in February.

Our high school faculty were invited to a six o'clock dinner Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Bock, parnets of Mitchel Bock, enrolled in our Freshman Class. The hours passed all too soon for we were well entertained.

Our High School boys have won four consecutive games and hope to win the fifth Friday night when they go to Swaledale. A big crowd of home rooters will help!

Our School will anticipate in the annual spelling bee promoted by the Des Moines Register. Our local contest will be from grades two to eight, inclusive.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sampson and children drove to Mason City Thursday afternoon and called on Mrs. Albert Tanner who is in the hospital there, but is getting along nicely now.

The Editor will appreciate it very much if news items are sent in early as possible. We are very busy on Thursdays and it hustles us to get all the news which could just as well come in earlier. Thanks!

FAITH AX PASSED AWAY TUESDAY

FUNERAL FOR FAITH AX HELD THIS AFTERNOON

Faith Ax, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ax, was born on the 27th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1906. She was baptized by Rev. John Gatermann, pastor of the Elltown Reformed Church. During her childhood days she attended the public school of her home district, and the Church schools in the Reformed Church. After completing the public school course, she attended the Klemme High School, graduating with the class of 1925. In school she proved herself a faithful and diligent student, and as such she was respected by both instructors and fellow students.

She was not permitted to make use of her talents, however, as she had hoped, because of delicate health. She remained with her parents until about three years ago, when she suffered a nervous breakdown and it became necessary to take her to a hospital.

A few weeks ago the parents were notified that her condition was very serious, and Mr. Ax acompanied by Dr. Geo. Zinn brought her back home January 2. The parents were glad to havet heir daughter under their own care even though it was to be only for a few days. God called her to the Eternal Home Tuesday morning, January 7th at 1:30 o'clock, at the age of 23 years, 1 mo. and 10 days. During the last day her mind became perfectly clear, enabling her to carry on a conversation with her parents and brother.

Surviving her and mourning her death are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ax, and one brother, Richard, and many other relatives and friends.

During the noon hour the Klemme High School students were given the privilege of veiwing the remains.

Funeral services were held at the Klemme Reformed Church Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, with Rev. Grosshuesch in charge. Burial was made at the Klemme Cemetery. The following Liberty boys, neighbors, acted as pall bearers: Glenn Lange, Kenneth Gast, Glenn Terhufen, Carl Carlson, Fred Pringnitz, and Burnette Haefner.

The floral tribute was both large and beautiful and expressed the sympathy of the entire community which goes out to the bereaved parents and brother at this time.

DAN WEBNER HAS VERY VICIOUS TIN MULE!

Has Bad Disposition; Takes Joy In Breaking Owners Bones

Mules may come and mules may go, but Dan Webner's mule, "Henry," kicks on forever.

Dan Webner has a "tin mule" which, when young was quite docile but as age creeps upon it "Henry" has developed a grouch and is constantly kicking.

Thursday Dan went to wind up Henry for a ride, but the tin mule had other ideas and with one snort gave Dan a powerful kick on his right wrist, breaking the bones just above the wrist, which caused him to seek medical attention to have the bones reset. The injury caused him a lot of pain and it will be some time before he will be able to do much on the farm.

This is the second accidnt of a like nature in Mr. Webner's family caused by the kicking Ford, as about six months ago Mr. Webner's son got his arm broken when trying to crank this same Ford.

Dan says he thinks it will pay to install a starter on his "kicking tin mule."

MR. AND MRS. OTTO LEMKE CELEBRATE 25th ANNIVERSARY

Relatives And Friends Surprise Them Sunday With Dinner

Saturday, January 4th, 1930 was the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Lemke.

Their son, Wayne, of Mason City had invited relatives and friends to have a surprise on them Sunday which plan was successfully carried out, although sickness prevented some of the relatives from attending.

While Mr. and Mrs. Lemke were at church the people gathered at their home, bringing well filled baskets of good things for a sumptuous dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Lemke were agreeably surprised when they arrived home and found the gathering in their honor.

The diner was served in cafeteria style. Mr. Eric Clark acted as the spokesman for the crowd and presented Mr. and Mrs. Lemke with a beautiful set of silverwear. Mr. Lemke responded, voicing his appreciation for the fine gathering held for them. The "newlyweds" of 25 years were also presented with other gifts of silver.

The afternoon was spent in visiting and a general good time was had by all.

Those present were Mrs. Henry Lemke; Mr. and Mrs. Eric Clark, Garner; Mr and Mrs. Lewie Schmidt and Alois, Eulelia, Ermalinda and Adalinda; Mr. and Mrs. Will Beier, Mr. and Mrs. John Larson and Ralph; Miss Dorothy Hampel; and Mrs. Will Lemke and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Graber, of Belmond and Miss Wilma Trumbell dropped in during the afternoon to offer their congratulations.

IT'S TIME TO TEST SEED AND SOIL, SAYS DYAS

May Be Done In Winter When Other Work Is Slack

The winter when other work is not so rushing is the time to test seed and soil, says E. S. Dyas, field crops specialist in the Extension Service, Iowa State College.

If legumes are to be planted in the spring the soil may be tested at this time for acidity. Samples of seed, or the entire seed supply, may be obtained and samples sent to the state college for purity and germination tests.

Better seed usually is secured by buying early, says Mr. Dyas. The Iowa Department of Agriculture has reported that most of the poor seed samples it obtains are found late in the season.

The number of farm foreclosures and related defaults of farmers was less in the year which ended March 15, 1929, than the number in the same 12 months just preceding, reports the United States Department of Agriculture. In the period ending March 15, on the average 19.4 farms out of every 1,000 farms in the United States went into foreclosure, were sold for delinquent taxes or went otherwise into default. The figure of 19.4 per 1,000 is the lowest since and including 1926, when the bureau made its first survey of this kind. The ratio for the period ending March 15, 1928, was 20.2 per 1,000.

Too Good To Be True

Mos Jackson was dead, and was having a large funeral. The minister told all of the good things he could think of about the deceased. Mose had been such a loving husband, a wonderfully kind father, a genial neighbor, a very solicitous provider for his family, and a consistant and benevolent church member.

About that time, Mandy, the widow, began to get uneasy. Leaning down to hr young son, she said: "Rastus, you go look in dat coffin an' see effen dat's yo' paw inside."

Local Dealer Attends Iowa Implement Association Convention

Dwight Osborne, manager of the Implement Department of the Northern Lumber Company, attended the Iowa Implement Dealers Association Convention held at Marshalltow, January 7, 8 and 9th. About fifty manufacturers of farm implements and supplies had exhibits at the Convention this year.

Junior, the two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Buentenbach was operated on at the Mercy hospital Saturday evening at 7:00 o'clock. Pus had gathered in one of his legs and this was removed. He is now getting along fine. The little fellow had not been feeling well for two or three weeks. All three of the Buentenbach children have now had experiences in the hospital, and all had been very good patients. It seems like this family have had more than their share of pain and suffering and their friends hope that all may now enjoy the best of health and happiness.

DON'T NEGLECT YOUR POULTRY SAYS WALTER WEISS

Farm Bureau Office Sends Out Some Timely Hints To The Farmers

The poultry industry is becoming more and more a source of income for the Iowa farmer, according to Walter Weiss, our new County Agent. No farm is complete without them and no farmer should keep them unless they are showing a profit for him. The only satisfactory way of finding out what your poultry is doing is to keep records on the flock. One shuld keep track of the number of eggs gathered each day, the cost of the feed consumed and the value on the sale of birds. The Farm Bureau Office will gladly furnish each poultryman with the "Iowa Poultry Calendar," for just the cost of printing, which is 50c.

Egg Mash Is Important Now

It is important at this season of the year to provide a good egg mash in an open hopper so that the birds have access to it at all times. Corn and other grain feeds are essential for weight and quality in the birds. Overcrowded houses should be avoided. You should allow three square feet of floor space for each bird of light breeds and four square feet for heavy breeds.

Venitlation Is Essential Also

The opening of windows should be so regulated as to prevent extreme lowering of temperature inside the house at night. Uniform temperature inside the house is very essential. Draughts should be avoided by proper precautions in ventilation and by keeping cracks and knot holes in walls plugged up.

Prevention Of Diseases

This is th season of the year when the common winter dieases appear and every precaution should be taken to prevent them. Some of the sanitary precautions are:

a. Clean Dropping boards twice each week.
b. Change litter often enough to keep it dry.
c. Provide waterers and feeders of such type as to prevent contamination of feed and drink.
d. Clean and disinfect drinking vessels regularly.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SOME three hundred years ago Sir Walter Raleigh wrote these words: "Whoever commands the sea commands trade; whoever commands the trade of the world commands the riches of the world, and consequently the world itself." Now that was not an especially original thought, for a thousand years of history, or more, had pointed conclusively toward the fact and had seen more than one nation making a bid for command of the sea, the riches of the world and the world itself.

But Sir Walter's observation is interesting because of the time at which it was uttered and because it was prophetic of the rise of a new sea power which was to make almost axiomatic and universally accepted the phrase "Britannia rules the waves." For only a few years previously he had seen Drake, Frobisher and Hawkins defeat the "Invincible Armada" and wrest supremacy on the sea from Spain and, although he did not live to see it, within the next few years the English were victorious over the Dutch in a long series of wars brought about by their maritime rivalry. And for the next 250 years his countrymen were to resist successfully any challenge to Old England's boast until a child of her own blood, who in his youth had somewhat tempered that boast, should rise in the strength of his lusty young manhood and claim equality in this matter of ruling the waves.

For that classic boast is no longer true. Just at present it reads "..... rules the waves." And what name or names are to be filled in on the dotted line yet remain to be seen. Is it to be "Britannia and Columbia rule the waves"? Or

Britannia, Columbia, Nippon—these three
Shall rule the waves by 5-5-3.

Or perhaps

Britannia, Columbia and Japan
And France and Italy
Shall rules the waves by some good plan
That gives naval parity.

Those are the questions which the world is anxiously awaiting to be answered and for which answer it is looking to the naval conference that is being held in London this month. As delegates from Great Britain, the United States, Japan, France and Italy sit down together to determine, in the words of Ramsay MacDonald, British prime minister, "How best the five powers represented can agree upon reduction and limitation of war vessels on the basis of mutually accepted strengths," they will be writing another chapter in the history of sea power which goes back to the day the first Phoenician bireme was launched somewhere along the coast of Africa. Sparta, Macedonia and the Roman republic owed their prominence in history to the aggressive use of military power, but Tyre, Athens and Carthage rose to their heights by developing their sea power. The Roman empire owed its stability to an almost perfect combination of military and naval strength.

But it was not until the dawn of modern history that sea power became an all-important factor in the history of the nations. "Let us follow the progress of sea power in the last centuries," writes Lieut. Com. H. H. Frost of the United States navy in the United States Naval Institute Proceedings for October, 1927, and he does it as follows:

The great voyages of discovery were made by the Portuguese and Spaniards. Both these powers were dominated by military rather than commercial instincts. Their ideas were rather to seize territory and enslave the natives than to engage in legitimate trade with them. Thus their conquests of Mexico, Peru, Brazil and the Philippines were rather military expeditions than the exercise of sea power.

The Dutch, on the other hand, built up real sea power. They were a commercial rather than a military race, and desired to trade with the newly discovered peoples rather than conquer them. Great trading companies were organized to support oversea commerce, and large sums were ventured in fitting out expeditions to the far corners of the world. So eager were they to open up new regions to trade and to discover shorter trading routes, that, in the midst of a tremendous struggle for independence, their merchants were able to finance at great cost three expeditions to locate a route to China through the ice-fields and inhospitable seas which lay to the northward of the Eurasian continent. The Dutch merchant marine developed rapidly. Their ships were small, seaworthy, and well-handled. Their crews were real seamen.

England became a great commercial power slightly after the meteoric rise of the Dutch Republic. At that day, the English race was not so distinctly commercial as the Dutch, and had greater military instincts. Thus their seamen did not at first engage in distant trade to the same degree as did the Dutch. On the other hand, they devoted more of their energy to semi-piratical attacks on Spanish trade and on their outlying possessions, Sir Francis Drake being notable for such expeditions. The British thus at the time of the Spanish Armada were rather farther advanced in naval development than were their Dutch allies. The subsequent rise of Dutch sea power, however, soon inclined naval supremacy also to the Orange standard, and for many years the development of British sea power was held back by the overpowering competition of their continental rivals.

This rivalry between England and Holland for supremacy in sea power caused a long series of wars in which the English proved successful.

In the numerous wars of the two centuries ending with Napoleon's downfall in 1815 the royal navy became the leading element of British sea power, because it was vital to security, whereas commerce was vital to prosperity. Thus we see the real purpose of the navigation laws was to maintain a merchant marine capable of supporting the navy in war. The fostering of peacetime commerce was a distinctly secondary mission.

When England began planting her colonies on the shores of the New world she had little idea that out of these colonies would grow the nation which was to challenge, more successfully than any other nation had ever done, her supremacy on the sea. Yet such was the case, for as Commander Frost has pointed out, "From the very date of their founding the American colonies took to the sea. Their people were seafaring by nature, their precarious hold on the coast depended on their shipping, and the forests of America provided the finest timber for planking beams and spars."

The development of shipping was rapid and by the opening of the Revolution, Massachusetts, the principal maritime colony, had one seagoing vessel for every 100 inhabitants. But this did not mean that the new nation was yet ready to make any pretensions to naval power. From the beginning our privateers inflicted heavy losses upon British shipping but these would have been of little account had the Revolution been predominantly naval instead of military.

But even though the decisive battles of the Revolution were fought by the Americans on land instead of on sea, the exploits of such naval leaders as John Paul Jones, Esek Hopkins, Nicholas Biddle, Johshua Barney and John Barry, "the Father of the American Navy," promised well for the future sea power of the new republic after it was well established.

With the adoption of the Constitution and the act of congress of July 4, 1889, which laid the foundation for our merchant marine by establishing a tariff on imports and allowing a discount of 10 per cent on such duties where the goods were imported in vessels owned and built by American citizens, the American merchant marine experienced a growth which "is without parallel in the history of the commercial world." This was due to the fact that our people were seamen by instinct, that we had unlimited resources for shipbuilding and that the great wars in Europe, involving nearly all the leading nations, gave neutrals, such as the United States, a wonderful opportunity for development.

But with this development and the resultant prosperity came also its troubles. Privateers and pirates began preying upon our shipping. The British naval vessels stopped our ships and impressed our seamen, and each belligerent began seizing our shipping for entering the ports of its enemies. All these factors made the building of a navy imperative and during Washington's administration six frigates were authorized. The completion of these men-of-war soon brought to an end the "unofficial war" with France. We next turned our attention to the Barbary pirates and forced them to respect the American flag flying at the mast of a ship.

It was the dispute over the freedom of the seas that drove us into war again with England in 1812 and this conflict represents perhaps the most glorious period in the history of the American navy. While the war on land was a dismal failure and general after general was losing engagements with the enemy, on the sea American commanders were winning brilliant victory after brilliant victory. It was this war which gave to the frigate Constitution the name "Old Ironsides" and a record of victories which has never been equaled. More than that this gallant old vessel established the the principle of the freedom of the seas and made the Declaration of Independence a final and established fact.

After the War of 1812 our merchant marine continued to grow but the navy itself more or less stood still, so when the Civil war broke out the Confederates immediately fitted out swift cruisers to prey upon our commerce and our navy was powerless to protect our merchant marine from their depredations. On March 9, 1862, there was fought a battle at the mouth of the James river off Fortress Monroe in Virginia which changed the whole course of the naval history. It was the fight between the iron-clad Merrimac and the famous little cheese-box on a raft," John Ericsson's Monitor. When that battle ended warships of wood were obsolete and the new era of ironclads had begun.

But even though the United States had made this contribution to naval warfare we did not assume a place among the naval powers of the world until that May morning in 1898 when Admiral George Dewey's American gunners and American guns poured upon the Spanish fleet in Manila bay the hail of fire which won a decisive naval battle in record time. When it was over the rule of Spain as a naval power was at an end.

The close of the Spanish American war marked the beginning of the dreadnaught era in naval construction and the beginning of the costly naval armament race among the nations. In that race the leaders were Great Britain, United States, France and Germany. When the World war broke out Germany, bidding for a "place in the sun," and challenging the ancient boast of "Britannia rules the waves," brought into naval warfare a weapon which seemed destined to change naval history as much as did the Monitor. It was the submarine (an American invention, by the way) and how nearly she came to making it the decisive factor in the World war is too recent and familiar a story to need retelling here. But out of the horror of that great conflict has come the cry of humanity, "it must not happen again," and one of the steps toward answering that cry is the naval conference which meets in London this month.

EARLY DETECTION OF TB BIG HELP

Tuberculin Test When Properly Made Not Injurious.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Post-mortem examinations are often regarded as the final word in determining the presence of diseases in animals, although such examinations are valuable, the tuberculin test used in the eradication of bovine tuberculosis, is actually more reliable than the customary post-mortem for determining the presence of tuberculosis, according to Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

"The tuberculin test indicates the presence of the disease but does not show the progress which the infection has made within the body," Doctor Mohler states. "Hence in the early stages of the disease it is entirely possible for an animal which is actually infected with tuberculosis to show no visible signs on either ante-mortem or post-mortem examination.

"Tuberculin is a product prepared by sterilizing, filtering, and concentrating the liquid upon which the tubercle bacilli have been allowed to grow. It contains the sterile product of the growth of the germs, but not the germs themselves. When properly used it can have no possible injurious effect on healthy cattle. Tuberculin commonly used in testing live stock in the United States is made under government supervision, which assures its purity and potency.

"The results obtained thus far in systematic tuberculin testing show the effectiveness of this means for eliminating infected animals. During the last 12 years more than 1,500,000 tuberculous cattle have been removed from herds in the United States and more than 2,000,000 herds have been freed of the disease."

Adapted Feed for Pigs Just at Weaning Time

Corn, shorts, and skim milk plus bright, leafy fourth cutting alfalfa hay make a very satisfactory ration to feed pigs at weaning time. Sweet milk is to be preferred to sour milk. However, if the milk is allowed to sour in clean containers it should prove satisfactory. It is not advisable to change from sweet milk to sour milk or vice versa.

Brood sows should be fed all the alfalfa hay they will eat, together with just enough corn to keep them in thrifty breeding condition. Oats may be used to good advantage in the brood sow ration. Too much corn will cause the sows to become fat, lazy and unprofitable producers.—A. D. Weber, University of Nebraska.

Breeding Ewes Require Little Grain and Hay

When on alfalfa hay alone, a group of breeding ewes will require in the neighborhood of 3½ pounds of prairie hay per day per head. Usually one needs to figure about a 200-day winter feeding period. This would require a supply of 12 to 15 tons of hay.

It probably would pay you to feed a little grain to these ewes beginning around the first of February and continuing until they go on grass. About three-fourths of a pound of grain per head per day would be sufficient and most any type of grain that you can secure easily will be satisfactory. Oats fed alone or a mixture of one-half oats and one-half barley or one-half oats and one-half corn would do very well.

Live Stock Hints

The silage fed steers have invariably been found to be more uniformly finished than steers fed straw and grain only.

Registered cattle with long time records in their pedigrees are bringing the most money.

If one-half gallon of skim milk is fed per pig per day the amount of tankage may be reduced one-half.

If ewes are to have good lambs next spring, they must have proper feed and plenty of exercise this winter.

Horse specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture forecast an increased demand for well bred horses during the next few years.

Some alfalfa or clover hay should be included in the ration for calves or yearlings being fattened for market.

Damp floors in hog houses need attention. Often a line of drain tile around the foundation will eliminate dampness.

In the western cattle raising country the tendency is toward smaller farms and ranches, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Ranching now calls for more farming and hay making than ever before.

Carbon Monoxide Gas Is Dangerous

With the season of cold weather comes the increased danger to motorists from deadly carbon monoxide gas, warns the Chicago Motor club. The practice of starting engines in garages before opening garage doors results in many fatalities each year, according to reports received by the motorists' organization. Motorists should pay strict attention to ventilation in the garage, and, above all, should not "warm up" the car unless ample avenues of escape are available for exhaust gases. A cross-draft through the garage is most desirable.

Carbon monoxide gas has a numbing effect on the senses and many instances are recorded where motorists have died before they could span the short distance from the driver's seat to the fresh air," says a bulletin issued by the club.

"One of the best practices is to open the garage doors before starting the motor. Another is to connect the exhaust pipe with a pipe leading through the door, so that fumes will be carried out of the building. This can be done by means of rubber tubing and an extension on the exhaust.

"Owners who do their own mechanical work should be particularly careful that they do not leave the motor running without providing adequate ventilation. Only a few inhalations of carbon monoxide gas are required to cause fatal results.

"These suggestions are offered in the hope of reducing deaths attributable to the motor car. Very little co-operation is needed to prevent unnecessary monoxide fatalities, but the public must first be aware of the peril from those deadly fumes."

Trained Athletes Cannot Withstand Sea Sickness

"There is a great deal of evidence of an interesting nature to prove that athletes who have devoted their lives to training are more susceptible to sea sickness than travelers who have occasionally or oftener taken a drink," writes Grant Dixon.

"I know Christy Mathewson, the great pitcher of the Giants, refused to make the trip around the world when John McGraw and Comiskey took the two ball teams on the globe circling expedition several years ago. The only reason he would not go was because he could not look at water without getting sea sick; and Sam Crawford, the old Detroit player, suffered so much that he almost died. Eddie Collins, when he was married, made a honeymoon trip to Bermuda and was so sick that he tried to came back by train and for a while, I believe, thought of living there."

Seattle Helps Beaumont

When the baseball season rolls around again the Beaumont club of the Texas league may be accused of being a Seattle "farm." Last season, Beaumont had Paul Easterling, former Seattle star, playing in the outfield. This fall Beaumont obtained three more Indians in "Ox" Eckhardt and Charles Wade, outfielders, and Fred Pipgras, pitcher. With Easterling, Eckhardt and Wade in the outfield, the Texas club will have an all-Seattle outfielding combination.

How Many Can You Answer?

Q. Should a driver attempt to turn out of a rut at high speed?

Ans. No. This may cause a tire to blow, resulting in a skid or even overturning of the car.

Q. How many grade crossings were eliminated from the federal aid highway system of United States in 1928?

Ans. Three hundred ninety. Wisconsin led with 35; Alabama, second, 31; Michigan, third, 26; Texas, fourth, 25; Indiana, fifth, 24; Kansas, sixth, 23; Montana, seventh, 22; Georgia and Illinois, 21 each, and Mississippi, 17.

Q. During what year did Canada produce its largest number of automotive units? How many units were produced and what was their approximate value?

Ans. During 1928 Canada produced 242,054 automobile units valued at more than $162,867,000.

Q. How many different kinds of trouble can be attributed to missing spark plugs?

Ans. There are (1) sluggish engine; (2) slow pick-up; (3) loss of power; (4) hard starting; (5) engine loses power on hard pulls and cuts out at high speeds; (6) incomplete combustion, gas gets into crankcase, dilutes the oil and causes formation of carbon, excessive wear on pistons, cylinder walls and bearings.

Safety First System Is Popular in Ring

The Tunney regime of "Safety First" boxing has made a memory of the million-dollar gate. In the prize ring, the more collisions between fists and chin, the better financially for all concerned, declares Lou Magnolia, who is known as the dean of American referees.

"The Kid Lavignes cared nothing for defensive fighting; the Terry McGoverns held to the theory that the best defense was a vigorous and unrelenting offensive. They fought leaning forward," asserts Magnolia in the Liberty Magazine. "Tunney is typical of the safety first system now popular. He stands in the middle of the ring, turning warily around as his opponent circles. His right heel is off the floor—but his weight is on the ball of his right foot, prepared for advance—but likewise, prepared for instant retreat! His left arm is extended, his right glove clenched against his right breast, ready to shoot across if an opening comes—but, likewise, ready to protect his chin against a quick left hook!

"He is unmarked as he retires from the ring. The Jack Dempseys swarmed all over their foes and stepped backward only when knocked backward. The public paid $10,000,000 to see Jack in action in nine short bouts. It paid $1,085,000 to see Jack, a beaten titleholder, trying a comeback against Jack Sharkey of Boston. It paid less than $500,000 to see Gene Tunney, the world's champion, defend his title against Heeney. Which proves rather conclusively, I think, what it is the sporting public wants—and what it is the public does not care for."

Pirates Sign Suhr

Gus Suhr, first baseman, who was sold by the San Francisco Seals of the Coast league to the Pittsburgh Pirates recently. The Pirates gave Earl Sheely and a purported sum of $30,000 in cash for Suhr, who dashed out 51 home runs and hit .381 playing in every game during the 1929 baseball campaign. Suhr is a left-hand hitter.

Vacuum Gear Shifting Device

H. Newmark, New York automotive engineer, announces that after od of seven years of research and experiments, a vacuum gear shift-evice has been perfected which does away with the gear shifting lever only used on automobiles and enables the driver to do the shifting e wheel by fingertip control. The vacuum gear shift, it is explained, es a minimum of equipment and makes use of a natural element to the gears—the engine intake, used to create a vacuum. It requires o remove the cover plate of the present transmission box and to apply cial one, in order to place the new gear shifting device on cars in use. is done by attaching vacuum tubes leading to two small vacuum ers mounted on a cross member at the rear of the transmission case. ple line also runs to the motor intake pipe. A pretty young model strates the ease with which the gears may be shifted.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

PROPER CULTURE GIVES BIG CROP

More Raspberries Obtained by Better Methods.

Yields of almost three times the average may be obtained from raspberries on good soil with cultural methods that promote vigorous growing conditions, according to Richard V. Lott, assistant professor of horticulture at the Colorado Agricultural college.

Latest available figures show that there are only 613 acres of raspberries grown in Colorado, producing 643,678 quarts, or an average production of 1,058 quarts per acre, Mr. Lott says in a recent bulletin on "Small Fruits." Free copies of this booklet may be obtained by writing to the college.

Among measures suggested for substantially increasing yields are: Maintaining the soil fertility, keeping the soil in a high state of tilth, applying the correct amount of irrigation water, planting only the higher-yelding varieties, strict roguing of plants affected with mosaic, the use of sprays for spur blight if present and plowing out plantations more than ten to twelve years of age.

The average selling price of raspberries produced in the state is given as 24 cents a quart. Successful growers are those who secure the larger yields, it is pointed out, since all operations, except harvesting and marketing, cost just as much for a low yield as for a high yield. Therefore, rather than increase the acreage to secure more fruit, the successful grower increases his yield per acre through more attention to his operations.

Among the small fruits discussed in this bulletin are raspberries, blackberries, dewberries, logan berries, currants and gooseberries. Among the subjects dealt with are planting, cultivation, mulching, fertilization, irrigation, winter protection, fruiting habits, training, pruning, harvesting, grading, packing and insect control.

Control Field Mice by Using Fox Terrier Dogs

One practical orchardist in Ohio has for several years used fox terrier dogs to control field mice. He reports that this problem, which was quite serious with him, has been reduced materially in the course of a few years.

His orchard comprises 200 acres and at the several tenant homes over the farm he maintains one or more fox terrier dogs. To make the idea still more practical he keeps a female or two and raises puppies, which meet with ready sale.

One only has to watch a fox terrier in the act of digging out a field mouse to realize that here is an asset to the orchardist who is so located that he may keep a dog. Probably the black-and-tan or others of the small breeds of dogs would serve the same purpose.

Grafting Wax Formula and Its Application

Grafting is always done in the spring just at the time growth is starting. The cions or grafting wood should be cut somewhat earlier than that and kept in a cool, moist place so that the buds will remain entirely dormant. Cion wood is cut from the last season's growth.

Grafting wax is made by using the following formula: Four pounds resin, two pounds beeswax, one pound tallow. Melt all these ingredients over a slow fire. Keep it on the fire until the resin has entirely melted. Set it off and allow it to cool slightly after which it is poured into a large pail or tub filled with water.

Horticultural Hints

It is never advisable to plant trees in prairie sod.

On the very sandy land, it is desirable to plow furrows in which to plant the trees.

The new early McIntosh apple is ready to eat in August. It is handsome and of excellent quality.

An old strawberry patch can be worked up and renewed but as a rule it will not bear as well as a young patch.

Trees should be planted on land that has been under cultivation for some time, excepting in the case of very sandy land that would blow if cultivated.

In watering a tree remember that the roots occupy as wide a space in the ground as the top does above ground, hence the entire area shaded by the tree should be wet and not just the portion close to the trunk.

Newly planted trees need a liberal supply of moisture to insure their survival. If the soil is very dry when the trees are planted, they should be watered. After this, thorough cultivation, that will keep down all weeds and maintain a soil mulch, should be sufficient to meet their needs

New Strawberry Being Developed

Blakemore Is Vigorous and Resistant to Various Diseases.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A new variety of strawberry, the Blakemore, has been developed by the United States Department of Agriculture and will be introduced in the region from North Carolina to New Jersey this winter. The Blakemore, a cross between Missionary and Howard 17 (Premier), is adapted to the region beginning with the Carolinas on the south, up to and including New Jersey on the north. Extensive trials indicate that the new variety is superior in many respects to any of the varieties now grown in this territory.

Vigorous and Resistant.

The Blakemore is more vigorous and more resistant to disease than the Missionary. Runners are produced freely and perfect blossoms are borne. In eastern North Carolina the Blakemore has been more productive than the Missionary or Klondike, and ripens there two or three days earlier than Missionary, about the same time as Klondike, and two weeks earlier than Howard 17.

Blakemore berries are blunt conic in shape, have fewer white tips than Missionary, and color well on the under side. They are a bright light red, which does not turn dark on holding as the Missionary and Klondike do. Because of this feature the Blakemore berries are more attractive in the market, especially after they have been held several days. They do not shrivel as much on standing as the Klondike or Missionary berries, and have a tougher skin than either of these varieties, which makes them excellent for the market.

Is an Acid Berry.

The Blakemore is an acid berry of the Missionary and Klondike type, being higher in pectin than standard varieties. It has better dessert quality than Missionary or Klondike, and is excellent for preserving. It has been selected by representatives of the National Preservers' asosciation as the most desirable of all commercial varieties for preserving.

A new publication of the United States Department of Agriculture, Circular No. 93-C, "The Blakemore Strawberry," gives an account of the origin of the variety and the results of extensive field trials and suggests cultural methods. It may be obtained free from the office of information, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., as long as there is a supply available for free distribution.

Definite Plans Needed for Profitable Garden

Many good New Year resolutions are broken in poorly planned gardens. Folks get a sudden inspiration and decide it is time to put in the garden. They put in a little of this and a lot of that. They never know where a certain vegetable is planted until it comes up. By that time weeds may have covered it so it cannot be recognized. Their intentions are good but the hot weather seems to discourage them. About the middle of the summer they leave the garden and forget about it until fall.

The pencil is as important as the hoe in starting the garden. The advantage of the pencil over the hoe lies in the fact that it can be used long before the frost is out of the ground. The rows should first be marked off on a sheet of paper. The space for each vegetable, the depth of seeding, the distance apart in the rows and the time of planting should then be tabulated on the chart.

Agricultural Notes

A farm icehouse is a valuable asset.

Pigs will eat sufficient alfalfa if good quality hay is kept in a rack where they can help themselves at any time.

Early lambs marketed in May or June usually bring a higher price than lambs sent to market during the summer and fall.

It will take at least 30 days to bring calves to the point where they can be full fed on grain if they have not been accustomed to grain feeding before they were put into the feedlot.

Experienced poultrymen are careful not to feed enough protein to force the birds into laying before maturity. For Leghorns this is about six months of age, and for Rocks and Reds about a month later.

Feeding one-half pound of whole oats and shelled corn to each ewe daily will insure good breeding conditions and a better and more uniform lamb crop. The grains should be fed in equal proportions.

Fall pigs will grow nearly as fast as spring pigs if given the proper feed and care. Spring pigs have the advantage of pasture, which is the main reason they usually do better than pigs farrowed in the fall.

Any good commercial feed these days will grow good pullets or any good home mixed ration if prepared after a formula known to be good and known to have been formulated by reliable and informed people.

SCOUTING IN THE NORTH IA. COUNCIL

A Series Of Articles By W. Earl Hall, Editor Of The Globe-Gazette, Mason City, Ia.

Is Chief Scout Of U. S.

Mr. James E. West is the Chief Scout Executive of the United States. His offices are located at 2 Park Avenue in New York City, where with Dr. Geo. J. Fisher and a staff of department supervisors, Scouting for the United States is serviced. All Scouters of the United States may feel proud to know that their national headquarters offices in New York City are a model for efficiency and are being copied by many great concerns of that city.

The National Council of the Boy Scouts of America is a group of volunteer workers similar in nature to the council for the North Iowa Area with committees composed of men from all over the United States. Mr. Walter Head of Omaha is the National President.

The Scout Executives of the Boy Scout movement are the only paid and professional workers. All of the other 150,000 adults are volunteer workers. In the North Iowa County J. C. Underwood is the Scout Executive and L. Osam is the Field Scout Executive. These men, while they work under the supervision of the Area Executive Board, are the representatives of the National Boy Scout movement in this section of the state. It is their function to organize the Scouting program in the various communities of the Area in such a way that it is directed by people of the community. And further to give supervision, direction and training to the volunteer workers to the extent that they can successfully carry on the program. This is done through training courses, Courts of Honor, summer camp, committee meetings and personal conferences. The success of Scouting in a community depends entirely upon the extent to which the volunteer leaders avail themselves of the opportunities for training and service.

Boy Becomes A Scout At Twelve

A boy is eligible to become a Scout on his twelfth birthday. If he is of an eligible age, he should find out where the Troop meets, when it meets and who the Scoutmaster is. He is welcome to attend and will be made to feel that he is among friends. Someone will be delegated to explain the requirements of a Tenderfoot Scout to him and show him how to go about qualifying. He must pass the Tenderfoot tests successfully before he can wear the uniform or the Scout badge. To become a Tenderfoot Scout, he must know the history of the flag of the United States of America and the forms of respect due it. He must be able to tie nine knots quickly and know for what they are used. He must know the Scout Oath, the Law, the sign, the handclasp, salute and significance of the Scout badge.

After having served one month as a Tenderfoot Scout, he becomes a Second Class Scout by passing tests in signalling, cooking, Scout's pace, compass, tracking, thrift, etc.

To become a First Class Scout, he must serve two months as a Second Class Scout and pass more difficult and exacting tests in cooking, signalling, first aid, map-making, handcraft, nature study, swimming, etc.

Ninety Merit Badges

The full Merit Badge field of 90 badges is now open to the First Class Scout. This field of pre-vocational and avocational guidance will bring the Scout into contact with the very best men of any community. It is a work of research that will do much toward assisting any boy in choosing his life's calling.

To Become A Star Scout

Having earned any five Merit Badges, a First Class Scout is designated a Star Scout. Earning ten Merit Badges, five of which are optional and five required, a Scout is designated a Life Scout. Serving one year as a First Class Scout, and earning twenty-one Merit Badges, eleven of which are required and furnishing evidence of having lived according to the ideals of Scouting, makes a Scout eligible for the Eagle Scout degree, one quite difficult of attainment and greatly sought after by real Scouts.

When a boy has become an Eagle Scout, his life of 'getting" from Scouting has developed to the place that he can begin his life of "giving" to younger boys, a life of service and one that will be much richer for the "giving."

Annual Council Meeting

The Annual Council Meeting of the North Iowa Council, Boy Scouts of America, was held at the Hanford Hotel in Mason City, Friday January 10th at 6:00 P. M. It was a great "get-to-gether" meeting of about three hundred Scouters and their wives, and lady friends, if they had no wives. It was an informal gathering and was exceedingly interesting. Rev. Clinton of Fayette gave the main address. A number of special features were added this year.

(To be continued next week.)

TWO MORE MEN ANNOUNCE FOR COUNTY OFFICES

Both Jacobs And Meyer Should Be Elected Without Opposition

The Times is this week pleased to publish the announcement of Chris Jacobs of Garner, for County Auditor, and that of Henry C. Meyer of Britt for County Attorney.

Both of these men are entitled to the office which they seek without opposition.

Chris Jacobs is serving this first term as County Auditor. Mr. Jacobs is a very efficient man, is always pleasant to meet, and knows all about everything connected with his office and is ever ready to give prompt service when called upon. If Chris was running for the twenty-fifth time we would say to the voters to just keep on putting him in office. He is a man of real value to the county, and when we have a good man we beleive in keeping him there as long as he gives the taxpayers the service they want. And that's Chris! We are for him and will support him.

Henry C. Meyer needs no introduction to the people of our county for he served efficiently as County Auditor a few years ago, and prior to that time was a member of the Board of Supervisor. Henry had a hankering for law and devoted a lot of study to it and eventually passed the bar examinations and was admited to practice. A few months ago Co. Atty. V. S. White resigned and Mr. Meyer was given the appointment, and is at the present time serving as our County Attorney, and as far as we know is doing a good job of it. He is in line for the office and should be elected without any opposition.

HOWARD HORNE, LOCAL C. T. A. TESTER QUITS TO FARM

Has Been In Community About One Year; Will Farm At Mt Ayr

Howard Horne, who for the past year has been the official tester for the Garner-Klemme Cow Testing Association, has resigned his position and has left for Mt Ayr, Iowa, where he will farm in partnership with his father this coming year.

Mr. Horne was a fine young man and his many farmer friends will surely miss his regular visits. Before coming to Hancock County Mr. Horne looked after dairy herds in Michigan and Illinois. On his father's farm Howard will continue in the dairy business as they have a fine herd of pure bred and grade Holstein cattle.

Clyde Carrier, of Strawberry Point, Iowa, will take over the work of tester in the local C. T. A. He is highly recommended and has been testing in Minnesota the past year.

ROCK ISLAND LAUDS KLEMME CREAMERY

ROCK ISLAND HANDLED 56 CAR LOADS KLEMME BUTTER

Rock Island Service Was Very Fine Says Manager A. D. Gimer

The Klemme Co-Operative Creamery Company—received a letter from Mr. A. A. Wolleck, Div. Freight Agent at Estherville, dated 1-13-'30, in which Mr. Wolleck congratulated the Klemme Creamery in the amount of business done the past year, and saying that the Rock Island had handled 56 cars of Butter out of Klemme in 1929. Mr. Wolleck further stated he had not had a complaint of any kind about the service given during the entire year.

Mr. A. D. Gimer, manager of the Creamery informed The Times that there was no reason for complaint as all through the summer months the Rock Island brought up a refrigerator car from the south in the morning, which was then loaded and the evening pasenger again took it south. Gimer says the Rock Island service was very good, that the cars were always properly iced and made ready. He says he has nothing but praise to offer the Rock Island in handling the Creamery shipments.

A part of this butter is credited to Dows who shipped in the same car with Klemme.

OBITUARY OF MRS. WILSON

Florence May Nickerson, eldest daughter of Henry W. and Martha Nickerson was born at Christianburg, Ind., the 28th of March 1871, and died at her home in East Columbus, January 1st, 1930.

At the age of twelve years she was converted and united with the Methodist Church, to which faith she remained true until her death.

On April 5, 1891, she was united in marriage to George A. Wilson To this union were born nine children: Howard W. Wilson, of Ingram, Wisconsin; Leafy D. Coobs and Lurley O. Buss of Klemme, Iowa; Eunice I. Polle of Flint, Michigan; Russell T. Wilson, of Anderson, Indiana; Robert A. Wilson and Glethal I. Timbrook of Columbus. Two other children, Georgia and Ruby, preceded their mother in death.

Her early married life was spent in Illinois, later she moved with her family to Iowa and in 1920 came back to Indiana, moving her membership to the E. Columbus Methodist Church.

She leaves besides her husband and children, 9 grand children, one brother, Wm. I. Nickerson of Christiansburg, Indiana, a number of neices and nephews and a host of friends who will miss her.

She was a true Christian, a good neighbor and a loving mother and was ever faithful to her family and her God.

Funeral services were held Friday afternoon at the East Columbus Methodist Church, the Rev. J. Dyer officiating. Interment was made in Garland Brook Cemetery.

NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Supervisors have levied for the year 1930 a tax on dogs in the amount of $3.00 for each male and $5.00 for each female, except where the towns have exacted a dog tax, the dog tax shall be $1.00 for each male and $3.00 for each female dog and except dogs kept in kennels which shall be assessed as other personal property.

Also in accordance with Chapter 20 of the 43rd G. A., the assessor of each Township shall collect, while making the assessment, a road poll tax amounting to $4.00 from every male person over the age of 21 years and under 45 years who are residents of the county outside the corporate limits of towns.

IOWA FARM BUREAU IN ANNUAL MEETING

HANCOCK COUNTY PEOPLE ATTEND F. B. CONVENTION

Hancock County Well Represented At Des Moines This Week

Mr. W. L. Lawhorn of Garner and Mr. J. A. Chambers of the Hancock County Farm Bureau are in Des Moines this week as delegates and alternate to the annual meeting of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation.

They will represent this county in the action on the convention floor Many subjects of importance to rural Iowa are to be taken up at the annual meeting this year, including tax revision, rural education, rural electrification and marketing.

Speakers from out of the state who are at the convention in Des Moines include: Ed. O'Neal of Montgomery, Ala., vice president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; M. S. Winder, Executive secretary of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and Mrs. Burl Hornbeck, of Winchester, Ill., women's Farm Bureau leader of that state.

Others attending the state convention from this county include:

Mrs. Axel Trulson, Britt; Mrs. Ed. Oxley, Corwith; Mr. E. J. Blumer, Garner; Mr. A. C. Frederickson, Britt; Mr. G E. Klipping, Forest City; Mr. M. T. Love, Garner; Mr. W. R. Prelip, Meservey; Mr. Wm. Nall, Britt; Mr. E. H. Olsen, Britt; Mr. R. W. Elder, Klemme; Mrs. W. L. Lawhorn, Garner; Mr. Oscar Gorman, Woden; Mr. V. P. Casperson, Garner; Mr. Charles Grau, Garner; Mr. Penn Eckels, Britt; Mr. Fairfield Dean, Corwith; Mr. Henry Nolte, Goodell, and Mr. C. L. Smith, Britt.

KLEMME AUXILIARY NOTES

By Mrs. P. W. Johnson

The hospitable home of Leppo Blank was opened to Legion and Auxiliary members last Thursday evening. A most enjoyable time was had and all present thank Mr. Blank and Miss Grace for it. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

The Auxiliary voted to subscribe for the Iowa Legionaire to be placed in the hands of the president who will file it for future reference, or for the use of anyone interesetd in reading it.

They also voted to put on a home talent play. Watch for the date and plan to come.

Mrs. Pavey was put in charge of a membership drive. We have seven more names to send in this week.

If the committee doesn't see you, hand in your dollar anyway. By joining it gives you the opportunity to help care for those pale, broken men who gave their health for their country; to look after the children whose fathers were taken for a bigger duty; to aid in the development of this great country for which so many have been willing to die; to raise a voice for the maintenance of its defenses; to assist in fostering its international friendships and to stand guard over its principals and ideals. It is a big thing to offer any woman and as the full meaning of membership in the Auxiliary is more widely understood the eligible women of America are seeking it in ever increasing numbers.

METHODIST CHURCH PROPERTY SOLD AT AUCTION

At the public autcion held Saturday to dispose of Methodist church property consisting of the parsonage and the parish house, the parsonage was bid in by J. C. Thomas for the sum of $437.50. Charlie and Karl Kraus bought the Parish House for $212.00, and Karl also bid in the furnace for $15.50.

J. C. Thomas was given the privilege of buying a lot south of Rev. Whyte's parsonage for $150, which he did, and wil move his house to that lot in the spring.

We understand the property must be off the ground by April 1st.

FIRST REAL BLIZZARD OF THE SEASON IN NORTH IOWA

Ten Inches Of Snow Accompanied By Sub-Zero Temperatures

Our balmy winter weather came to a sudden halt when the mercury began to drop Sunday with snow over North Iowa. Continued snow storms piled up the white fluff to a depth of near ten inches and with northwest winds whiped it into high banks, blocking traffic for a short period. Main roads were opened at once when snow plows worked thruout North Iowa highways. The side roads and county roads have not yet been opened and are impassible to cars. With calm weather the secondary roads will be open in a few days.

The thermometer register around 19 to 20 degrees below zero this morning.

KLEMME CAGERS STILL UNDEFEATED

BASKET BALL TEAM STILL HAS WINNING STREAK

Have Hung Up Every Scalp So Far This Season

Our boys in basket ball continue their winning streak. They came home victorious last Friday evening from Swaledale after defeating their opponents 21 to 14. They were in the lead during the whole of the game. We hope they can continue their pace. They meet on Friday night of this week the high school boys from Hayfield and should win but are not justifiably confident for Hayfield has hte reputation of coming back strong and will be here to do their utmost to avenge their defeat on their own floor last month Those who come may expect a tough battle and anybody's game until the final pistol shot is fired. Game will be called at 7:30.

Schoolmaster's Club Met

On last Saturday the Schoolmaster's Club of Hancock County met in Kanawha at the home of Supt. Wolf. Each town or graded school was represented by its superintendent, except Woden and Goodell. After lunch a business meeting was held at the Kanawha schoolhouse when matters pertaining to the Club's county program was discussed and acted upon. The date for the first round of the county declamatory contests was fixed for the week ending February 7. Klemme and Crystal Lake were decided upon for the places.

Contest To Be Held Here

Klemme's local contest must be held therefore, January 27 or 28. It seems necessary to hold the preliminary county contest here either February 3 or 6. One or the other of these dates will be decided upon later. There are twelve of our young people working each day for this local contest last of January.

County Basket Ball Tourny

Permission could not be obtained from the Athletic Board of Control to hold our County basket ball tournament on Feb. 28 and March 1. We could do naught else but prepare to stage it a week earlier and the new date set is Feb. 21 nad 22.

First Semester Concluded

This week concluded the first semester of our school year and written tests are the order. Some new courses are being offered next semester. Our Sophomore class will begin Industrial Geography and Animal Husbandry, while our Juniors and Seniors together will start work in Civic Sociology, and will elect between advanced or third semester Algebra and Physiology. Our 8th grade, who have been concluding their American History course, will take up Elementary Community Civics.

Lets Keep Tho Band Going!

Mr. Storer, our band leader from Mason City, has concluded the period for which he has been engaged. We hope arrangements can be made for another three months work with our boys, for they have gotten off to a fine start and should be permitted to continue their study. It may be possible to arrange for Mr. Storer to come again on next Wednesday night, but arrangements must be made prior to this date to meet his financial demands. This could not be done earlier. Those interested are urged to make their wishes known to the Superintendent.

Not So Good

Lady (to little boy): "What are you crying for sonny?"

Little boy: "My brother and I were having a race to see who could lean out of the window farthest, and I won."

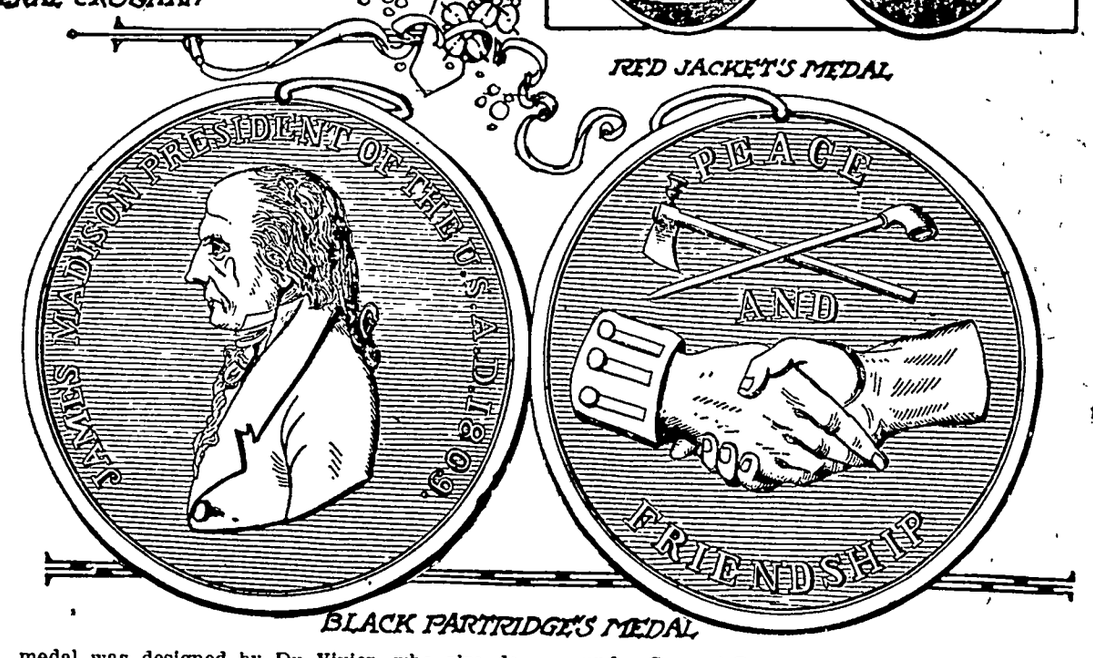
WASHINGTON MEDAL

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED TO GENERAL CROGHAN

RED JACKET'S MEDAL



BLACK PARTRIDGE'S MEDAL

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

FOLLOWING an established custom, the United States mint recently issued the thirtieth in the series of Presidential medals this one commemorating the inauguration of Herbert Hoover as President of the United States. The medal is made of bronze and will be sold to the public for $1.00, which is its value in United States currency. Any one in this series is available to the public at the same cost.

The first of these medals to be struck is that undraped bust of Washington facing the right, with the inscription, "George Washington, President of the United States," and the date, 1789. The artist who designed this medal was Pierre Simon du Vivier, grandson of Jean du Vivier, known as Du Vivier "ie pere," the first of a distinguished family of medal engravers, who, at the beginning of the Seventeenth century, lived in Lige.

The reverse of the medal has the legend "Peace and Friendship," and two hands clasped in token of amity. On the cuff of the left wrist there are three stripes and buttons with the American eagle; the other wrist is bare; above, the pipe of peace and tomahawk are crossed, Indian emblems of peace and war.

The reverse of this medal is repeated on the medals of the Presidents from Washington to William Henry Harrison, who died after one month in office. The reverse of the Harrison medal bears this inscription, with a laurel wreath: "Inaugurated President of the United States March 4, 1841. Died April 4, 1841."

The medals of John Tyler, 1841, James K. Polk, 1845, and Zachary Taylor, 1849, have the same reverse as the Washington medal—clasped hands with the calumet and tomahawk.

The artist who designed the medal for Millard Fillmore, 1850, placed on the reverse a different design, but still typifying the friendship between the United States and the Indians—a white man and an Indian stand before a flag in an agricultural scene; above, "Labor, Virtue, Honor." This design is repeated on the reverse of the Pierce and Buchanan medals.

The medal struck for Abraham Lincoln carries on the obverse his head, bearded, facing the right with the simple lettering, "Abraham Lincoln." On the reverse, "Inaugurated President of the United States, March 4, 1861. Second term, March 4, 1865. Assassinated April 14, 1865," surrounded by an oak wreath. The simplicity of this medal and the fine balance of lettering make it one of the most artistic of the series.

The next medal, the Andrew Johnson, is the last to bear a representation of the peace between the United States and the Indians. On the reverse is the figure of Columbia, in a flowing robe, grasping the hand of an Indian chief before a tomb surmounted by the bust of Washington.

Except for the portraits there are but slight differences in the later medals, most of which bear on the reverse the simple lettering stating the dates of inauguration. For William McKinley two medals were struck, the second commemorating his assassination on September 6, 1901. The reverse of this represents the mourning figure of Columbia, designed by Mr. Morgan, the artist who later engraved the Harding medal.

The Presidential medals, however, are only a small part of those authorized by congress and struck by the mint in order to perpetuate the fame of Americans of outstanding achievement. Among the most interesting of the others are the medals given officers of the army and navy as a part of their reward for distinguished services. This custom began during the Revolution, the first one being a medal in commemoration of the retaking of Boston in 1776. The medal bears the bust of Washington with the inscription, "Georgio Washington Supremo duci exercituum adsertori liberatis." (The American Congress to George Washington, Commander-in-Chief of the armies, assertor of liberty.) On the reverse, "Hostibus primo fugatis." (The enemy put to flight for the first time.) Washington on his horse, surrounded by his staff, points to the British fleet which is leaving Boston. The American army in battle array makes ready to occupy the city. This fine medal was designed by Du Vivier, who also designed the Presidential medal of Washington.

Thereafter the Continental congress voted such an award to nearly every general who won a battle, as for example the gold medal given to Gen. Daniel Morgan and the silver medals to his subordinates for their victory at Cowpens, or who won a campaign, such as Gen. Nathaniel Greene, for his brilliant maneuvers in the South which wore out his opponent, Lord Cornwallis, and led finally to Yorktown and the British surrender.

The small Washington medal (shown above) is typical of the many which were struck after the death of the first President. This one, which was made of silver and is described as "a little larger and thicker than the Spanish quarter of a dollar," was designed by Dudley A. Tyng, collector of customs at Newburyport, Mass., at that time and was made by Jacob Perkins, a well-known engraver and die-cutter. This is only one of the many bearing the head of Washington, there being about fifty others, not to mention an even greater number in which his features appear in some combination.

After John Paul Jones in the Bon Homme Richard won his great naval victory over the Serapis during the Revolution, congress passed resolutions in his honor three times and also presented him with a gold medal. And that started a veritable flood of medals for our naval heroes which reached its high tide during the War of 1812. One was struck in 1800 in honor of Thomas Truxton's victory over a French ship and another in 1804 in honor of Commodore Preble's services in subduing the Barbary pirates. Then came the second war with England with its series of American victories on the sea to dispel some of the gloom caused by the repeated defeats on the land. It brought medals to Capt. Isaac Hull, Commander Jacob Jones, Capt. Stephen Decatur, Capt. William Bainbridge, Capt. Oliver Hazard Perry, Capt. Jesse D. Elliott, Capt. James Lawrence, Lieut. William Burrows, Lieut. Edward McCall, Capt. Robert Henley, Lieut. Stephen Cassin, Commodore Thomas MacDonough, Capt. Johnston Blakeley, Capt. Lewis Warrington, Capt. Charles Stewart and Capt. James Biddle.

But that the war on land was not all defeats is shown by the fact that valorous military services won medals for the following: Gen. William Henry Harrison and Gov. Isaac Shelby of Kentucky at the Battle of the Thames; Gen. James Miller, Gen. Winfield Scott, Gen. Edmund Gaines, Gen. Jacob Brown, Gen. Peter Porter and Gen. Eleazer Ripley at the Battles of Chippewa, Niagara and Erie; Gen. Alexander Macomb at the Battle of Plattsburgh; Gen. Andrew Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans, and Gen. George Croghan at the defense of Fort Stephenson, Sandusky.

The latter was one of the most brilliant feats in all American history. Croghan, a nephew of George Rogers Clark and a youngster of twenty-four, who had already won the rank of major, was placed in command of Fort Stephenson, a ramshackle old stockade which was the outpost protecting the supplies and munitions of all the American armies in the Northwest. His garrison consisted of 160 officers and men, but this tiny force successfully withstood the assaults of 3,000 Indians under Tecumseh and 600 British regulars under General Proctor, inflicting such heavy losses that the enemy was forced to retreat. The American loss was only one killed and seven wounded! By this victory the safety of the American supply depots was assured, the state of Ohio was delivered from the fear of British and Indian invasion and the Old Northwest was again saved to the American flag.

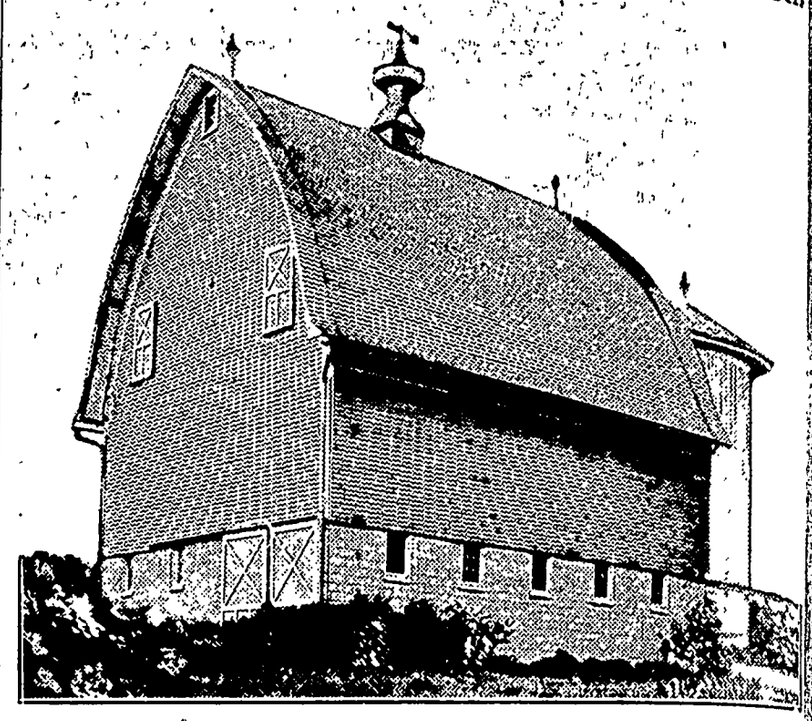
Croghan's medal was one of the 42 awarded by specific acts of congress down to the time of the Civil war. Eleven were given for deeds performed during the Revolution, one each for the French and Tripolitan war, 27 for the War of 1812 and two for the Mexican war. The only medals awarded during the Civil war were to General Grant and Commodore Vanderbilt and only one was given during the Spanish-American war—to Admiral Dewey. After that war the general medal of honor took the place of the old-fashioned congressional award.

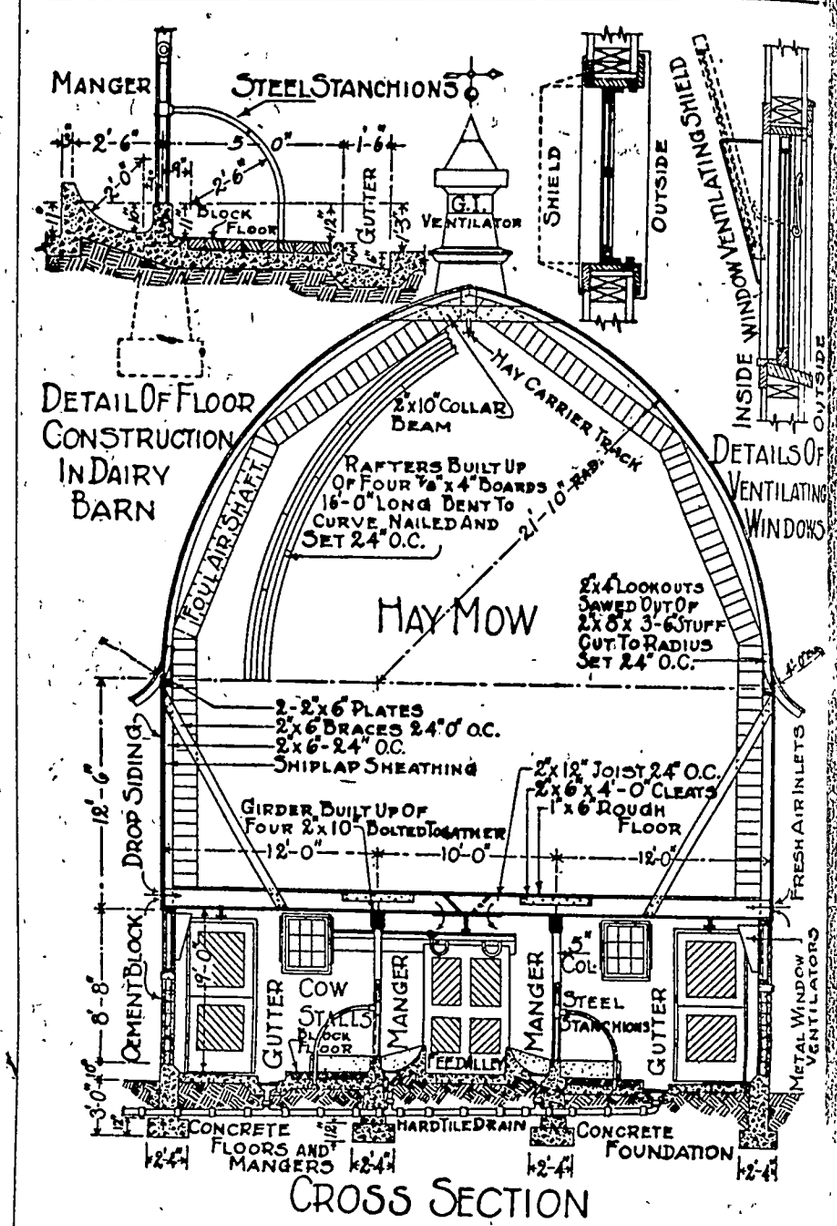
Early in its history the United States began issuing medals for the War department to present to Indian chieftains on the conclusion of treaties of peace. The Red Jacket medal (shown above), owned by the famous Seneca chief, was typical of the medals issued during the administration of President Washington. It was given to Red Jacket in 1792 after the United States and the Six Nations had signed a treaty of peace soon after the close of the Revolution. This medal is made of silver, with a heavy rim, and is five inches in width and nearly seven inches in length. The devices upon it were engraved, it is said, by David Rittenhouse, the famous Philadelphia philosopher who was a jeweler in his younger days.

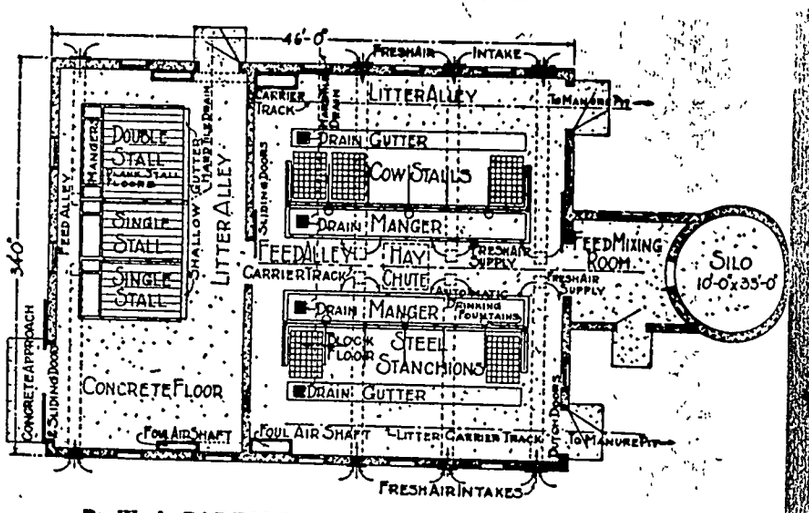
Large numbers of medals similar to this one were presented to the chiefs who signed the Treaty of Greenville in 1795 and came to be regarded as insignia of leadership, being handed down from one generation to another in tribes where the chieftainship was hereditary. About the time of the administration of Jefferson the regular Presidential medal was used for presentation to the Indians and one of these which had an especially interesting history is the Black Partridge medal (shown above), once the property of the famous Pottawatomie chief, who played such a noble role at the Fort Dearborn massacre in 1812.

When Black Partridge learned that Captain Heald, commander at Fort Dearborn, had been ordered to evacuate that post he went to him and said: "Father, I come to deliver to you the medal I wear. It was given me by the Americans, and I have long worn it in token of our mutual friendship. But our young men are resolved to imbrue their hands in the blood of the white people. I cannot restrain them, and I will not wear a token of peace while I am compelled to act as an enemy." How true was his warning was shown by the scenes of horror which followed when the little garrison marched out of the fort and started on its march to Fort Wayne. In the midst of the slaughter it was Black Partridge who saved Mrs. Helm, the wife of one of the officers, from the attack of an infuriated young brave, a deed which is commemorated in the Fort Dearborn massacre monument which stands at the foot of Eighteenth street in Chicago today.

Combination Dairy and Horse Barn Valuable Addition to Farm







By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all problems pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

A great majority of farmers keep dairy cows because these animals provide a constant cash income. To make dairy cows more profitable, they should have a house especially designed to keep them comfortable in winter when they are inside most of the time, and to make the work of caring for the animals easier for the owner.

For the dairyman who has ten or twelve cows and several horses the design of barn shown in the accompanying illustration is good. Here is a dairy stable which occupies about two-thirds of the first floor and a horse barn the balance. To conform with the health requirements of most states a concrete wall has been provided to separate the dairy cattle from the horses. The connection between the two stables is through a center door in this concrete partition wall. This opening is closed by a sliding door which is hung so that it fits tight and will keep the odors from the horse stable out of the cow stable, which is a state requirement of dairymen who are selling whole milk.

This barn is 46 feet long and 34 feet wide. The dairy stable provides space for 12 stations, all facing a center feed alley. Over this alley is a carrier track which leads from the silo and feed mixing room through the dairy stable to the horse stable. The mow floor is connected with the stable by a hay chute placed in the center of the dairy stable.

Fresh air, plenty of water and sunshine are the three things which make dairy cattle comfortable. All of these are provided in the design shown. The equipment for both stables and specified on the floor plan which accompanies the exterior view of the barn.

The walls of the stable are of concrete block and act as a foundation for the plank frame constructed barn above. One window is provided for two of the 12 cows. On the roof is a suction ventilator which is connected by air shafts with the stable to suck out the foul air and replace it with fresh air from the intakes in the exterior walls.

This is the type of barn that will appeal to the average farmer as it provides space for the herd of about the average size and for the number of horses used on the farm of from 160 to 200 acres.

Colored Floors of Oak Popular With Architects

Colored oak floors are becoming popular among some of the modern architects. Light and dark finishes are giving way to grays, greens, lavenders and other tints to harmonize with interior decorations.

In some of the newer house different colored floors are used in different rooms. For instance, there may be a "weathered" finish in the living room, a dark gray in the dining room, a light forest green in the sun parlor and lavender or some other delicate shade in the bedrooms.

Experiments have shown that oak flooring is one of the woods best adapted to these stains. Its close grain absorbs the stain sufficiently for a fine finish, yet it does not permit the stain to penetrate much below the surface. Consequently an oak floor that has been stained can be scraped and given a natural finish or be stained some other color.

PORTABLE OUTFIT PRECOOLS FRUITS

Device Easily Carried From One Car to Another.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A simple device which enables fruit growers and shippers to convert an ordinary refrigerator car into a "precooling plant" has been perfected by workers of the United States Department of Agriculture. The device weighs only 85 pounds complete and is easily carried from car to car. Its use allows the fruit to be loaded directly in the car from the packing house, thus saving the cost of extra handling incident to a trip to a precooling plant. This arrangement saves time and labor for the growers, and in addition it makes possible the cooling of fruit loaded at many small shipping points where no precooling plant is available.

The portable precooling device consists of a small electric motor and a high-speed blower. When two of these motor-driven blowers are put into operation in the bunkers of an iced and loaded car, the natural circulation of air is reversed. The cold air is pulled up from the ice compartments at each end of the car and blown out over the top of the load, cooling the top layers much faster than they would be cooled with the natural circulation.

The new device has been used for precooling strawberries in North Carolina and Florida and for peaches in Georgia. More recently it has been used with success in precooling citrus fruits in Florida. The portable feature is especially important.

Because of the simple construction of these units the cost of a complete outfit is less than $250. The cost of operation depends upon the cost of electrical current and the kind of fruit to be cooled, but trials made so far indicate that the total operating cost for precooling a car of strawberries should not exceed $5.

Assembling of these outfits has been started on a small scale by a commercial concern. However, the device is covered by a public service patent, and anyone who cares to may assemble his own unit.

Transplant Strawberry Plants Early in Spring

The safest time to transplant strawberry plants is early in the spring, but if one has plenty of plants at home so that they need not be bought, it is a good plan to do some of the planting in the autumn as, if they succeed, runners will start earlier next spring and, in 1931, the crop is likely to be greater than from plants set next spring. However, there is always danger of the plants heaving out and being killed when planted in the autumn, hence, if they have to be purchased it is not wise to take the risk. Where plants are grown by the matted row system, it is not possible to mulch the ground with paper as the runners could not root, but where grown in hills the plan is to make a notch in the strip of paper where each plant is to go and after a row is planted lay another strip as close as possible to the row with notches on the far side for the next row of plants. The paper is put down when the plants are set out.

Horticultural Notes

More growers each year find that to thin overloaded trees increases their profits.

Damage to fruit trees by rodents is always heavier in years of heavy mast fall.

Young trees have a present value but use timber is going to be needed in the future.

Flavor is the first factor influencing the consumer when buying apples. Color comes second.

Profits depend primarily on yield and secondarily on price, which means: Site, soil, grades, variety, and price, in the order named, are the most important factors in apple production.

Prune young peach trees up to three years old only enough to insure a fairly open center, good distribution of main limbs, and a light heading back to outside limbs of leaders making heavy growth.

The University of Minnesota is the owner of a patent on the process for ripening fruits with ethylene gas which was discovered by Dr. R. B. Harvey, University farm.

The orchard which does not produce quantity, even though quality and returns are fair, is unprofitable and sooner or later must quit.

Quantity yield of high quality fruit should be the goal of every apple grower. With fair returns, profits multiply fast as this goal is reached.

Smaller Potato Packs Demanded

New Style Bags Have Met With Considerable Favor Among Housewives.

Small, branded packages of potatoes of uniformly high quality are being demanded more and more by the modern housewife in preference to the large sacks or barrels of potatoes, according to Carl H. Metzger, associate state horticulturist at the Colorado Agricultural college.

New Style Packs Favored.

These new style packages have met with considerable favor in several states. Idaho has put up some 50-pound bags which have met with substantial success in certain markets. Last year the Michigan Potato Growers' exchange put up a car in 15-pound branded unbleached muslin bags which brought $125 more per car than the standard pack. They also brought repeat orders.

Colorado has shipped 50-pound crates of fancy baking potatoes with much success. The national potato institute is urging the universal adoption of a 100-pound bag which would mean easier handling and a uniform package in competing markets instead of the 120-pound and 150-pound bags and barrels.

Colorado and Idaho have used the 120-pound bags, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan the 150-pound bags, and the far-eastern states have used barrels. But such packages are too bulky for apartments in which more people are living today.

There is more impatience with waste and anything that takes time. The modern housewife will not take time to prepare a rough, deep-eyed, half-rotten potato. Even the grocers show this same tendency. They no longer desire to take the time and trouble to handle potatoes in bulk.

Other Commodities in Packs.

Many other commodities are being sold now only in attractive small packages, Mr. Metzger points out. Rolled oats, raisins, tapioca and other foods which were once sold only in bulk, are now put up in good looking packages of moderate size, under definite, well-advertised brands. Consumers are accustomed to asking for certain brands which have pleased them in the past. They know from experience that every package will be just as good as the last one used.

But potatoes, with few exceptions, are still put up in almost as crude a manner as they were 20 years ago. Of course the quality has improved because of better grading. The branding of bags has gained much headway in recent years, but few consumers ever see the big bags, from which they buy small lots, and so they never see the brands. There are some markets which will always use a large package, but the present trend is toward a small, attractively branded package, of uniformly high-quality potatoes.

Woodlot Improvements in Winter Easily Made

Most forestry experts agree that winter is the most suitable time for improving the farm shelter belts and woodlots, since the farm owner has more time, timber is more easily handled, and it gives a chance for the horses to earn part of their winter board. Winter-cut logs are better than those cut in summer, since they season more evenly and are less damaged by insects.

The lumber should be looked upon as an annual crop, to be harvested by cutting out for lumber and fuel the trees that are fully matured and starting to deteriorate, diseased trees, dead and down ones and those which are crowding out younger trees of more valuable species. The second growth coming on should be carefully watched and all poor trees removed which are preventing more valuable ones from growing. In some places the good new growth may be too thick and in other places to thin, and some resetting of very small trees may be advisable.

One should plan the cutting operations several years ahead, and start cutting this winter with that general plan in mind. The state agricultural college should be consulted as to the good and poor varieties and how the thinning should be done, and also as to the value of the different trees and how and where they should be marketed.

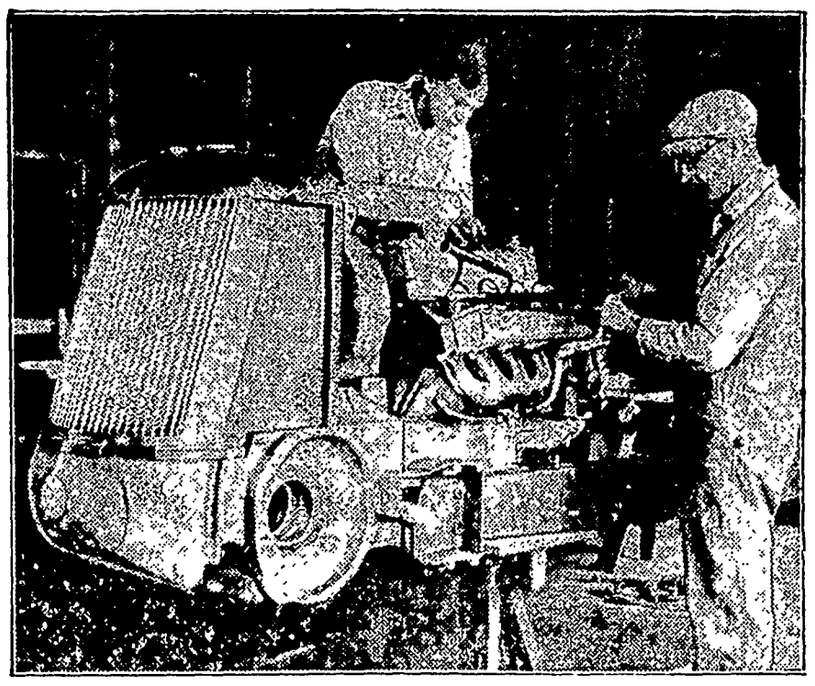
FINAL TOUCHES ON FRONT DRIVE ENGINE



Plenty of speed and power will be obtained from this $25,000 roadster according to Harry A. Miller, famous racing expert of Los Angeles, who is building it for Phillip Chancellor. The roadster will have a front drive and its eight cylinders will be capable of giving it a normal touring speed of 125 miles an hour. The automobile will have a 300 horse power motor.

MOTOR TRUCK NOW BIG FARM FACTOR

Hard-Surfaced Roads Facilitate Marketing of Wheat in Ohio.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In Ohio, after hard-surfaced highways have become common, the use of the motor truck in taking wheat from the field to the country elevator has become a very important factor in the tremendous after-harvest congestion at country and terminal elevators, says Charles M. Fritz, grain exchange supervisor of the Chicago office of the grain futures administration of the United States Department of Agriculture, following a survey of the development of recent years in harvesting and marketing the Ohio wheat crop.

Permit Use of Trucks.

"The hard-surfaced highways which have been built throughout the countryside," says Mr. Gritz, "permit the use of motor trucks for hauling wheat from the farm, which not only shortens the time required for hauling but also permits taking larger loads. Perhaps the longest haul now required at various Ohio points to move the farmer's wheat is about eight miles. With a horse-drawn vehicle this trip would have required the greater part of a day, and the average load would have ranged from about 50 bushels in hilly country to about 100 bushels on good level roads. Under those conditions the weather was an important factor in the movement, as wheat was hauled to market generally in fair weather when the roads were dry. Under present-day conditions the trip is made by motor truck in about two and one-half hours, and loads ranging from 85 to 145 bushels are hauled regardless of weather conditions."

Trucks for Delivery.

Mr. Fritz has observed a growing tendency among Ohio farmers to sell their wheat f. o. b. the farm, and to make purchases of fertilizer, lime, and mixed feed on terms including delivery at the farm. In order to make such deliveries, Ohio elevators have equipped trucks for delivery purposes, charges being fixed on a cost basis and incorporated as a part of the sales contract, at rates less than the farmer can transport such commodities from elevator to farm. The farmer can now arrange with a local elevator relative to date of threshing and the elevators will supply motor trucks which will be in the wheat field at the beginning of operations. By this method the entire lot of grain is moved to the local elevator in less than a single day. Commercial trucking companies also participate in the wheat movement in the rush season, and wheat is carried until midnight, and receiving and elevation taken care of. "Obviously such an extremely rapid movement of grain from country to elevator," says Fritz, "is a severe strain upon the equipment and storage facilities of the local elevators. The speed at which the railroads today transport wheat during the 'new crop' movement is also a substantial factor in the enormous accumulations of wheat at terminals during the after-harvest rush movement.

"In years past," Mr. Frits reports, "the railroads' box-car equipment was based on a 60,000-pound capacity car. The present car has a capacity of either 80,000 or 100,000 pounds. The use of the 60,000-pound capacity car established a custom among shippers and receivers of loading 1,100 bushels of red winter wheat for a carload. Receivers and mills are being urged by the railroads to use the larger units, for very few 60,000-pound cars remain that can be used for grain shipment. Consequently, the carload is increasing from 1,100 to 1,400 and 1,600 bushels. This increase in car capacity has a tendency to increase the total number of bushels in the daily receipts at terminals, while the number of cars received may not denote a material increase over the daily carlot receipts of former years."

The Motor Quiz

How Many Can You Answer?

Q. What is done with a reckless driver in China who kills a person?

Ans. It is said the driver is placed against a wall and shot.

Q. How many American motorists and cars toured Canada this year and approximately how much money was spent by the tourists?

Ans. About 12,000,000 motorists in 3,700,000 cars toured Canada, spending approximately $180,000,000.

Q. Why should a car be moved to level ground before jacking it up?

Ans. The car may roll off the jack, and run over anyone unable to get out of the way. It also may run away. If it is impossible to move the car to level ground it is a very good plan to securely block the wheels that remain on the ground.

Q. Why is it necessary to renew the oil filter at 10,000 miles?

Ans. Because the filtering element becomes filled with foreign matter at this mileage.

Stop Light Indicator Very Handy Accessory

The common method of hooking the dash light in series with the tail-light, using three-volt bulbs at each point, works nicely with the tail-light, but the system does not work with the stop light, which uses a much more powerful bulb, for no one wants a large bulb shining from the dash. The wiring arrangement shown eliminates this difficulty. A one-and-a-half-volt flashlight bulb is connected across the wire that leads to the stop light from the stop light switch. When current flows through a wire, there is a loss in voltage which can be read by means of a voltmeter connected at both ends of the wire. The flashlight bulb requires very little voltage to make it glow, and the drop in voltage in the wire leading to the stop light is sufficient to operate it. The beauty of the system is that if the stop light bulb burns out the flashlight cannot light, but if the flashlight burns out it will not affect the operation of the stop light. If the flashlight does not glow brightly enough add a few feet to the wire marked X in the diagram.—Popular Science Monthly.

SHORTS SLOP NOT AID IN FATTENING

Kansas College Makes Instructive Experiments.

Wheat shorts slop does not improve the ration for fattening pigs, experiments made at the Kansas State Agricultural college and reported on at the hog raisers' meeting at Manhattan recently show. The results of the tests show that the gains were greater and the costs less where no shorts or slop were fed.

Two lots of pigs were used in this test. Their average weight was approximately 114 pounds each when the experiment started. They were uniform in size and quality. All were pure-bred Durocs. There were ten pigs in each lot and they were fed for a period of 80 days. Lot 1 was fed corn and tankage in a self-feeder and given free access to alfalfa hay and salt. Lot 2 was self-fed corn, alfalfa, and salt in the same manner as lot 1, but received one pound of wheat shorts and .4 pound of tankage per pig once a day in the form of slop made with water.

The pigs in lot 1 that received no shorts or slop gained 2.15 pounds per head per day, whereas the pigs fed shorts in the form of a slop gained only 1.94 pounds per head per day. The pigs receiving no slop required 373.37 pounds of corn to produce 100 pounds of gain in addition to 35.23 pounds of tankage. The pigs receiving slop consumed 348.84 pounds of corn, 26.66 pounds of tankage, and 51.65 pounds of shorts to produce 100 pounds of gain. The consumption of alfalfa was about the same. The cost of 100 pounds gain where corn and tankage were fed free choice was $6.50 per 100; where corn plus shorts and tankage in the form of slop was fed the cost was $6.55 per 100.

The pigs receiving no slop were fatter at the close of the experiment and were valued at slightly more per 100 pounds than those receiving slop in their ration. In addition to the larger gains, the cheaper gains, and the better finished condition of the pigs fed no slop, the slop-fed pigs required a great deal of extra labor in feeding.

Alfalfa Is Excellent Roughage for Horses

Alfalfa hay is an excellent roughage for horses, being more palatable than timothy or prairie hay and richer in protein and lime. For those reasons, it is particularly valuable for balancing grain rations that are poor in those respects, such as corn, says A. L. Harvey, horse expert of the animal husbandry division, university farm, St. Paul.

Many horse owners do not use alfalfa at all for their work horses, because they think it affects the kidney, causes the horses to sweat excessively and is apt to cause heaves. Experiments have proved that no bad effects are obtained if alfalfa hay is not fed in excessive amounts. Not more than one and one-fourth pounds of alfalfa per one hundred pounds live weight should be fed, and even that amount may be too much for some horses.

Many farmers report that they have obtained best results when they replaced about one-half of the usual ration of timothy or prairie hay with alfalfa hay. This method is to be recommended to beginners or when the second or third cuttings of alfalfa are fed.

Profits Made by Swine Following Beef Cattle

The gains made by hogs following fattening cattle from the feed salvaged often constitute an important part of the profits in the enterprise. In discussing this phase of cattle fattening, Prof. E. F. Ferrin of the Minnesota animal husbandry department cited experimental results showing that where cattle are being fed whole shelled corn or ear corn, it is common for the hogs following to make from $3 to $4 worth of pork per steer from the feed salvaged during an ordinary steer-fattening period.

To get best results, active, thrifty pigs should be used. The pigs should weigh 100 to 150 pounds when put with the steers. They should then be marketed when they reach 200 to 250 pounds in weight, and other lighter pigs put in. About one pig per steer following two-year-old steers and about one pig for each two steers following yearlings and calves is the proper number.

To give the most efficient help in making cattle feeding profitable, pigs should gain about one pound each per day.

Feeding for Beef

Just as a pig makes more economical gains when it is given access to grain as soon as it can be taught to eat and is then full-fed till finished for the market, so also does a calf make more beef from a given amount of feed if it is full-fed from birth to block. It should be mentioned in this connection, however, that the ration must always be well balanced with reference to protein and mineral matter, otherwise economical returns will not be secured.

FAMILY DOCTOR LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr. Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it.

Today, the prescription he wrote in 1885 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels of men, women and children were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases; old folks liked it for it never gripes; children liked its pleasant taste. All drugstores today have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

The uncertainty of not knowing when the next pig was going to eat so got on the nerves of one man at West Suffolk that he had to quit the neighborhood, the doctor stated.

Furniture Talk

It seems to us that almost everything about the Furniture business is pleasant.

We made a pleasant trip, a few weeks ago, to the old town of Burlington, down along the Mississippi River. We wandered through the displays of many factories—some large and some small, and picked out enough good items of Furniture to make a carload. The Burlington People have been making good Furniture for fifty years and we consider it a pleasure to buy Furniture from them.

This carload has now arrived at Klemme. It is so well crated and was so carefully packed in the car that there is scarcely any breakage, which makes it pleasant too.

But perhaps the most pleasant thing about the Furniture business is the class of people who come to buy. People who buy Furniture are not thinking ugly thoughts, they are thinking about their home, and the home you know, be it ever so humble, is the dearest spot on earth. And when our Customers buy comforts for the home, they are so nice about it that we find it a real pleasure to wait on them.

I am sure we will all have a grand and glorious time at the Big Furniture Sale which we are preparing for early in February.

For Klemme Merchants Only

Being one of a series of chats with Klemme businessmen in which they are told how they can increase their volume of sales—

THERE'S Money in Klemme. There are people aplnty here to spend it. There's good business for you—IF you, the merchants of Klemme, join THE TIMES in keeping Klemme's business in Klemme.

It all boils down to the very important thought that the nearby, bigger towns and he mail order houses are ALWAYS rying to attract trade from the smaller communities.

Always trying! Very often succeeding! And, sad but all too true, to the detriment of you, the merchants of Klemme and the merchants of all other small towns.

What to do about it is a problem you must help solve, if you are to prosper. A mighty vital problem it is, too, as you well know.

Just the same, we can keep Klemme's money in Klmme. And the folk of Klemme can be brought around to the habit of buying in Klemme almost exclusively. And you can make both conditions possible.

Here's how.

The very next time a salesman from whom you order merchandise comes to your stores, SELL him on KLEMME. Of course, you must sell yourself first. Get Klemme-minded. Get the salesman feeling the same way. Enthusiasm is contagious.

When the salesman gets enthusiastic about Klemme, he's bound to pass his enthusiam on to the sales manager of his company.

And then the manufacturer of the goods you buy will begin thinking of Klemme. He'll think of it, not as a small spot on his office map, but as a community where you, his retailers, are trying to sell his goods for him.

He, too, will get Klemme-minded, and feel more justly obligated to give you the advertising support in your local, home town newspaper that he's giving his retailers in the bigger towns.

He'll get over the notion that he is reaching the folk of Klemme with his advertising in the bigger towns' newspapers and n the general magazines.

Yes, you merchants of Klemme! That's the solution to the whole problem. Sell the manufacturers of the goods you stock your shelves with on Klemme. Sell them through their salesmen.

THIS newspaper has joined small town newspapers all over the country in a nationwide campaign to convince national advertisers that they can best assist small town merchants by advertising in the local, home town newspapers of the small town merchants.

The manufacturer's advertising in Klemme's home newspaper will help you sell more of your merchandise to more and to the greatest number of Klemme' people.

This advertising support will help to keep Klemme money in Klemme. It will mean good business for you and more of it.

You need the advertising aid of the manufacturers whose goods you stock—urge their salesment to recommend your local home newspaper—

Supporting YOUR OWN BUSINESS

It always pays to support your own Community, your own home town— and "your own business." When a business man joins a co-operative buying association do you suppose he then buys from some other concern? He doe not— as his good judgment would not recommend such business methods.

The Klemme Creamery is a Co-Operative business, organized by the farmers of this community for the purpose of marketing the dairy products from their own farms in order to realize the most profit. Therefore, the owner of every dairy herd should feel greatly interested in the success of the Klemme Creamery.

Are you as a dairyman, supporting YOUR Business —or helping build up the business of your competitor? The Klemme Creamery needs the Co-Operation of every farmer in this community.

Our splendid growth during the past few years is a dirct reflection on the loyalty of our farmers in supporting this, their "own" Creamery. Let's keep up this spirit of CO-OPERATION which has brought us success. Let's keep pulling together for the good of our community.

POULTRY FACTS

INSURE PROFITS FROM HEN FLOCK

Protection From the Wintry Blasts Quite Important.

Insuring the poultry flock against wintry blasts will insure the profits to be received from the birds this winter.

"Incomes from farm flocks depend upon poultry housing conditions. A good flock poorly housed is almost certain to be less profitable than a poor flock sheltered in an adequate building," warns G. T. Klein, extension poultryman, Kansas State Agricultural college.

The modern poultry house has facilities for the hens to scratch, feed, roost, lay, and exercise in the same room, according to the poultry specialist. One large, well-ventilated, well-lighted, clean sanitary room has replaced the separate roosting quarters, scratching shed, and laying house. An up-to-date house is so complete that hens are confined in them in September and are not given range until the following spring.

Klein says that the most satisfactory house is one 20 feet in depth. It should have about one-fourth of the south side open and be tight on the other three sides except for windows in the east and west ends and under the droppings board on the north. A 10-inch layer of straw as a ceiling gives protection to the birds by modifying the temperature in both winter and summer. Such a ceiling keeps the air in the building free from dampness, prevents accumulation of frost, and keeps the litter dry.

Lanterns as Henhouse Lights During Winter

There is no question but what providing the laying flock with a twelve-hour day throughout the winter by means of artificial light at the beginning or end of the day, or both, pays under Iowa conditions. More and more farm flocks are being thus helped to make the best of warm houses and good rations during the months of short days. Generally, providing the poultry house with lights has been assumed to go hand in hand with electricity on the farm. But as yet a comparatively small per cent of Iowa farms are electrically equipped.

During the last two years I have visited at least a dozen Iowa farms where it was called to my attention that lanterns had been used to furnish light for the chicken house, says a writer in Wallace's Farmer. In most cases, these were gasoline lanterns, although I know at least one farm woman reported the use of an oil pressure kerosene lamp. If equipped with reflectors of the right sort and hung in the right part of the poultry house, these lanterns have proved a safe and desirable sort of light. For those without electricity, this sort of lighting for the poultry house is worth investigation and trial.

Turkeys have the annoying habit of getting into a lot of difficulties.

A damp house causes colds and other troubles for the birds, and a loss of money to the owners.

Experience has shown that washed eggs are suitable only for immediate consumption, and will not stand for any length of time under storage conditions.

If Leghorns are hatched too early they may start laying early and have a fall moult before cold weather. This throws them out of laying all winter.

Hatch the turkey eggs in the incubator. Put the poults in chick boxes until they are forty-eight hours old. Have the brooder houses thoroughly cleaned and disinfected and keep the temperature under the hover around 90 degrees.

Give each poult a drink of warm water when they are put under the hover. Use a good intestinal antiseptic in the water for seven days, then skip seven days.

Test after test has proved that a plentiful supply of liquid milk is one of the best ingredients in the ration for chicks of any size.

Many farm flock owners fail to realize the importance of selecting good cockerels for the breeding purposes the following season.

Shavings are superior to straw as litter for hens, as well as for nest material to prevent soiled eggs.

This is a good time to get rid of the unpromising pullets. Later you will have to part with them, even though you know they will lay few eggs.

The most certain means of controlling blackhead of turkeys is to prevent its development by artificial hatching and brooding and rearing the fowls on ground not used for poultry of any kind previously.

"I can sympathize with the woman who was rung up on the telephone in the small hours. Shivering with fright, she put the receiver to her ear.

"'Is that Mrs. Margaret E. Winslow?' said a very grave voice which she didn't know.

"'Yes, yes,' she panted.

"'Mrs. Winslow,' said the grave voice, 'I regret to have to inform you'—and it seemed to poor Mrs. Winslow that her heart stood still—'to inform you that your son, John Evans Winslow, has been arrested for joy riding.'

"'Oh, thank goodness,' shouted Mrs. Winslow, 'the boy's safe in jail.'"

Finally Saw Pheasant

Hunters in the vicinity of Geneva, N. Y., had an experience with a pheasant not long ago. After a day's tramping in vain search of the birds the hunters sat in a club, bemoaning their hard luck. Just as one of the party had finished speaking there was a crash and the yarn swappers turned, to see a gorgeous cock pheasant flutter into the room as the last fragments of a broken window fell to the floor. The frightened bird ran across the room and out the open door. And no one did anything about it.

Los Angeles Boy Needed Help

Leroy Young, 1116 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular fellow," active in sports, and at the top in his classes at school. To look at him now, you'd think he never had a day's sickness but his mother says: "When Leroy was just a little fellow, we found his stomach and bowels were weak. He kept suffering from constipation. Nothing he ate agreed with him. He was fretful, feverish and puny.

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully!"

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 50 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way.

Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

American Delegates to the Naval Parley Prepared for Big Reductions.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONE hundred American delegates, experts and advisers sailed Thursday for the naval limitation conference in London without any definite instructions from President Hoover, but with the assurance that he will support any agreement at which they may arrive with the representatives of the other four naval powers. The Chief Executive, entertaining delegates at breakfast, told them he considers they have become naval technologists through their study of the questions involved and therefore are now better prepared on the naval problem than he is.

While no figures have been made public, it is understood in Washington that the American delegation is ready to cut about 200,000 tons from the American navy, to eliminate two of the proposed 10,000 ton cruisers and to agree to a further battleship building holiday, postponing replacements that would begin in 1931 under the Washington treaty. This program would include reducing our submarine strength by 20,000 to 30,000 tons and our destroyer strength by 100,000 to 150,000 tons; provided the other powers made proportionate reductions.

In a statement to the press President Hoover said that to complete the conference in three or four months would be in itself a great accomplishment, and added:

"It is the most important of international conferences of a great many years and probably the most important for many years to come. The progress of peace for the world rests in a great measure upon the shoulders of the five delegations. There is good will toward the conference on the part of every nation. The importance and the gravity of the occasion have been recognized in the dispatch to London of the leading men of every country. They have the will to succeed."

FROM Europe the word was that Premier Tardieu of France expects the conference to end successfully in three or four weeks and that France will play a dominant role in the proceedings. The French delegates, it was said, would propose a scheme covering six years, to 1936, creating a naval construction holiday for that period. While France still insists on retaining submarines, it is willing to restrict their size, gun power and cruising radius to a degree that would make them strictly defensive.

France intends to renounce its rights to construct capital ships up to 175,000 tons, as allocated to it at Washington, and concentrate its sea power in the auxiliary classes—cruisers, destroyers, and submersibles. The French plan will seek to overcome the existing deadlock between the United States and Great Britain over 10,000 ton cruisers carrying eight-inch guns, by allocating the global tonnage of the various powers with categories merely indicated approximately, permitting each power to allot whatever amount of the total it decides necessary for self-defense to that class.

As was stated several weeks ago, however, the French persist in their demand that whatever agreement is reached in London shall be transmitted to the League of Nations' preparatory disarmament commission, so that it can be made a part of the league's general plan for the reduction of both land and sea armaments. The French believe that within six years the league's disarmament conferenee will be held and that all nations will accept its findings.

WHILE on the subject of armaments it may be noted that the house appropriations committee is beginning to realize that the American army needs better fighting machines and more up to date motorized equipment. It reported to the house the War department supply bill carrying appropriations of $455,000,000, and called attention to the fact that it had provided $239,855 for experimental work in connection with the development of tanks, armored cars and other weapons and equipment for use with a mechanized force. This had been entirely omitted from the budget as submitted by the President.

No change in the size of the army is contemplated in the new bill. As at present, army enlisted strength will remain at 118,750. Officer strength will be 12,000. The National Guard will be given an increase, raising the strength to 190,000. Funds for training citizens at the citizens' military training camps are slightly reduced.

The air corps appropriation approved by the house committee amounts to $35,823,473, a million dollars increase over the present year. This sum will not bring the five year air expansion program up to date.

DEVELOPMENTS of the week in the German reparations conference at The Hague indicated that a settlement of all disputes would soon be reached. The major question was as to a guaranty for France in case the German government should wilfully default in execution or should denounce the Young plan. The French delegates submitted a draft of a document covering this point which it was hoped the Germans would accept.

Vladimir Moloff, Bulgarian minister of finance, pleaded for a reduction in the Bulgarian indemnity. "We are not seeking to haggle or bargain," he said, "but a spirit of loyalty to you necessitates stating that Bulgaria is incapable of paying annuities as high as $3,000,000 over a period of 36 years. We are anxious to discharge the debt honorably, but we simply cannot pay that much."

When asked to name a figure M. Moloff suggested $2,000,000 per annum.

HUMBERT, prince of Piedmont and heir apparent to the throne of Italy, and Marie Jose, the "snow princess" of Belgium, were made man and wife Wednesday in the Pauline chapel of the Quirinal palace at Rome after three days of elaborate fetes and entertainments. The ceremony was performed by Cardinal Maffi, archbishop of Pisa, and was witnessed by a brilliant assemblage numbering 1,500. The princess, who entered the chapel on the arm of her father, King Albert, wore on her head a high filigree crown in the form of orange blossoms, adorned with diamonds and pearls. Her wedding gown was of white satin, and over it was a mantle of white velvet made especially in the Omo district, with a train seven yards long trimmed with white ermine and held by four male attendants dressed in black, gold braided, uniforms. King Victor Emmanuel escorted Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, and Prince Humbert accompanied his mother, Queen Elena.

Many other royal and noble personages were there, including King Boris of Bulgaria in a gorgeous Hussar uniform; the duke of York in admiral's dress uniform; Prince Leopold of Belgium; former King Manuel of Portugal; former King Amanullah of Afghanistan, who now lives in Italy; the prince of Monaco; the grand duchess of Luxembourg; Prince Daniel of Montenegro; Prince Paul and Princess Olga of Jugoslavia; Don Fernando of Bavaria, and former princes, princesses, kings and queens from all over Europe. Premier Mussolini of course was a conspicuous figure.

The royal couple, after appearing on a balcony of the palace to receive the plaudits of the vast throngs gathered there, were accorded a private audience by the pope, who blessed them and gave them a special piece of Arras tapestry. For two more days there were public festivals and celebrations in Rome, and then Humbert and Marie went to Turin, where another week of the same sort of thing had been prepared.

MUCH talk and little action characterized the ruction in congress over prohibition enforcement. The one concrete thing was the request of President Hoover that congress appropriate immediately $302,000 for 30 new speed boats for the coast guard to use in combating rum-running on the Great Lakes. This request was in a supplementary budget report which pointed out the necessity of getting the boats into action within three months, before the navigation season opens. Each of the boats desired would be 34 to 36 feet in length, would carry a crew of four and presumably would be armed with machine guns.

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts was the first to bring up the prohibition matter in the upper house when sessions were resumed after the holidays. He submitted resolutions of a Boston mass meeting protesting against the "wanton and reckless killing of citizens of Massachusetts by the coast guard." Next day orators, both wet and dry, exploded in both senate and house and the recriminations and retorts were loud and bitter. On Wednesday Representative Black of New York, a wet, told the house that he had heard there was dissension in the President's crime commission, Judge W. S. Kenyon and Roscoe Pound being dissatisfied with that body's procedure concerning prohibition.

PROHIBITION caused what may prove to be the first serious rift between the house of representatives and the White House. Administration leaders in the house sent word to President Hoover that the resolution proposing a joint congressional prohibition committee is not likely to pass. It was passed by the senate three weeks ago and sent to the house rules committee, from which it has never emerged.

Speaker Nicholas Longworth admitted that "the leaders of the house" do not believe such a joint committee should be allowed to usurp the functions of the independent house committee already constituted.

Fifty wet members of the house of both political parties pledged themselves at a caucus to battle to a finish against the forthcoming program of the drys to put bigger and sharper teeth in the prohibition laws.

THOSE radical senators who call themselves Republicans won a decided victory by forcing the appointment of Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin as a member of the powerful finance committee. Senator Thomas of Idaho, generally "regular," also was named a member, the vacancies filled being those left by the resignations of Edge and Sackett, now ambassadors. The old line Republicans on the committee on committees fought hard to keep La Follette from the place, but Senator Smoot, fearing to have the contest carried to the floor of the senate, voted with the Democrats and radicals for the appointment. The finance committee now includes 11 Republicans and 8 Democrats. If La Follette and Couzens of Michigan join forces with the Democrats, the latter will control the committee. In any event it is no longer bossed by the Eastern Republicans.

IN THE course of regular business the senate continued its work on the tariff measure, dealing especially with woolens and rayon silks. The committee investigating lobbying heard some more witnesses concerning efforts to raise or lower the sugar schedule, and the name of the President was dragged in several times in a way that brought a sharp rebuke for the committee from one witness, H. H. Pike, Jr., a New York sugar broker.

EDWARD BOK, for many years editor of the Ladies' Home Journal and otherwise noted for his philanthropies, died suddenly at his winter home near Lake Wales, Fla. He was sixty-six years old and had retired from work some time ago. Coming from Holland as a child, Mr. Bok by his own efforts won fame and fortune, and then set about returning to the public much of his money in the way of philanthropic gifts.

Another well known American who was claimed by death was Prof. Henry J. Cox, chief of the weather service in Chicago and the oldest weather forecaster in the country in point of service.

GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING does not want to be a senator. Certain of his friends and admirers in Nebraska started a movement to induce him to run against Senator George W. Norris, and broached the subject to him. The general's response was: "I do not desire, nor have I desired at any time to seek public office. While it would be a distinct honor for any man to represent the great state of Nebraska in the United States senate, my decision must be regarded as final."

Needless Pain!

Nowadays, people take Bayer Aspirin for many little aches and pains, and as often as they encounter any pain.

Why not? It is a proven antidote for pain. It works!

And Bayer Aspirin tablets are utterly harmless. You have the medical profession's word for that; they do not depress the heart.

So, don't let a cold "run its course." Don't wait for a headache to "wear off." Or regard neuralgia, neuritis, or even rheumatism as something you must endure. Only a physician can cope with the cause of such pain, but you can always turn to Bayer Aspirin for relief.

Bayer Aspirin is always available, and it always helps. Familiarize yourself with its many uses, and avoid a lot of needless suffering.

Home Has More Danger Than Savages of Brazil

JOHN J. WHITEHEAD, explorer and lecturer, has just returned from eight months in the jungles of South America, where he was searching for traces of the lost Colonel Fawcett and his son.

Dangerous as he found the jungle, he encountered a worse danger at home. But let him tell it.

"One of the great problems of a trip of this kind is keeping in healthy condition. When we started, some of the members of the party had laxatives with them, but made wise by experience I carried Nujol. All too quickly my stock ran out. Soon I was in bad shape—what with a diet of rice and beans, lacking vitamins and green vegetables.

"When we finally got back to civilization, entertained first in Brazil and later in the United States, I became positively ill. Severe stomach pains and poor elimination made me realize that Nujol would again prove the reliable, trusty keeper of health. Sure enough, with the first bottle the trouble disappeared.

Don't think Nujol is a medicine. It is as tasteless and colorless as clear water. It brings you, however, what your body needs like any other machine—lubrication. Just as a good bath washes our bodies clean, Nujol sweeps away, easily and normally, those internal bodily poisons (we all have them) that make us feel dull and headachy and sick. Nujol cannot hurt even a little baby; it forms no habit; it contains not one single drug. Doctors and nurses use it themselves and tell you to use it, if you want to be well.

Take Nujol every night for two weeks and prove to yourself how happy and bright and full of pep you can be, if your body is internally clean. Get a bottle today at any drug store. It costs but a few cents, and makes you feel like a million dollars. Start traveling the health-road to success and happiness—this very day!

SCOUTING IN THE NORTH IA. COUNCIL

A Series Of Articles By W. Earl [illegible], Editor Of The Globe-Gazette, Mason City, Ia.

Every Troop Has Adult Leadership

Existing institutions such as our Churches, Parent Teachers Associations, Luncheon Clubs, the American Legion, etc., may be sponsors for a Troop of Boy Scouts. A committee of seven men is appointed by the sponsoring institution to represent it in the field of Scouting and to operate the Troop. The work of the Troop Committee is so departmentized that each man has definite opportunities for service to the Troop. Such an arrangement has proven to be very successful in the operation of a Troop.

The Scoutmaster or Troop Leader is chosen by the Troop Committee. He must be a man at least 21 years of age of the right character to associate with boys and set an example for them. He must have an interest in boys and some knowledge of boy nature. His ability as troop leader will come through conference with the Field Workers, experience with the Troop training courses in Troop leadership conducted by the Area Committee on leadership training, attendance at Scout camp, Courts of Honor and the like.

The Assistant Scoutmasters are selected by the Troop Committee and work with the Scoutmaster in directing the Troop program.

Boys Trained To Lead Boys

Scouting is a program of training boys to lead boys. The boy leaders are chosen by the Scoutmasters from among the Scouts who are eligible for positions of leadership. These boy leaders are: the Junior Assistant Scoutmaster, who must be 16 years of age and a First Class Scout; the Senior Patrol Leader who is at least a First Class Scout; the Scribe who keeps the records and writes the troop history; and the Patrol Leaders who are the natural leaders of the boy gangs which in Scouting are called Patrols.

The Scoutmaster functions as the executive head of the Troop with the Assistant Scoutmasters as his right hand men. On them rests the responsibility of seeing that a definite and comprehensive program is followed, in the planning of which the boy leaders have had a very active part.

Boys Are Officers In Troop

The Senior Patrol Leader is the boy who directs the movements of the Troop and announces the various items in the Troop meeting program. The Junior Assistant Scoutmasters are specialty men who direct specialized activity, one being color officer, another is in charge of games and ceremonies and so on.

Patrol System Should Be Used

The Troop in which the Patrol idea is conscientiously adhered to in leadership delegated to worthy results in a Troop of intensive activity and advancement, and one that is much toward the development of citizenship and character.

Many Officers In North Iowa Council

In the North Iowa Council there are 28 Scoutmasters and assistants with approximately 75 Junior Assistant Scoutmasters and 50 Senior Patrol Leaders. Also from two to four Patrol Leaders for each Troop. A great group of boys are developing their leadership ability under the guidance of Scoutmasters and Troop Committeemen.

FARMERS FAVOR DICKINSON IN POLL AT CONVENTION

Turner Seems To Be Farmer's Best Choice For Governor Of Iowa

Sentiment of the Iowa Farm Bureau federation is overwhelmingly for Congressman L. J. Dickinson of Algona as the next United States senator from Iowa, a poll of delegates attending the federation's convention in Des Moines showed last Wednesday.

The same poll, if it may be taken as indicative of the federation's political preferences, indicates that the organization's 60,000 members will select Dan Turner of Corning as their choice for governor of Iowa in 1931-32.

The preference shown for Mr. Dickinson was almost 5 to 1 over Gov. John Hammill, who is announcing his candidacy, but the first place given Dan Turner was about 2 to 1 over Ed. Smith, present secretary of state.

An indication that the governorship may be more hotly contested than the senatorship was shown by the fact that twenty-four delegates marked only the senatorship half of their ballot. In several instances members of the federation, in handing in their ballots, remarked "Well I marked for senator; but I want to think a while yet about the governor."

Thus the total vote on the senatorship was 373, while on the governorship 349 votes were cast.

In addition to the two principals mentioned above for the governorship, Howard Clark, Dan Steck and Charles Hearst, president of the farm bureau, each received one vote as did Senator Smith W. Brookhart who is not up for re-election.

In the governorship, those who voted for other than Mr. Smith or Mr. Turner were thirty persons who balloted for A. H. Bergman of Newton and fifteen who voted for Otto Lange of Dubuque.

Following is a tabulation for the votes cast:

—For Senator—

Dickinson	306
Hammill	63

—For Governor—

Bergman	30
Lange	15
Smith	105
Turner	199

BEAUMONT IS CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY ATTORNEY

L. C. Beaumont, of Britt and Kanawha, this week announces his candidacy for County Attorney in The Times.

Mr. Beaumont has residod in Britt for the past twenty-five yoars where he practiced as a veterinarian, and still does.

He studied law at home and passed a successful examination two years ago and was admitted to the bar, since which time he has practiced law with his office at Kanawha. He residence is at Britt and he drives back and forth morning and evening.

Mr. Beaumont has had a number of cases in court and seems qualified for the office of county attorney which position would give him a wider acquaintance and experience.

He is opposed by Henry C. Meyer of Britt in the race for the county attorney's office.

NELSON SEEKS THIRD TERM AS REPRESENTATIVE

C. H. Nelson, of Garner, this week places his announcement in The Times as a candidate for re-election to the state legislature as representative from Hancock County.

Mr. Nelson is well posted on matters pertaining to taxation, and as that will be a big issue in the coming session of the General Assembly, Mr. Nelson feels that he can render real service to the people of Hancock County.

Mr. Nelson is well known all over the county. He has been interested in farming all of his life and has the interests of the farmer at heart.

But He Didn't Get Away With It

COURT OF HONOR TO BE HELD MONDAY

PARENTS, FRIENDS AND ALL INTERESTED ARE INVITED

First Court Of Honor Ever Held In This Part Of County

A Court of Honor will be held next Monday evening, January 27th, 1930, at the Klemme High School auditorium for all the boys of District IV, made up of Winnebago and Hancock Counties.

The Boy Scout Court of Honor is for the purpose of awarding badges to those boys who have made certain advancement in the program of Scouting.

The Chairman for this District is Rev. C. H. VanMetre of Garner. His Committee is made up of one representative from each of the Scout towns in the District.

Court Of Honor Begins 7:30

The Court of Honor will begin promptly at 7:30, and will be of a very interesting and profitable nature. It is hoped that the parents and friends of Troop 56 will attend in a body. Parents, particularly are urged to attend, as they help materially in making a Court of Honor successful, merely by the inspiration of their presence.

Every town in the District will receive a Court of Honor session in turn, so, of course, each town is being urged to help make the session successful wherever it is held so that it may be successful when it is held locally.

First Court Of Honor Here

As this is the first Court of Honor to be held in Klemme the local Troop is very anxious to have Klemme well represented. Parents and friends of Scouting should keep this date open and be present at the high school auditorium Monday evening.

Training Courses To Begin

The Area Headquarters has announced a Scout Leader's Training Course covering the "Elements of Scoutmastership." This training course is open to all Scoutmasters, Troop Committeemen and other interested men of the community. The twelve sessions will rotate alphabetically among the Scout towns of this District. It is beleived that a number of local men will take advantage of the Training Course.

An Advanced Training Course in First Aid will be started at the same time, all sessions of this being held at Mason City, the center of the Area, for those men who have received previous training.

HILARY GREIMAN MARRIES KANAWHA YOUNG LADY

Marriage Ceremony Was Performed Saturday At Elltown Parsonage

Mr. Hiliary Greiman, Klemme, and Miss Alice Holck, Kanahwa, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at the Elltown Reformed parsonage, with Rev. C. A. Schmid officiating.

The Bride is a daughter of Mr. Henry Holck, a farmer residng at Kanawha. She is a charming young lady and is well versed in the arts of house-keeping, having performed that duty for several years for her father, as her mother pased away a number of years ago.

Mr. Greiman is a graduate of the Klemme high school and has followed farming with his father since. He is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Greiman who reside on their farm north of Klemme. He is a young man of industry and fine habits.

Following a short trip the young couple will begin farming north of Klemme on the place now occupied by Chas. Griffen, who moves to Minnesota.

TWO SILVER WEDDINGS PAST WEEK

MR. AND MRS. FRED BARZ SURPRISED ON 25th ANNIVERSARY

Neighbors And Friends Bring Well Filled Baskets And Presents

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Barz were pleasantly surprised Friday evening, January 17th, when their neighbors called to help them celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. The friends brought well filled baskets and a beautiful wedding cake. They presented Mr. and Mrs. Barz with a purse of money.

Those present were: John P. Christians and family; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Christians and family; Mr. and Mrs. John Pannhoff and family; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Webner and family; Mr. and Mrs. Art Brouwer and family; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hoyt and son, Emmet; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Thieman and family; Miss Hilda Peterson; Curtis Waddingham; and Leo Back.

The evening was spent in playing games and visiting. All who were present reported a fine time and departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Barz many more years of happy wedded life.

MR. AND MRS. WM. GREIMAN SURPRISED SUNDAY

Relatives Plan 25th Wedding Anniversary Surprise For Them

Sunday, relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Greiman, who reside on their comfortable farm two miles north of Klemme, tendered them a real surprise when they arrived with great baskets filled with good things to eat for a wedding dinner, given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Greiman's twenty-fifth weding anniversary.

The affair had been cleverly carried out by the relatives of both Mr. Greiman and his wife, with Mrs. Charles Goll, his twin sister a leader.

At the noon hour a bounteous dinner was served, which was enjoyed by all.

A quarter of a century ago, William Greiman and Miss Bettiy Schuldt were married and began house-keeping and farming on the Schuldt home place, which is now the home of August and Joe Schuldt just north of Klemme on the Wilson highway. Seven years later they moved to the farm now occupied by Charles Griffen, after which they purchased the farm where they now reside, and which they have improved and built up to one of the best farms in this community.

To them were born eight children. They are: Maurice, a studen at Iowa State College; Hilliary, Hallie, Lawrence, Esther, Victor, Gladys and Earl.

CORWITH ORGANIZING A BOY SCOUT TROOP

Local Men Met With Corwith Group Monday Evening

Dr. W. F. Missman, Chairman of organization in District IV, and R. A. Jorgenson, Klemme, Deputy Commissioner P. J. Kirkpatrick and Rush Gabrielson, of Crystal Lake, drove to Corwith Monday evening to meet a group of men there and to help them lay plans for the organization of a Boy Scout Troop and Troop Committee.

The Klemme and Crystal Lake men explained the Area plan, troop organization, leadership training, summer camp, and answered many questions put to them.

The Corwith men were greatly interested and formed a temporary organization to promote Scouting in Corwith. Mr. Louis Larsen acted as chairman of this body and Supt. Baker, secretary. A large portion of the finances were raised at this meeting and Corwith will no doubt have a Boy Scout Troop fully organized in a short time.

RAYMOND WESSELS, TEN, DIED SUNDAY EVENING

Funeral Services Were Held At The Reformed Church Wednesday

Raymond Wessels, ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lepo Wessels, who reside on a farm northwest of Klemme, died at the Mercy Hospital at Mason City Sunday evening, January 19, 1930, at 7:30 o'clock. He had been ill since the early part of January and was taken to Mason City, January 7th for medical treatment and an oporation for mastolds and other complications.

Raymond was born March 30th, 1919, at Bradford. Besides his parents, he leaves to mourn his early death six brothers, Fred, John, Benjamin, William, Elmer and Paul, all of whom are at home. Two brothers and one sister preceded him in death. He is also survived by his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Luke Wessels, of Meservey, as well as numerous other relatives and many playmates and friends.

Funeral services were held at the Klemme Reformed Church at 1:00 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, January 22nd, with the Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch in charge. Interment was made at the Belmond Cemetery.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved parents and brothers at this time.

LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES
By Mrs. P. W. Johnson

On Friday night the annual masquerade dance was held. In spite of the severe cold weather a fair sized crowd attended. Many and varied were the costumes. Prize were awarded to the four that were selected by the judges.

We want to take this opportunity to thank the merchants who donated the prizes that were given; also thank Editor Jorgenson for the advertising he gave us in the issue of last week.

National Commander O. L. Bodenhammer in an address to the Army War college stated that one of the laws that the American Legion was backing was the National Defense Act.

He said: "There is nothing inherently wrong with the national defense policy of the United States as it stands in basic law of our land today, except that it is not complete, until the principle of universal service is written into it as one of the fundamentals.

"The American Legion believes it is a national crime to send men to war untrained and unprepared," he continued. "Keeping our nation properly prepared does not necessarily make us war-like in our ambitions, but it does guarantee that we shall be prepared against the recurrence of confusion and extravagance and reckless expenditures of money and life which accompanied our entry into the World War, because of our unpreparedness."

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

DECLAM CONTEST TUESTAY NIGHT

FIRST ROUND OF CONTEST TO BE HELD NEXT WEEK

Twelve Local Speakers Will Compete For Positions

Let none forget the date set for our local Declamatory Contest. It is Tuesday evening, January 28th. The following students will compete for the opportunity of representing our school in either the first round of County or State. Those winning first place in each class will speak for us in the Preliminary State Contest and those winning second place will compete for us in the first round of our County Contest, which is to be held at Klemme on February 6th. The judging will be done by out of town folks whose names will be announced later.

Students on the program next Tuesday evening will be as follows:

ORATORICAL

1. Raymond Barz, "Crime and the Criminal Court."
2. Blanche Gimer, "The Sequence of Life."
3. Allan Klotzbach, "The Unknown Speaker."
4. Clarice Wellemeyer, "Acres of Diamonds."

DRAMATIC

1. Margaret Gates, "Truly Mother."
2. Irene Harms, "The Christmas Substitute."
3. Nova Koerner, "The Chief Operator."
4. Valeria Koerner, "Dikkon's Dog."

HUMOROUS

1. Ethel Baack, "Janice Takes Care of the Dog."
2. Mitchell Bock, "Never Again."
3. Floyd Klotzbach, "The Blueeyed Shiek."
4. La Vohn Larsen, "Daddy on a Bullet."

The time has been reduced this year for each selection. Oratorical selections must not exceed 10:59, the humorous 12:59, and the dramatic, 15:59. This may reduce the time of the total program a bit but for 12 speakers the previous time was often too long.

School Band Begins Again

Mr. Storer, our band leader from Mason City, has been engaged for another three months, or twelve nights. We are glad our parents and Board have made this possible for the lads are in a fair way to make a real band but need to keep going and active with their instruments.

As the first half of the school year has been concluded and we are now on the second and last semester it would be well to take stock of the progress made. We hope parents have given the report cards the attention they deserve and if more can be done in the inteerst of better work on the part of some pupils it should be done by all concerned. Many of our girls and boys have made splendid records and are showing great promise, but a few have found the work difficult and of these perhaps some have lacked the perseverance necessary to victory. We have no right to expect the same quality of work of all for not all have been born with the same capacity for acquiring knowledge and mastery of school work. But to maintain the proper standards required of us we are forced to demand a given amount of work of each class in each subject. We regret it is necessary to fail anyone but in a school where none fail, standards of attainment are usually pretty low, and worthy and capable students are handicapped.

We Play Crystal Lake Friday

Our boys lost to Hayfield last Friday night and may profit more by their defeat than by a victory. They have a very hard game with Crystal Lake on Friday night of this week. We go there for the game. Both our first and second teams will go. Both won here, but we hear Crystal Lake has made a wonderful improvement since.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Center of Stage in Capital Held by Prohibition Enforcement.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PROHIBITION was again the dominant topic in Washington, displacing the tariff and the naval conference in London. Somewhat hurried by political pressure, the Wickersham crime commission made a preliminary report and in submitting it to congress President Hoover made recommendations for legislation designed to facilitate enforcement of the dry laws. Then the fireworks started.

The commission's report was thus neatly summarized by the Boston Herald:

"In effect Chairman Wickersham and his associates say: 'Whether the Eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act are wise legislation or not, we do not choose to say. The law is here. Conditions in the courts and elsewhere are such that enforcement under ideal conditions has not been responsible. Set up some new machinery for enforcement, try it a while and ultimately we may have something to say on prohibition as prohibition. We defer judgment meanwhile.'"

The four major recommendations made by the commission were:

Unification of enforcement under the Department of Justice.

Machinery for speeding up prohibition cases in the federal court.

Codification of all statutes relating to prohibition.

Amendment of Volstead act to facilitate prosecution of padlock injunctions.

Here is what President Hoover asked of congress:

Reorganization of the federal court structure so as to give relief from congestion.

Consolidation of the various agencies engaged in prevention of smuggling of liquor, narcotics, other merchandise and aliens over our frontiers.

Provision of adequate prisons and reorganization of parole and other practices.

Specific legislation for the District of Columbia.

Legislation to give United States court commissioners enlarged powers in minor criminal cases.

Transfer of prohibition machinery from Treasury department to the Department of Justice.

IN THE house these recommendations were referred to the several committees especially concerned, and there was an apparent disposition to push the administration measures through in quick time; but it was thought they would encounter much opposition in the senate. The constitutional lawyers in both houses were prepared to fight especially the commission's plan to permit United States commissioners to handle petty prohibition cases on the ground that it deprived citizens of their constitutional right of trial by jury. Mr. Wickersham explained that this was a misapprehension, the plan merely assuring the defendant a speedy trial with the right to appeal to another court in which he would be tried by a jury.

The wets in the house organized for the coming battles by electing J. Charles Linthicum of Maryland leader of the bloc. Previously Representative James M. Beck of Pennsylvania had declined the post, explaining that while he opposed the prohibition law, he believed it to be "the manifest duty of the administration to enforce it."

Representative La Guardia of New York made a surprise attack on the drys when he raised a point of order on the prohibition provisions of the pending Treasury department appropriation bill and offered a resolution to declare the Eighteenth amendment inoperative. La Guardia set forth the proposition that only ten of the state legislatures ratified the Eighteenth amendment within seven years, as required by its third section. The others, he said, ratified merely the joint resolution, which later became the constitutional article. Hence, he argued, the amendment and its enforcement legislation automatically died three years ago.

ALL this hullabaloo coincided with the tenth anniversary of the advent of national prohibition, and at the same time the Anti-Saloon league opened its twenty-fourth annual convention in Detroit. The leaders of the organization announced plans for raising a "war chest" of $50,000,000 for use during the next ten years and said they were determined to rout utterly the organized forces that seek repeal or modification of the Eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act. General Superintendent F. Scott McBride in his address assuming a rather remarkable knowledge of the Creator's ideas, declared "The league was born of God. It has been led by Him and will fight on while He leads."

Dr. A. J. Barton, chairman of the executive committee, said: "The Anti-Saloon league is the most hated and feared organization in America. The wets are more and more amazed at the strength of our organization. In a pitying and patronizing way they announce that we are dead or at least moribund. The wish is father to the thought; they know that we are very much alive."

ON THURSDAY the senate, by a majority of ten votes, rejected the proposal of the Republican regulars for an increase in the sugar tariff. The amendment of Senator Harrison of Mississippi forcing the retention in the tariff bill of the existing rate of 1.76 cents a pounds on Cuban sugar, was adopted, 48 to 38. The finance committee had proposed a rate of 2.20 cents on Cuban sugar and the bill passed by the house put the rate at 2.40 cents.

The Western independent Republicans, who combined with the Democrats to knock out of the Republican bill all rate increases except those on agricultural products, split on the sugar duty. Senators Borah of Idaho and Norris of Nebraska, leaders of his bloc, were among those voting against an increased rate.

GOVERNOR GREEN of Michigan, acting on recommendation of Arthur D. Wood, commissioner of pardons and paroles, has commuted the sentences of the five victims of the state's former "life for a pint" law, reducing their terms from life imprisonment to 7½ to 15 years, in conformity to the amended statute. The sixth sentenced under the former law committed suicide in his cell.

Oscar G. Olander, Michigan's commissioner of public safety, announced that the state police would be provided with fast automobiles equipped with machine guns and tear bombs to stop rum running between Detroit and Chicago. The officers will wear bullet proof vests.

In Providence, R. I., a special grand jury called to consider evidence in the slaying of three men aboard the rum runner Black Duck by coast guardsmen reported to the Superior court that, after thorough investigation, it had found no indictment.

SECRETARY OF STATE STIMSON and the rest of the American delegates to the naval limitation conference landed at Plymouth Friday morning and were speedily carried up to London. There Mr. Stimson spent several hours in conference with Prime Minister MacDonald, and on the two following days he talked confidentially and at length with Premier Tardieu of France and Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister. Presumably these conversations did much to clear the way to a tentative agreement in the conference, which was to open Tuesday.

To the advance guard of the newspaper correspondents from all over the world Mr. MacDonald said Great Britain would propose the abolition of battleships and submarines, not with any great hope of obtaining total abolition, but in the strong hope of securing a drastic reduction in these forms of armament and their possible extinction after a term of years. He favors reduction by categories rather than global tonnage, but France and probably Italy are committed to the latter plan and it is believed the United States is ready to accept it. The French and Italian delegations were reported still far apart on the question of naval parity. However, fair minded observers in London were convinced that all five of the delegations were sincere in their desire to obtain results of real international value and that while each of them would insist on adequate national defense, all were against the principle of armed supremacy. Therefore there is reason for optimism.

DELEGATES of the allies and of Germany in the conference at The Hague finally reached an agreement on the several questions of sanctions and formulated two declarations on the subject to be part of the Young plan protocol, the way to the signing of which was thus cleared. Germany agreed that in case she wilfully defaulted any of the Young plan provisions any creditor nation might appeal to the court of international justice and if that court gave an affirmative decision, the creditor power or powers should resume "full liberty of action." That, of course, means the possibility of armed intervention or occupation, and both the Germans and the British hesitated to sign it, but this was necessary to prevent utter failure of the conference. Paul Moldenhauer, German minister of finance, had already promised that the Reichsbank would participate in the financing of the world bank for reparations, though Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, had fought stubbornly against this. Agreement was reached on the date of German payments, the fifteenth of the month, as demanded; on the moratorium question, with the provision that at the end of any period of suspended payments the amount postponed becomes payable immediately, and a special advisory committee is to determine whether Germany's economic life is endangered when moratorium is asked.

SENATOR CARAWAY, chairman of the lobby investigating committee, reported to the senate denouncing tariff lobbyists, especially those of the sugar interests, as a set of grafters "fattening upon the donations of credulous business men, who might as well give their money to a palm reader or a crystal gazer." He estimated that the sugar lobbyists, both high and low tariff, had raised more than $400,000 in their campaign to influence congressmen. The report said the committee had found no impropriety nor anything open to censure or criticism on the part of the President.

THROUGHOUT much of the Mississippi and Ohio river valleys flood conditions were increasing until they threatened to be the worst in years. Vast areas of farm land were inundated and many towns were isolated. Southern Indiana especially suffered, and extremely cold weather added to the distress, there and elsewhere.

The severest storms of the winter swept over the North Central states, and the heavy snowfalls extended even to Portland, Ore., and southern California. Still worse in destruction of life and property were the great gales that prevailed in England and northern Europe. About fifty persons were killed and many injured, the majority of deaths being due to the foundering of vessels.

GROVER CLARK returned to Peiping from a six weeks' inspection trip in the Wei river district on behalf of the China International Famine Relief and reported that thousands of persons are dying daily from famine and exposure. He declared two millions are doomed to die within a few months and that there was no hope of saving them because of transportation difficulties and fear of bandits.

POPE PIUS XI issued an encyclical severely criticizing co-educational methods and declaring the right of the church and family to take precedence over the state in education of children. The state, he said, should have charge of military education for the common good, but should avoid an excess of so-called physical and military instruction.

Though especially a part of the pope's controversy with Mussolini, the encyclical was translated into several languages and sent to the church throughout the world. The Italian press accorded it the severe criticism of complete silence, which brought forth an angry rebuke in the Vatican official organ, Osservatore Romano.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

PHONY DISEASE IS CAUSE OF DAMAGE

Trouble Traced to Virus Found in Tree Roots.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Recent investigations of phony peach, a disease which threatens to do great damage to the peach industry of Georgia, show that this trouble is caused by a virus that resides in the roots of the trees. The virus does not enter the branches, buds, scions, or seeds and the disease is communicable only by grafting roots from diseased trees to roots of healthy trees, or by making piece-root grafts in which phony roots are used.

The first symptoms of phony disease do not appear in commercial plantings until the latter part of the second growing season, according to specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture who are conducting the investigations. From this time on the trees may come down with the disease at any age.

When attacked by this disease a tree develops shortened internodes, a large number of lateral twigs, and large, flattened dark-green leaves, giving the appearance of dense growth with healthy foliage. Especially in young trees, a decided dwarfing results. The number of fruits and their size is greatly reduced. Fruit from phony trees is apt to be distinctly poorer in flavor than normal fruit, though slightly better in color.

This disease was first observed about 50 years ago by Samuel H. Rumph, a peach grower of Marshallville, Ga. He called the affected trees "ponies" because of their smaller size. Various causes were assigned to this behavior, and finally it came to be regarded as a disease. The term "phony disease" is now generally used to describe this condition.

A vigorous campaign is now being conducted for the eradication of the phony trees. This is regarded as the only sure method of controlling the disease in the territory where it has already spread. In the meantime numerous experiments are under way at present in an effort to find a stock that is resistant to the disease.

Pruning Bush Fruits at Proper Time in Winter

Gooseberries and currents may be pruned at any time between now and time growth starts in spring, but the preferred time is in very early spring, just before growth starts.

In pruning, keep in mind that the best crops of fruit are produced on wood two and three years old. This means that when a cane has reached the stage that it does not make at least 3 or 4 inches of new growth on top, there is not going to be much fruit borne on this in another two years. In pruning old plants, take out a goodly per cent of old wood that does not appear thrifty, leaving new sprouts to take the place of that cut out. If the bushes appear too thick, cut the small stuff out entirely. The new sprouts that started last spring will not produce fruit next year, but some the year after, and a better crop the third year. It is the nature off both currants and gooseberries to start a number of new sprouts each spring. It helps greatly in getting larger fruit and better crops, if the surplus of these sprouts are cut out closely, along during the first half of June. In doing this, where there is apparent need of a premanent cane, leave a sprout to take up this place, or to replace an old one that should be removed after fruit is gathered, or in early spring.

It is not at all necessary to replant currants and gooseberries every two or three years. By studying the pruning system, the same plant will produce fine crops of fruits for ten or more years.

Raking Leaves Controls Scab of Apple Trees

Raking up all dead leaves in the orchard and burning them, followed by a systematic spray program the next spring, was instrumental in producing a superior crop of apples in a Morrow county (Ohio) orchard last year. The owner, upon recommendation of Prof. Wendell Paddock of Ohio State university, gathered the leaves at a cost of about $100. The previous year the trees, now about twenty years old, had been seriously infected with scab, but last year the orchard produced more than 4,000 bushels of first-class fruit. The owner through advertising in local papers has been able to sell a major portion of the crop at the farm.

Spring Mulching

Generally, when we speak of mulching strawberries, we think of applying same in late fall or early winter for winter protection, but some of the greatest benefits come from having the mulch on the strawberry bed in the spring, also at harvest time. To obtain these benefits the mulch should be applied any time before the ground thaws out in the spring, applying four or five inches of loose straw, rye preferred, wheat next, free from weed, grass, or grain seed.

Idle Tractor Is Poor Investment

Four Hundred Hours of Work Annually Necessary to Make Expenses.

With certain kinds and amounts of work a tractor is indispensable in the farm business, while under other conditions a tractor is a foolish investment, says Prof. V. B. Hart of Cornell university.

The largest single item of tractor cost is depreciation. On New York farms depreciation is a little over one-third of the total cost of operation. Fuel is the next largest item and makes approximately another-third of the cost. The other third is interest, cash and labor for repairs, lubrication, insurance and storage.

Cost Per Hour.

With such fixed charges the total number of hours of work done by a tractor makes a wide variation in the cost an hour for the work done. The tractors used 400 hours a year cost 86 cents an hour, while the tractors used 20 hours cost $1.37 for each hour. In the survey made on tractor costs it was found that one-sixth of the tractor work done in the state was custom work, and that the average tractor in New York works on four different farms.

Estimates made by farmers who kept records on both tractors and horses indicate that the tractor saved the work of one and eight-tenths horses, and three and six-tenths months of hired labor a year. The tractor including equipment cost $1.25 an hour while the horses with the tools used cost 68 cents an hour on the average. The horses cost one-third more a year than the tractor but the horses worked more hours.

Horses Not Displaced.

In spite of the popular statements that the work on many farms is done entirely by tractors, Professor Hart says, "We have found that horses have not yet been displaced to any great extent in the lighter and more rapid field operations such as cultivating and haying." The greatest field use of tractors now made in New York farms is in the heavy-draft operations like plowing, harrowing, and disking. With the present high cost of man and horse labor rapid development and improvement can be expected in the lighter farm tractor equipment, he says.

The tractor has many distinct advantages if it can be used enough to be economical, and if the farm layout is favorable; it will work long hours, and in hot weather, and it will speed up work in a critical time. Some conditions still demand horses, and Professor Hart suggests that before a farmer buys a tractor he must first answer the question of whether it will pay. The next question is whether or not the money necessary to buy and operate a tractor will pay better if invested elsewhere in the farm business.

Nitrogenous Fertilizers Are Coming on Market

Nitrogenous fertilizers are coming on the market and farmers are being urged to buy increasing amounts of them to apply on wheat land. Most of these materials are in the form of ammonium sulphate or nitrate of soda, but some new forms are coming on the general market. Some of these materials are being advised for wheat, but before they are used there are certain facts that should be understood. The general use of nitrogenous fertilizers should be delayed until experimental tests have shown definitely where they may be applied with profit. Farmers should do some testing on their own account.

Agricultural Hints

Buy certified seed early. The county agent has a list of sources.

Brown clumps of bluestem grass are the winter homes of the chinch bug. Have you looked for the bugs in the grass?

During the past year the United States Department of Agriculture has perfected a device which will determine accurately the grade of any honey.

The manure produced on farms is the most valuable by-product of the farm. It should be applied to the soil as soon as possible after it is produced.

In cutting the annual supply of firewood, the poor trees in the woodlot should be taken first. Thinning out the undesirable trees will allow room for the good specimens to develop into more valuable timber.

For an extra early crop of beets or carrots, seed in the cold frames three or four weeks before the normal date for planting outdoors and transplant to the open when the weather permits. Early maturing varieties should be used for this purpose.

Investments in modern conveniences for the farm home are among the best that can be made. They insure better living on the farm, and their value does not fluctuate. Farmers having such improvements speak of them as a never ending source of pleasure and satisfaction.

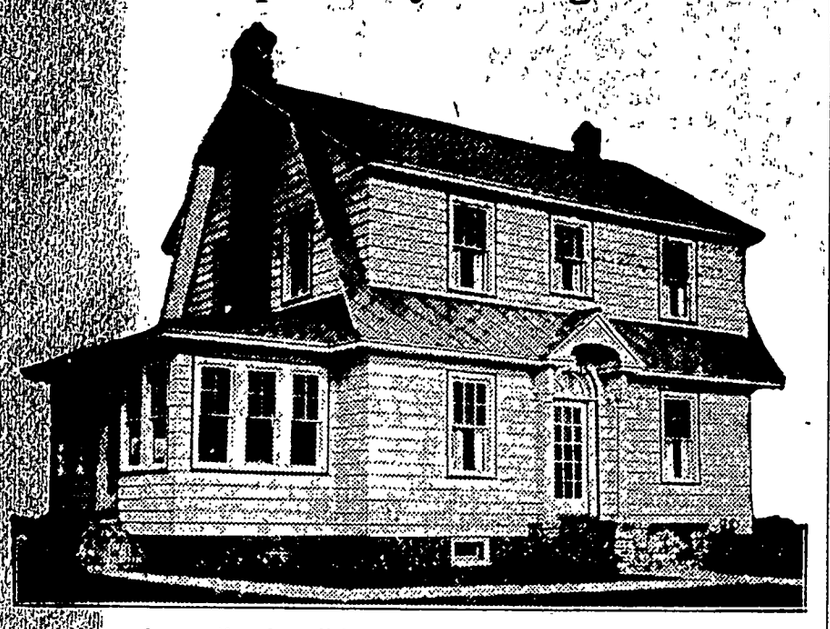
Home Has Well Designed Exterior and Splendidly Arranged Interior

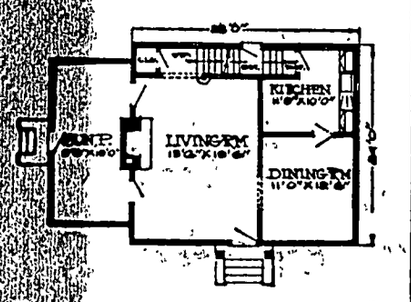


A home of exceptional qualities, and it would well be worth the sacrifices that are sometimes necessary in order to secure a home. The exterior is well designed and the floor plans are equally fine.

By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

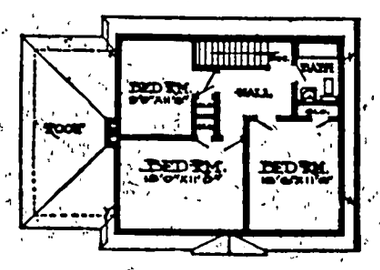
Building a home is an experience that most families go through only once in a lifetime. To the average man building and paying for a home requires considerable sacrifice. For these reasons every prospective home builder should give the most careful consideration to the design of the home he intends to build. Of course, the woman of the household will have the most to say about the final selection of the interior as she is the one who has the work to do and will have the best idea about the arrangement and sizes of the rooms. The man, however, will want a house which is attractive in appearance and comfortable inside.



First Floor Plan.

Houses with more or less straight lines can be made good looking through the roof design. Shown in the illustration is a house 28 feet by 24 feet. The architect who designed this house, however, has put in wide dormers and has broken the roof lines to give the effect of a much larger house and a very elaborate one. As a matter of fact, a glance at the floor plans will show that this house is very like the ordinary two-gable plain house.

Two other features of this home are good. One is the colonial type of entrance at the center of the front and the other is the built-in sunroom at the end.



Second Floor Plan.

Inside this home are six large rooms besides the sun parlor. The living room is larger than ordinarily found, being 15 feet 6 inches by 19 feet 6 inches. On either side of the open fireplace are french doors leading to the sun parlor. This arrangement gives added space to the living room and easy access to the sun parlor. Dining room and kitchen are at the other end.

Upstairs there are three bedrooms and the bathroom, all adjoining the center hall. One feature that will appeal to the housekeeper is the three closets, one off each bedroom.

Considered from several standpoints this is an unusually good house design. It is attractive in exterior appearance, is economical to build, and provides large, comfortable rooms.

Modern Tiled Bath Is the Symbol of Luxury

The modern tiled bath is more than anything else the symbol of luxury of the up-to-date home, and a striking example of the art of the present-day builder.

Today it is purely American. Many years ago, when Nero was still practicing on his fiddle, the Romans had magnificent baths. The bath was the meeting place for the men of the nation and many a plot and counter plot was hatched in the baths.

Today a bath is a personal room, nevertheless, it is the symbol of the good taste of the home owner. A celebrated professor of psychology once told his class, "Show me your bath and I will tell you your personal habits and how you live." He was right, and the modern housewife is with him.

The modern tilemaker has turned out a product that cannot be eclipsed. The bath provides the maximum of permanency, charm and healthfulness. It is an easy matter to keep a bath clean. Then, too, by the use of material used, it is a permanent job, requiring none of the expense of early treatment by painters, decorators and paper hangers.

Perhaps there are some who will smile when it is stated that tile permits the expression of individuality in the decoration of the bath. But it is the less is true.

For many different colored tiles are open to the selection of the home owner allows him to use almost any color scheme. There is practically no limit to the possibilities. And fundamentally, almost any color scheme can be will harmonize with the rest of the house.

White bathrooms, like kitchens, that resembled the operating rooms in hospitals, have gone from the modern home. In their places have come a room warm in color and modern to the extreme degree.

The tiled bath is merely a matter of keeping pace with the times. There are some who will argue that a tiled bath is more expensive than one of enamel and paint. Of course, in original cost, but should one disregard the matter of permanency? The ordinary person cannot afford to build a home many times in his life. So why should he not choose the best obtainable when planning his home?

Tiled baths can be installed in an old house during remodeling operations as well as in a new building. There is nothing that will bring a home up to date quicker than the installation of a bath of this type.

Big Variety of Wall Paper to Choose From

There is no way to bring originality into your scheme of home decoration more easily than by using a delightful wall paper.

There are myriads of good wall paper designs, lovely in color and charming in design, that are both beautiful and original. Their use immediately sets your room apart from the rest, for the large space walls covered with a well-chosen paper dominate the scheme and strike a note of unusual interest that is not duplicated by a plain wall. There are so many wall paper patterns that there is no reason why any kind of effect cannot be achieved by their use.

Wall paper is made to simulate many other materials—marble, chintz, linen, velvet, ribbon, tile, wood and others, and the art of printing it has reached such a state of proficiency that sometimes it is difficult after the paper is hung to tell the copy from the original.

These papers give many attractive opportunities to the home decorator to make her home different from the general run, and they are adequate expressions of her own good taste and sense of what makes charm.

Pictures and Mirrors Chase Wall Monotony

Mirrors and pictures are vying for places on the walls of our homes.

Everywhere possible mirrors are being placed. One of the most interesting situations is between the second and third and the third and fourth of the series of three windows that most apartment living rooms possess.

The very narrow space between these windows accommodates a venetian-panel mirror very well. Because it is frameless, this mirror will seem to have more life and gleam to it than the mirror encased in a frame.

Perhaps directly above or below this decoration something will seem to be needed—perhaps a candle in a single brass sconce will do nicely.

Modern Fixtures Make Small Home Popular

This is the day of the small house planned for comfort and convenience, not for ostentation. Heating and refrigeration plants, the electrical equipment, the plumbing system and the built-in features have contributed to place a star of the little house in the ascendancy and to create for it an important and distinctive place in modern life.

POULTRY

HATCHABILITY OF EGGS INHERITED

Low Rate Causes Heavy Losses to Industry Yearly.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Forty per cent, or 800,000,000 of the 2,000,000,000 eggs incubated annually fail to produce live chicks, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Such a low rate of hatching ability causes heavy losses to the industry annually. Solution of the problem is one of the important undertakings of the poultry specialists at present.

While many factors, such as breeding, feeding, and management, have an important bearing on the hatchability of the eggs produced, heredity is also a factor. It is now known that some hens lay eggs of a higher hatchability than others and that this characteristic can be transmitted from sire to daughter. In fact, the studies already made by department poultrymen indicate that strains which will produce eggs with a very high hatching power may be developed by trap nesting, pedigree hatching, and selection of hens producing a high percentage of livable chicks.

At the department's poultry experiment farm at Beltsville, Md., breeding work is being conducted to develop strains of high hatching ability. Some progress has already been made. Records of one hen with an average of 90 per cent hatchable eggs show that she has transmitted this characteristic in a large degree to her progeny. She has two daughters and seven granddaughters with records of hatchability ranging from 78 to 95 per cent, or an average of 86 per cent hatchability.

Department poultrymen are of the opinion that such records as these will prove of interest to the poultry breeder or commercial poultryman because they are evidence that a pedigree, showing number of eggs alone and no evidence of their hatchability, is greatly lacking in completeness.

Sunlight Is Important as Source of Vitamine D

Sunlight is without an equal to furnish the necessary vitamine D to laying hens, says Prof. J. E. Dougherty of the poultry husbandry division of the University of California.

While it is more valuable than any other agency, says Dougherty, the quartz mercury vapor lamp will give good results, and where sunlight is not available, it may be used.

Either sunlight or the lamp excel cod-liver oil in this respect, although where sunlight is lacking and the quartz mercury vapor lamp is not available, the cod-liver oil will be far better than nothing.

"Sunlight is cheap where it is at all available," says Professor Dougherty, "and where it is possible poultry should be exposed to the direct rays of the sun as much as possible."

Watch Shipping Days to Get Higher Hen Prices

"There is a right time to ship poultry. Shipment should be made so it will reach the market Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday according to observations by many experienced shippers. The market is often overloaded toward the end of the week, resulting in selling at reduced prices to avoid a carryover to the next week," says W. D. Termohlen of Iowa State college.

It is also a smart plan to compare local prices with terminal market prices because, in many cases, the difference is not worth the extra costs connected with shipping.

Confining Turkeys

It is generally considered unwise to closely confine turkeys for any length of time; hence, the crate feeding method practiced in finishing chickens is not employed with turkeys. However, it is considered advisable to somewhat restrict range during the finishing period. An empty barn, shed or similar shelter with a limited yard range can serve admirably for finishing quarters if in proper sanitary condition.

Mites Eat Feathers

There are several reasons for the loss of feathers on the head and neck of a fowl, but it is usually due to the fowls themselves in scratching and breaking the feathers off with their claws. This is apparently caused by a mite, thought to be the same as that causing scaly leg, and which gets under the skin, causing irritation. Application of carbolated grease into which has been worked a little sulphur will be found helpful for this trouble.

Poultry Paralysis

Poultry paralysis is so far an incurable disease, the cause of which is unknown, says the Oregon experiment station. Where the disease is present, the station urges rigid sanitation in rearing next year's young stock as possible preventive measures. Important factors to bear in mind in this connection are brooding on concrete or wire, and removing the fowls immediately after the brooding period to land not previously used for poultry.

CARING FOR AUTO IN WINTER SEASON

Suggestions for Starting Car in Extremely Cold Weather.

During the recent subzero blast which swept over the greater part of the country, many thousands of automobiles could not be started after being parked in the open. The mechanical first aid department of the Chicago Motor club offers the following aids to starting in frigid temperatures.

Use Lightest Lubricants.

1. Ask the agency of your car or a reliable filling station the lightest lubricants, compatible with safe lubrication, in the crank case and gear box.

2. Before stepping on the starter see to it that the gear shift lever is in neutral and depress the clutch pedal. Open the hand feel throttle one-quarter of the way or more.

3. Step on the starter and use the choke sparingly.

4. If the starter cannot spin the motor, set the spark at full retard and pull sharply upward with the crank. This quick motion will frequently start motors when the starter fails.

Parking for Long Period.

5. When it is expected that the car will remain parked in the open for a long period, it is wise, when shutting the motor off, to speed it slightly and then shut off the ignition and choke it at the same time. This procedure causes a gasoline vapor to be present in the cylinders when the motor is next started. This practice should be used infrequently, however, as the gasoline drawn into the cylinders tends to seep past the pistons into the crank case, where it dilutes the oil. The oil should be changed frequently if this trick is resorted to repeatedly.

6. The ignition system and carburetor adjustment must be correct in order to enjoy easy starting.

Bad Brakes Responsible for Serious Accidents

Faulty brakes are responsible for more than one-third of the serious automobile accidents in the United States attributed to defective equipment, according to a survey made public here by the American Research foundation.

"Analysis of accident records in 13 large cities and 5 states," says the survey, "disclosed that of 4,899 motor vehicles involved in accidents in which defective equipment was reported, 39 per cent had defective brakes. For all localities investigated, improper lights account for 34 per cent of the defects reported, defective steering mechanism for 15 per cent, and other defects for 11 per cent.

"With faulty brakes classed as the commonest type of defective automobile equipment, the necessity of care in correcting variations and testing brakes at frequent intervals if automobile accident totals are to be reduced. With the speed of modern driving and the necessity for quick stops in traffic, reliable brakes spell the difference between safety and disaster."

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

The life of a car can be greatly lengthened by keeping it tightened.

Be considerate at all times. Other users of the road have equal rights.

Rusty rims should be cleaned with a wire brush and then painted with red lead.

The first tourist camp for motorists in Norway is to be established on the main highway into Trondhjem.

Stop—when in doubt—at railroad crossings, behind street cars taking on or discharging passengers. Better to cause a delay than an accident.

The battery should be kept at its maximum charge at all times, and never permitted to stand in a discharged state.

THE MOTOR QUIZ

How Many Can You Answer?

Q. Under what conditions is horn blowing useless and when should liberal use of the horn be made?

Ans. Horn blowing is useless in traffic jams because it not only fails to clear the jam but causes confusion and many times angers others concerned. The proper place to make liberal use of the horn is when passing other cars, driving on curves, mountain roads and blind intersections on country roads.

Q. What three bad practices shorten the life of tires?

Ans. Turning corners at high speed, thereby shifting the weight of the car to one side; sudden stepping on the accelerator, causing the wheels to spin; rushing up to corners and slamming on the brakes.

Q. If spark plugs are missing what particular trouble would be likely to develop?

Ans. Owing to incomplete combustion gasoline may go by the pistons and rings and into the crankcase, with consequent oil dilution, causing excessive wear to moving parts, bearings, cylinder walls, and pistons. It is also accompanied by loss of power on hard pulls, hard starting, slow pick-up, and generally speaking it produces a sluggish engine.

Q. What was the increase of gasoline consumption and exports for the first seven months of 1929 as compared with the same period for 1928?

Ans. Consumption increased 14.6 per cent and exports 13 per cent.

Powder Coated Rag Will Prevent Short Circuits

A short in the high tension wires leading to the spark plugs, caused by moisture, usually occurs where the wires are clustered together.

When this happens, dry the wires, one at a time, with a cloth on which is placed a generous amount of either soapstone powder or face powder, preferably soapstone. In drying the wires entering the distributor cap be careful not to remove more than one wire at a time unless it is well understood how to replace them.

Drying High Tension Wires With Powder-Coated Rag Avoids Short Circuits From Moisture.

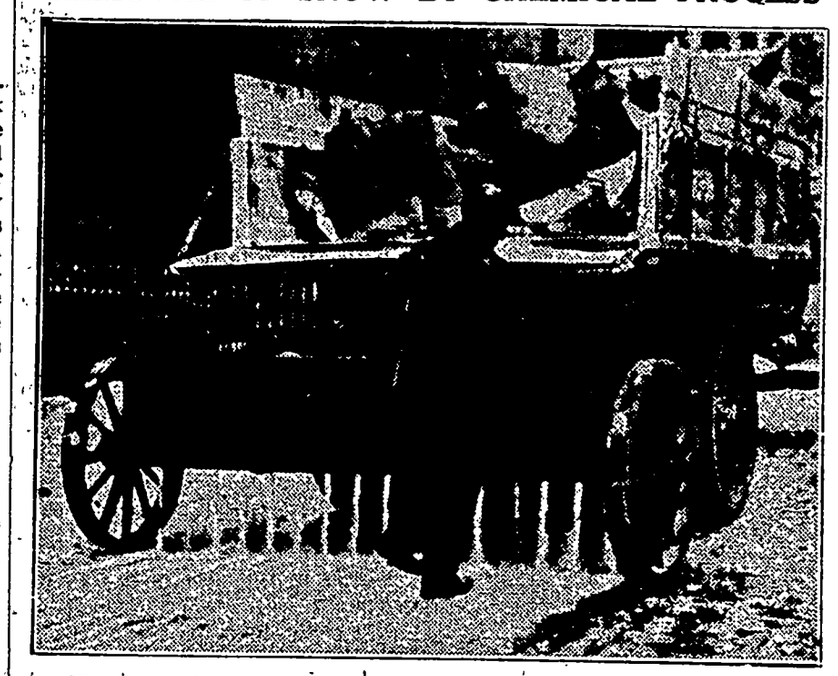
Keeping the wires and the outside of the distributor cap exceptionally clean and using soapstone in the manner described will result in keeping the rubber insulation in good condition and no trouble will be experienced from rain. Of course, this suggestion applies only to ordinary rubber-covered high tension wire. Special high tension wire covered with varnished fabric should not be treated in this way. Such wire should be wiped with a clean dry cloth only.—Popular Science Monthly.

Commandments Made for Those Who Drive Cars

Just what motorists should do to promote safe driving has been given by the Automobile Club of Southern California in a list of "Ten Commandments." They are:

Keep your car in sound condition; keep your car under control; keep your eyes on the road; never fight for the right of way; go along with the procession; be courteous; know your local traffic rules; take pride in your driving skill; don't mix liquor, worry or anger with gasoline; study local maps and experiment for shorter and less congested routes.

REMOVAL OF SNOW BY CHEMICAL PROCESS



The removal of snow by chemical process is demonstrated on ice-coated Brooklyn streets. The pellets of calcium chloride used are spread on the snow and in a short time a brine is formed which melts the snow and forms a slush which may be easily washed away.

FARM STOCK

MINERAL MIXTURE NEEDED BY SWINE

Grain and Forage Rations Must Be Supplemented.

That the ordinary grain and forage rations used for feeding our hogs must be supplemented with a mineral mixture is a fact upon which all investigators agree. A typical statement relating to this subject was recently made by A. Severson of the North Dakota experiment station, as follows:

"The ordinary grain ration does not contain the variety nor a proper amount of mineral matter required to rapidly develop a large frame for early maturing hogs. One can expect a considerable percentage of weak, undersized or unthrifty pigs when no mineral mixture is used. Without mineral matter sows are apt to go down in the back, become weak in their pasterns and many times become so week they cannot get up when nursing a large litter of pigs. The milk drains heavily on the skeleton of the sow to supply the proper amount of mineral to the milk. The constant addition of mineral matter to the sow's ration will avoid this ailment. Hogs are more apt to suffer from mineral deficiency than other classes of live stock."

Such products as tankage and skim milk are rich in mineral matter, but under average farm conditions they are seldom, if ever, fed in large enough quantities to supply the amount needed. Those who have been carrying their pigs on a light grain ration with perhaps a rather skimpy pasture should not overlook the feeding of a liberal supply of minerals.

Swine Grading Proves Valuable in Marketing

Hog grading data is a reliable agency for showing up many of the leaks which are prone to creep into the marketing end of our swine industry. For example, it has been pointed out that the percentage of heavy hogs has decreased since the inception of hog grading. The percentage of select bacon hogs, which was below 12 per cent for the whole of Canada at the commencement of hog grading, has risen gradually to 17 per cent. This improvement has been accomplished through closer attention to breeding and feeding; because of the data revealed to farmers through this policy, and also because the policy provided for payment on a quality basis.

Beef Herds Maintained During Severe Weather

Beef herds may be best maintained during the winter with a legume hay in the ration. Liberal use of alfalfa hay, according to practical feeders, helps insure a healthy calf crop. Experimentally the fact has been proven that steers carried through the winter on alfalfa hay make faster gains than non-alfalfa fed steers the following year on pasture. An experimental trial comparing prairie hay with alfalfa showed that the prairie hay gains were but one-half as large as the alfalfa gains.

March Farrowed Pigs Marketed in Winter

January, February, and early March farrowed pigs are probably 50 per cent marketed, but due to corn being high in price there are many pigs lacking the finishing touches.

Corn and tankage are rather high prices, but the redeeming feature of the situation is that hogs are also fair priced. If the pigs are thrifty, free from worms, lice, and mange, and are fed a well balanced ration there is no doubt but that they will make a good return on the feed consumed.

Live Stock Notes

Good breeding and good feeding go hand in hand. Success depends upon combination of the two.

Intelligent treatment of animals requires just as much, if not more study, than does the intelligent treatment of people.

Pigs do much better when on pasture than in the dry lot. Hog raisers should plan to provide pasture for hogs during the late fall and early spring months as well as during the spring and summer.

A good draft horse is a ready and willing worker and is neither irritable nor nervous.

A self feeder is an economical method of finishing the spring pig. Place shelled corn in one compartment and tankage in the other.

Pigs cannot be farrowed to good advantage every month in the year, but they can be farrowed in more months than they usually are and we can market them advantageously in every month of the year.

POOR ENGLISH, BUT MUCH TO THE POINT

Writing to the London Times, an Englishman's custom, takes root in British territory, as evidenced by a letter, quoted by the Living Age from the Singapore Straits Budget. It is couched in a Chinese English and follows, in part:

"I wish my companion went Wilkie road hills seen a couple of Contongese Lover to whisper and kiss in a shade of a tree. Looking this person is very sweetheart. First time I seen, today very nice. Like last night saw the cinema."

He goes on to describe what he saw in the cinema, then to protest at an unfeeling policeman's interruption of the lovers in the park.

"I think very poorly against it. Any time ever been, can see kiss at park, dance hall and cinema. I thought this thing is commonly matter, not third person matter to do. Contribution results. Excuse me, sir."

New Advertising Field Found by Englishman

This is certainly the age of advertising and it seems that there is somebody ready to take advantage of every possibility of securing publicity for his wares. There is now a proposition being agitated in Great Britain to brighten up the landscape by painting "ads" of various kinds on the sides of freight cars. There are 700,000 freight cars of various kinds moving around in that country and nearly 100,000 of these are of the covered type which will permit of use for this purpose. The railroad companies are endeavoring to work up public sentiment in favor of the scheme on the ground that the cars will be maintained in better shape and their appearance made more attractive by the brilliant cards impressed upon them. From the advertisers' standpoint this offers an attractive field, but whether the public will stand for it is another matter.

Seeks Longevity Secret

Two persons in 100 live to pass their ninetieth birthday anniversary, and Dr. Raymond Pearl of Johns Hopkins university is endeavoring to get the secret of longevity from these persons. In the course of several years of investigation he has visited nearly 1,000 persons who have passed their ninety-fifth year. There are several centenarians on his list and two are positively known to have reached their one hundred and eleventh year. Notes of the life history of these persons have been made and are being compiled in the shape of a report which will, it is anticipated, be of great value in determining the factors which enter into long life.

Before marriage a girl clings to a man's neck; after marriage she walks on it.

Isn't it delightful to feel so young again that you can't wake up when you ought to?

Furniture Talk

It seems to us that almost everything about the Furniture business is pleasant.

We made a pleasant trip, a few weeks ago, to the old town of Burlington, down along the Mississippi River. We wandered through the displays of many factories—some large and some small, and picked out enough good items of Furniture to make a carload. The Burlington People have been making good Furniture for fifty years and we consider it a pleasure to buy Furniture from them.

This carload has now arrived at Klemme. It is so well crated and was so carefully packed in the car that there is scarcely any breakage, which makes it pleasant too.

But perhaps the most pleasant thing about the Furniture business is the class of people who come to buy. People who buy Furniture are not thinking ugly thoughts, they are thinking about their home, and the home you know, be it ever so humble, is the dearest spot on earth. And when our Customers buy comforts for the home, they are so nice about it that we find it a real pleasure to wait on them.

I am sure we will all have a grand and glorious time at the Big Furniture Sale which we are preparing for early in February.

LIBERTY TOWNSHIP NEWS NOTES

(By Special Correspondent)

Ben Reemtsma auctioneered a sale near Belmond Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Suckow and children were dinner guests at the E. G. Beler home Sunday.

Ray Lange came up from Ames Friday evening and spent the week end with his folks.

Miss Alice Carolus has been rather under the weather the past few days.

Carl Beler, of Beltrami, Minn., arrived Tuesday for a visit with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Beier visited Mr. and Mrs. Reimer in Garner on Tuesday. They have both been ill the past week.

The Liberty young folks who are attending the Klemme high school were compelled to stay in town the past week as the roads and weather have been so bad.

The roads are in bad shape out this way and at present the mail man, Art Schultz, has been unable to make his complete route each day as the roads are badly drifted.

Karas Kropp became the owner of a new car recently but by the way the roads look now he will have to be content to admire its beauty instead of its speed for some time.

Elephant Herd "Bound" by Black Man's Magic?

Major Court-Treattt of the Cape-Cairo motor expedition was the first white man who hunted and killed elephants on foot with a spear. "While I was on this spear-hunting safari," he said, "we followed several herds into waterless country in the Bahr-el-Ghazal district of the Sudan, where the elephants usually trek to water only every third or fourth night. When they do, nothing will stop them. We followed this particular herd all day, and at night I was ready to give up. I made camp and stopped. Babalia, a young hard-bitten Mandala hunter, who was said to be something of a magician, then came to me and said he thought he could 'bind' the herd with his magic rope. These 'magic ropes' are not uncommon in Africa They are usually about a yard long and made of Dompalm fiber. Baballa sat down with the rope in his hands. and went through the motions of tying his arms, legs, ankles and neck, muttering incantations as he did so. His muscles became taut. and he relapsed into a semi-trance. He sat so for a few minutes, and then suddenly relaxed, grunted 'That is good,' and rose to his feet. Next morning we ran into the elephants only half a mile from camp, and killed one! They were almost stationary. By all reckonings they should have been miles away."

Should Have Used More —or Less—Observation

With all due respect to their sex women are touchy, and it behooves all men—especially married men—to use considerable tact and diplomacy in dealing with them. The following incident supplies its own moral:

Mr. and Mrs. Hampden had returned from a dinner dance and were discussing the affair "far into the night." Hampden unguardedly mentioned the gown worn by a certain woman and expressed his keen appreciation of it. Mrs. Hampden was quiet for a while. Then the blow fell

"Did you like my gown?" she asked sweetly.

"It was awfully becoming," answered hubby.

"Which one did I wear?" she countered with a trace of coolness in her voice.

Hampden was stumped. He could not recall just which of her gowns she had worn.

He'll use a little more diplomacy—and observation—the next time.—New York Sun.

The Wrong Kind

Two chorus girls were bragging about their admirers and the gifts they had received from them. "Why," said one, "I once had a lovely brooch set with gems. There were 12 of them, and it was a beauty." "Oh. well, that's nothing," said another girl. "I had more than a hundred 'gems' given me once. and by the same man."

There was a chorus of incredulous "ohs" from the other girls, but the speaker held her ground, protesting that she was telling the truth. Finally it occurred to some one to ask what sort of gems they were.

"Well," was the rather reluctant answer, "they were 'gems' from a horrid poet."

Hot Stuff

Smoke rolled to the heavens. Flames leaped from the top of the doomed building. Suddenly a tall, emaciated man broke through the fire lines and strode rapidly into the blazing building, unprotected by gas mask or rubber coat. Immediately the flames died down, the smoke rolled away and the fire went out. The gaunt stranger strolled peacefully out of the building with a satisfied look on his face.

"Who are you, anyhow?" asked one of the crowd.

"I'm the retired fire-eater from Barnum and Bailey, and that's the first square meal I have had for years!"—Pathfinder Magazine.

English Tailors Not Slow

When the sultan of Zanzibar ordered clothes made in a hurry while in London recently, it was brought out the English claim the quick-tailoring record of the world. In 1811, it is related, wool was clipped from two Southdowns at five o'clock one morning, washed, cured, spun and woven. the cloth "scoured" and dyed, and a complete suit made from it so that a Berkshire baronet wore it at his dinner at 6:30 o'clock that evening. By his quick work the tailor won a wager of $5,000.

Visible Stars

The Naval observatory says that the number of stars in the whole celestial sphere bright enough to be seen by the average eye on a clear, moonless night has been estimated to be between six and seven thousand. As one-half of this number lies below the horizon, and haze near the horizon hides many more. the total number visible at any one place cannot greatly exceed 2,500. The blended light of many million stars in the Milky way may be seen, but not the individual points of light.

Gunmen Needed in Church?

How the pastor talked to the highwaymen who sought the cash he did not have: "Ah, gentlemen, I might, indeed, have something to give you if only I had such energetic fellows as you to pass the plate now and then."—The Churchman.

Old English Law Made Churchgoing Compulsory

Golfers, picnickers, Sunday autoists would be out of luck if an old English law were in force today. The act of uniformity, 1552, required:

"All persons, except those dissenting from the worship or doctrines of the Church of England and usually attending some place of worship not belonging to the Church of England, are, if they have no lawful or reasonable excuse for absence, to endeavor to attend their parish church or accustomed chapel, or, if reasonably prevented from so doing, some other place where the divine service of the Church of England is performed, on all Sundays and other days ordained and used to be kept as holy days, and to abide there orderly and soberly during the time of common prayer, preaching or other divine service there performed."

Failure to observe this law renders the offending "parishioner or inhabitant of a parish" who is not legally exempt from attendance at divine service on Sundays and holy days "liable in proceedings taken against him in the ecclesiastical courts to be censured for the offense. admonished as to its attendance in the future, and to be condemned in the costs of the proceedings."

Showing General Knox in Diplomatic Light

One thing about the World war: little or nothing has been said about the soldiers going hungry. In this department, at least, the old hardships seemed to have been successfully eliminated. In contrast, one recalls Washington at Valley Forge.

The plight of the Continental army became so desperate that Washington finally sent General Knox and Captain Sargeant to explain their condition to congress.

It will be remembered that General Knox was very generously proportioned and it happened that Captain Sargeant was far from wearing tatters. One member of congress noted this and remarked that in spite of the tale of starvation and rags he had, seldom noted a gentleman so fat and one so well dressed.

"It is true," said General Knox. "for out of respect, the choice was made of the only man who had an extra ounce of flesh and the only one who had a whole suit of clothes."

She Picked on Him

The wheels of the divorce mill were grinding out a heavy grist in court when a young man presented his plea for a divorce on the grounds that his wife had been unnecessarily cruel to him.

Asked to describe the specific cruelty by the justice presiding, the libelant, in somewhat of an effeminate voice, declared spiritedly: "She hit me, she beat me, she hurled missles at me," and so on.

The evidence concluded, the judge leaned over to his clerk and in an aside which was audible to quite a few others in the courtroom, inquired:

"Is there any request in this libel for the libelant to resume his maiden name?"—Brockton Enterprise.

His Eyes Cried for Daddy

A little three-year-old boy, very much a daddy boy, was left at home when the father went out of town for a few days. Sunday came and the mother took the small boy to church with her, providing the usual amusements—paper, pencils and pictures.

Everything went well until the brief pause that just precedes the sermon. Then a small hand patted the mother's arm to attract attention and a grave little face, with trembling lips and burning eyes, was raised to hers as a baby voice piped: "Mother, I'm afraid these eyes are going to cry for daddy." And they did.—Indianapolis News.

Surveyor's Work

A geodetic survey is one which covers large areas and takes into account the fact that the earth has a curved surface. It is usually called a control survey, because it furnishes geographic positions and other data for more detailed local surveys. In ordinary surveying, the earth's curvature is ignored, and points of equal elevation above sea level are treated as being plane. This is satisfactory for a local survey, but when several independent local surveys are brought together their lines are quite apt not to fit unless each survey has been made under a geodetic control survey.

Knew Mother's Habit

Betty Jane's mother had a reputation at the stores and among friends and neighbors for buying things and then returning or exchanging them. One morning Betty Jane's father took her in to see her baby brother, who had arrived the night before. She was very much pleased with the baby and asked numerous questions about it and then said: "I think he is lovely and wish we could keep him, but I know mother will send him back because they forgot to make him some teeth."

Shells for Shaving

Shaving, originally, was a symbolic act denoting that the person was in mourning or under a vow. It had nothing to do with a man's appearance. Oyster shells were the first razors, their natural edge smoothed and sharpened by polishing and friction.

Ideal Dwelling Place for the "Simple Lifer"

The loneliest village in England boasts six names—Wiston, Wissington, Wisson, Wisseen, Wiseton and Whiston—and one motorcycle, one wireless set, one inn and one dart board.

This village, surrounded by corn fields and towering trees, has hardly changed since the old cottages were built hundreds of years ago. The village was in existence in 1066.

It has no electric light, gas or water supply, shop, telephone or meeting hall. There is not even a village green. It shares a policeman with three neighboring villages.

Many of the inhabitants have never been more than ten miles from home, and the majority of the old farmers and laborers have never been inside a cinema or theater, some have never ridden in a train or heard a wireless broadcast.

The villagers work from sunrise till sunset, and take their relaxation in the taproom of old Fox inn, where the youngsters get excited over a "needle game" of darts.

Sees Napoleon as One of Nature's Supermen

Napoleon believed in no religion, he advocated companionate marriage: he suffered terribly from defeat, but never from remorse; he regarded friends, family and women without any affection (barring his early infatuation for Josephine)—in short he was a superman. He had enough energy for 100 men.

How difficult it is even now to escape from the glamor of his name! Although I know he was one of the most cold-blooded scoundrels that ever lived, and all Europe had to choose between peace and him, that no country, no people and no community were safe while he was at large—although I am aware of all this, if he should appear on earth now and say "It is the emperor!" I might leave all and follow him.—William Lyon Phelps in Scribner's.

Concerning Fans

"Customs of Mankind" says that "Fans have an interesting history. The first fan was probably a palm leaf or some other natural device appropriated by man to keep away flies or gnats, perhaps even to cool the fevered brow in tropical climates. We know that in Egypt, 2,000 years ago. fashionable hosts had special servants to stand behind dinner guests and fan them with huge papyrus fans. In France the fan reached the height of its development under Louis XIV We read that 'Fans are invariable accompaniment of feminine costume and that they are of rare beauty exquisitely painted and mounted on sticks of carved or painted wood, mother-of-pearl, carved ivory or gold. There are over 500 makers of fans in Paris and they enjoy special privileges accorded to them by the king.'"

Normality Tested

"Name a number between five and twelve," said a psychologist to me recently, writes a correspondent. "Ten." I replied. "And a color," he demanded. "Orange," I murmured. "Absolutely abnormal," he snapped. It appears that if one is perfectly normal the replies are "Seven" and "Blue." I found that out of 20 people, including clerks, advocates, journalists and hostesses, 16 of them gave normal responses—"Seven" and "Blue." The reasons for this are said to be that most people believe seven to be a lucky number and blue is a favorite color. Try it on your friends.

The Faithful Heart

He was a patient, long-suffering young man, and he was very much in love. But when at last she arrived at the corner where they had arranged to meet he ventured to remonstrate a little.

"Darling," he said, after he had kissed her, "surely you're rather late?"

She glanced at her watch.

"Only a few minutes," she protested "I said I'd be here at six o'clock and it's just a quarter past now."

"Oh," sighed the young man, "then you must have made a mistake about the date! I've been here since last night."

Library Problem Solved

The owner of a home library of considerable size has solved every private librarian's problem of book borrowers who do not return books. He doesn't lend any. Of course, his method isn't quite as simple as that. but at least he doesn't have to worry about stray books. "Whenever anyone becomes particularly fond of a book of mine," he explains, "I give it to him This may seem foolish at first but it works out for the best in the long run It saves me a lot of grief."—Detroit News.

Just Like a Boy

He was spending his first term at a boarding school, and his parents anxiously awaited the arrival of his first letter.

It was not received for more than a week, and it was short and to the point:

"Dear People: I don't think I shall be able to send you many letters while I'm here. You see, when things are happening I haven't time to write, and when they aren't happening I haven't anything to tell you. With love to all, Harry."—London Tit-Bits.

TAKE IT FROM DAD

By Frank H. Cheley

How to Get the Job You Want and Keep It

"Dad, we had a peach of a speaker at our assembly today, on the 'High Cost of Loafing.' Set us all to thinking that perhaps we aren't as industrious as we ought to be and that, as he said, 'killing time is suicide.' So, I'm looking for a job! But the trouble is, how's a fellow going to get the job he wants—and then keep it?"

Mr. Smithhough laughed outright, "Bob, I hope your streak of industry has come to stay. I think myself it's about time you began to cash some of your spare time both from the standpoint of learning to work, which is a very real accomplishment, as well as from the standpoint of financial return. College days are not so far away, and boy, they do take cash. Undoubtedly, one of the outstanding characteristics of successful men is that somewhere, sometime, they learned to work. These days we hear a good deal about 'lucky breaks' and 'pull' and all the rest but let me tell you one thing now; things in this world never just happen. There is always a reason for everything; so with successful accomplishment. It is not the result of lucky breaks; it is not a thing of chance except in the movies. It comes to men only because they work hard and intelligently for it and along legitimate lines.

"Now, as I understand it, you want to know what your prospects are; how to get a truly desirable job, and then how to keep it. Well, as you know, I have some rather definite convictions along those very lines and I don't mind in the least sharing them with you—not by way of advice, however, but by way of observations—then you go to it and try them out for yourself. However, let me say positively that it is tremendously important that you do some thinking about jobs in general before you set out to hunt one in particular. Bear in mind that it is the potentiality of your job which should make it attractive, not necessarily the pay check. What are you learning while you are earning is the important point. Many men pay mighty dearly for their pay checks in what they learn in bad morals and wrong attitudes.

"The second point I'd like to get fixed in your mind is that if possible there should be some definite connection between the work you seek and the thing you are aiming at doing ultimately. One would not be going to an engineering school to learn to become a doctor nor working in a hospital if he hoped to become a great mechanical engineer. There must be some consistency.

"The third point is this: Success and wealth are not one and the same thing. In past years we have had a perfect deluge of success literature and it has left an entirely wrong impression. Every normal man of course desires to make a good living—that is entirely legitimate, but let's make a good life first—useful, creative, in some realm and dedicated to the improvement of mankind. No other sort of a life is legitimate. Get a definite purpose established. Bob, and then set out to make school and job and reading and travel and friends and contacts all help you accomplish that purpose. Apparently your work is going to be some sort of human engineering—you enjoy people rather than things. You seem to be dominated with altruistic motives. So let's find a job that will cast you with folks; meeting people; serving people in some capacity rather than cleaning machinery or keeping books or driving a car. One of the cardinal principles of finding the right job and keeping it lies in finding work which interests you. Having found a job that fits into your scheme of things and that interests and challenges you, then give it the very best you have.

"Of course you will have to begin at the bottom. Don't expect to be made vice president of the concern in a week merely because you're good looking! Determination, loyalty, integrity and perseverance are the factors in holding a desirable job after you get one. The same stuff it takes to get a desirable job it takes to hold one.

"Never work for any man to whom you cannot be loyal, personally, and to the standards of his business as well. To be efficient you must maintain always, your own self-respect.

"Give full hours and an extra good measure always. The minute you begin working by the clock you join that vast army of folks who have no future in anything because they are 'getters" instead of 'givers.' Besides, the most common type of dishonesty today is 'stealing time.' When you make another contract with yourself to do better than is necessary, then you will love your work and your work will prosper amazingly.

"Now, Bob, about finding the job—that's up to you; a test of your own ingenuity and perseverance."

"In other words, Dad, it's strictly up to me, eh—all I get from you is some sound advice and your moral support?"

"That's it, boy, what more do you want, being a Smithhough?"

All children are subject to little upsets. They come at unexpected times. They seem twice as serious in the dead of night. But there's one form of comfort on which a mother can always rely; good old Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation can't harm the tiniest infant. Yet mild as it is, it soothes a restless, fretful baby like nothing else. Its quick relief soon sees the youngster comfortable once more, back to sleep. Even an attack of colic, or diarrhea, yields to the soothing influence of Castoria.

Keep Castoria in mind, and keep a bottle in the house—always. Give a few drops to any child whose tongue is coated, or whose breath is bad. Continue with Castoria until the child is grown. Every drugstore has Castoria; the genuine has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

How A College Athlete Keeps Himself Well

Robert O. Deming fancy diver on Colgate University Swimming Team.

Bob Deming of Colgate, claims that a sensible method of health has really made life a pleasure for him. Mr. Deming writes that at first he could not believe this simple thing was the cause of his buoyant spirits. Finally, however, he had to admit that it was Nujol which was keeping him well, besides giving him, as he says, "five times the vitality."

"Believe me," he says "having free and regular bodily elimination makes all the difference in the world to a diver as well as to any other athlete. I can't afford to be nervous, sluggish, or depressed while diving. It just isn't done! I would like to urge any one, whether they think they are in good health or not, to give Nujol a try-out. It certainly can't do any harm, and I'll bet it would make them feel a hundred per cent better. It's worth trying!"

Mr. Deming has just about told the whole story. He is right in believing that Nujol contains no drugs, no medicines of any kind. It is tasteless and colorless as pure water. It is simply harmless internal lubrication, which your body needs as much as any other machine. Regularly as clock work, Nujol cleans out of your body those poisons which we all have, and which make us low in our minds, tired, headachy, and below par.

The way for you to find out how much better Nujol will make you feel is to try it for a few days. You can get a bottle in a sealed package at any drug store. It costs only a few cents, but it makes you feel like a million dollars. Do you know how many thousands of people keep themselves well and happy just by using Nujol? Why shouldn't you feel well all the time? You can! Get yourself a bottle of Nujol today!

Mush and milk parties should be given to popularize that neglected dish.

Any COLD

That cold may lead to something serious, if neglected. The time to do something for it is now. Don't wait until it develops into bronchitis. Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin as soon as you feel a cold coming on. Or as soon as possible after it starts. Bayer Aspirin will head off or relieve the aching and feverish feeling—will stop the headache. And if your throat is affected, dissolve two or three tablets in a quarter-glassful of warm water, and gargle. This quickly soothes a sore throat and reduces inflammation and infection. Read proven directions for neuralgia, for rheumatism and other aches and pains. Genuine Bayer Aspirin is harmless to the heart.

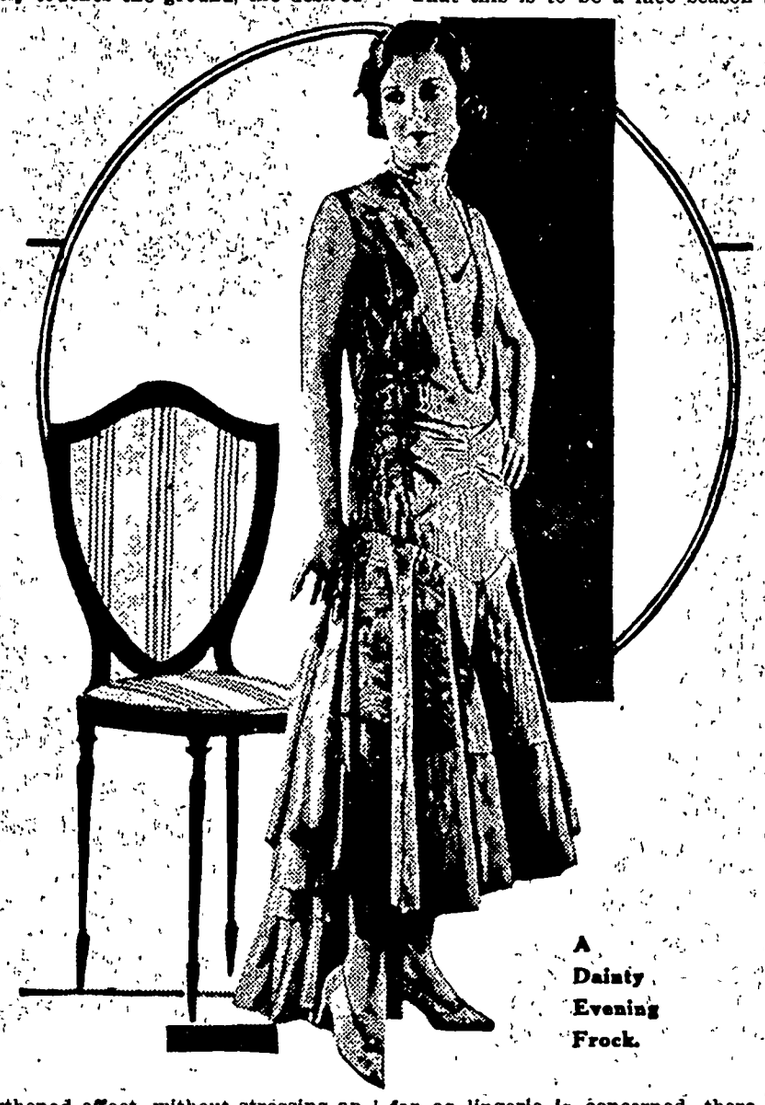
GRACEFUL TRAINS ANSWER CALL; BOUDOIR ENSEMBLES ARE LAVISH

TAFFETA, moire and similar stiff silks in delectable colors are quite the thing for party wear this season.

Fashions' flair for color leads to jade green for the handsome moire frock in the illustration. This youthful yet formal gown achieves grace and distinction with fitted bodice and circular flare. The hemline is enhanced with a border of tulle in matching color.

The adroit handling of the hemline achieves through a train which barely touches the ground, the desired lengthened effect, without stressing an over-long hemline at the front.



A Dainty Evening Frock.

While moire and taffeta claim a good deal of attention, there is also much favor expressed for chiffons and satins. The former are made up with endless pointed tabs, floating panels, capelets and such, while the beauty of the latter depends upon lines of classic simplicity.

Flower patterned taffetas and chiffons are appearing in increasing number. The florals are in vivid colors and the motifs are often bold and definite in their outline.

It is surprising to what extremes fashion is going, in the stylizing of evening gowns. The flowered silks are sometimes quaintly made with very full skirts, their hemlines, measuring yards and yards, and touching the ground all the way round. Add short puff sleeves as so many of the smartest formal frocks do, and it is difficult to decide whether the gown be an 1830 or a 1930 model.

Frocks of solid colored silks often this season, achieve bouffancy through myriads of tulle flounces in matching shade.

When the evening gown is of classic satin the decolletage frequently features a single shoulder strap of rhinestones. Should the frock be fashioned of allover lace graceful scarfs or capelets veil the arms most beguilingly.

It is said that the organdy party dress will play a leading role later on. The models shown in advance reveal exceedingly long and full skirts, some with embroidered flower clusters.

Boudoir Ensembles.

Modern boudoir apparel is not exempt from the changing moods and modes and vogues of capricious fashion. The "changing silhouette" registers as startling innovations for nightrobes, costume slips, chemise and such as it does for daytime costume.

New interpretations of fitted "lines" are especially featured in gowns. Barbara Kent, motion picture actress (seated to right in lower picture) is wearing a "gown ensemble" which reflects all the latest style trends. A fitted bodice with a definitely indicated waistline are two of the outstanding features of this gown, also the plaited side panels and the scalloped hemline. There is a yoke of dark tinted alencon lace.

That this is to be a lace season so far as lingerie is concerned, there is no doubt. The darker ecru and string-colored laces have proved so effective on eggshell, white and flesh tint satin or crepe garments, their vogue will be accented more than ever during the coming months.

Not only is the color of lace stressed, but there is no limit to its lavishment. Noting the lovely negligee which Miss Kent is wearing over her exquisite gowns, one begins to realize the extent to which lace is employed.

A novelty among gown ensembles is a model which adds a cunning lace-trimmed cape of matching satin instead of the usual bed jacket.

Lace elaboration also marks the chemise and long-jacket ensemble to the left in the accompanying illustration. Again crepe satin is employed for the styling of this boudoir costume. The sleeveless coat is entirely of lace.

When a garment is not lace-trimmed, then it is apt to be elaborately worked with inset or applique motifs. This form of decoration is very popular, particularly when it is enhanced with exquisite hand embroidery. And when it plays up color contrasts such as pink with darker pink, and so on.

For costume slips and also for gowns princess lines are adopted. The hemlines of some slips are made to follow the course of the frocks under which they are worn. The short-front and long-back mode emphasized in evening frocks is reflected in many of the newer nightgowns.

Pink tones vie with pure white, eggshell, banana or orange hues. The deep ecru laces are particularly effective on white satin or crepe.

For the coeds, sleeping pajamas are taking the place of gowns to a large extent. These are also sometimes lavishly lace trimmed.

"Everyone Raves About My Rolls, Cakes and Breads," Says Mrs. Galloway

"They Could Make Just As Good, If They Used Gold Medal 'Kitchen-tested' Flour"

Mrs. Jake Galloway, Beeman, Iowa

"At the Iowa State Fair last year I won twenty prizes. A first on Cloverleaf Rolls, third on Nut Bread as well as several seconds and several thirds on different cakes—all made with Gold Medal 'Kitchen-tested' Flour. Everyone raves about my rolls, cakes and breads, but I tell them they could make just as good if they used GOLD MEDAL 'Kitchen-tested' Flour. I can surely recommend it as an all-purpose flour."

A Boon to Women All Over the Country

THOUSANDS of women all over the country now know how to bake prize cakes, pies, breads and biscuits every time. They use a new-type flour for all baking purposes—GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour—that simplifies baking remarkably and banishes the cause of most baking failures.

Failures, experts found, were mostly due to the fact that 2 sacks of the same flour often acted differently, even with the same recipe... it was not uniform in oven action.

So now all GOLD MEDAL Flour is "Kitchen-tested" before it comes to you. As each batch comes through the mill it is tested by actual baking—bread, cakes, biscuits, pastries—in an oven just like yours. Only flour which acts the same perfect way every time is allowed to go out to you. Thus you know in advance exactly what your results will be.

QUICK RELIEF

Changed Viewpoint

"Who was that pensive, mysterious boy Hazel used to go with?"

"He's that sullen, evasive man she's married to."—American Legion Monthly.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick-up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

Contentment and mediocrity go together.

Conceit may pull a man up, but will never prop him up.—Ruskin.

Honor Comes Too Late to Interest Inventor

If there was ever an unfortunate inventor it was old Jim Fitch, the genius of Philadelphia, who plied the Delaware river in a steamboat of his own design and construction 22 years before the Fulton effort on the Hudson. Fitch spent years in working out his idea and did it with a considerable degree of success, but he was a very humble member of society, given to minor spells of self-indulgence, so that he was never taken seriously by anyone and no hand was raised to help him. On the contrary he met with opposition and misfortune. One blow after another fell upon his shoulders and finally he gave up and wandered south, where he lived a while and then died and was buried there. The story of his setback is a long one. The only recognition that he ever received is, about to be bestowed upon him in the shape of a celebration by his descendants which will be held at an early date, but it is a little too late to be of any interest to old Jim Fitch.—Washington Star.

Wasted Energy

Yeggs who were either too stupid or too excited to read wasted a lot of futile effort on a safe at Norristown, Pa. They dragged the heavy safe from the office and lugged it into an alley, where, with chisels, they attacked the combination. Eventually they got it open, to find it empty. In plain view, fastened to the door of the safe, was a card giving exact instructions how to open it.

The leak in the water system we told about last week was speedily repaired, considering the fact that the work was done in sub-zero temperature. AVERY FARM BUREAU MET THURSDAY EVE

AVERY FARM BUREAU HELD MEETING THURSDAY EVE

Interesting Program Was Part Of Evening's Entertainment

The regular meeting of the Avery Township Farm Bureau was held on Thursday evening, January 23rd at the Center School House in Avery Township.

The program was arranged and was in charge of Mrs. M. Kearney and Mrs. Jay Griggs. The program follows:

Community Singing, "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Reading, "Winter Days," Frances Kearney.

Dialogue, "Unexpected visit of the Assessor," Edison Nelson, Kenneth Griggs, Leo Kearney, Charlie Tisor, Dolores Cook, Veenstra Eula.

Song, by La Vonne Sherwood and Dolores Cook.

Reading, "Big Sis," Boyd Nelson.

Dialogue, "When Nora Makes The Cake", Eula and Margaret Veenstra.

Reading, "No More Good Old Days" Mrs. Busse.

Corn Drill, School Children of District No. 5.

Dialogue, "Meting A Train," by La Vonne Sherwood and Edison Nelson.

Song, "School Days," Eula and Margaret Veenstra, Kenneth Griggs, and Leo Kearney.

Monologue, Mrs. Hemingway.

Song, "Farm Bureau," by the school children.

After the program an old fashioned spelling bee was held. Mr. Leon Sherwood and Henry Busse choose the members for each side and Mrs. Jay Griggs pronounced the words. Leo Kearney won the prize, a box of candy, for being the best speller.

Refreshments were served, dough nuts, sandwiches and coffee. The coffee and napkins were donated by the John Day Store in Klemme.

Owing to the bad condition of the roads only about thirty five were present, but all seemed to have a good time.

Special Notice

The third lesson, "Diet for the School Child," of the Second Year Nutrition Course, will be given at the home of Mrs. Harry Ostendorf in Avery Township February 12, by Miss Johnston. All Co-operators are expected to bring their own picnic lunch, and if imposible to come send a substitute.

KLEMME MAY LOSE SUGAR BEET DUMP HERE

Company Must Have At Least One Hundred Acres Of Beets Here

Unless the American Beet Sugar Co. can secure contracts from Klemme farmers for at least one hundred acres of beets this coming year, the beet dump and equipment located on the Rock Island tracks in Klemme will be taken down and moved to some other community where there are enough beets raised to warrant using the equipment. For this attitude we canot blame them for it means quite a loss to have expensive equipment standing idle.

The past year there was but one Klemme farmer who raised beets. The dump was not operated, but the beets were trucked to Belmond as this method was cheaper than operating the beet dump machinery.

Is A Benefit To The Community

It is a real benefit to the community to have a large number of beets in this vicinity. One Klemme merchant said that the beet workers are good spenders and leave a large share of their summer wages in the town for groceries, meat and clothing. Then in the fall when the beet dump and machinery is operated it gives a couple of local men employment at very good wages for a couple of months. The raising of beets fits well into farm operation, dairying and beef raising.

New Methods Being Used

A few weeks ago the Editor of the Times had a talk with Mr. Christenson, head of the plant at Belmond. From him we learned that a new method was tried and found very successful last season by Mr. Geo. Schanil, a farmer at Lake Lillian, Minn. Mr. Schanil did away with muhc of the objectionable part of beet raising—hand labor.

Instead of employing labor o block and thin the beets, Mr. Schanil made a few simple adjustments on his cultivator and cros-cultivated the field, in this way blocking them. The field was thinned by high school boys without the use of a hoe.

The cross-cultivation method saved approximately $6.00 per acre on labor, and this particular field yielded 15.2 tons per acre, while a like area on the same farm grown the regular way, blocked and thinned by hand labor, yielded 12½ tons. The field cros-cultivated, at less expense made a gain of 2.7 tons over the field grown in the regular way.

No extra equipment is needed for cultivating beets this new way, and the Company will send out a man to make the few adjustments and get the farmer started right on the new method.

Mr. W. H. Darrow, field man for the Company was in Klemme Monday and stoped at the Times Office. He informed us that it was not necessary for the farmer to invest anything for for a cultivator. The company has for rent, at a small fee, the beet drill, and have even made arrangements to construct and rent out the labor houses.

The Company would be glad to hold a meeting in Klemme if the farmers are interested in knowing more about the new method of raising beets and the many advantages. Any farmer interested should write Mr. W. H. Darrow, Kanawha, the American Beet Sugar Co., Belmond, or inform the Times of your edsire. There is no obligation whatever.

FIRST HONOR COURT DRAWS CROWD

BOY SCOUT COURT OF HONOR HERE WELL ATTENDED

Many Special Numbers Add To The Attractiveness Of Program

The District Four Court of Honor which was the first Court of Honor ever held in Klemme aws well attended by Scouts and Leaders from Crystal Lake, Forest City, Britt and Klemme, as well as a number of parents and friends of Scouts.

Miss Ford and her High School orchestra opened the program with two numbers. This was followed by the bugle call "asembly" by Troop Bugler, Kenneth Kluckhohn, and the parade of candidates into the auditorium, led by Scout Wayne Pavey. At the bugler call "To the Colors" the Troop 56 Color Guards, Byrnes Missman, Harold Jost, Clarence Kluckhohn and Dorance Day, executed the flag drill and ceremony and following the pledge of Allegiance to The Flag, the orchestra played "America," and with M. F. Penrod leading, the audience sang one verse. Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch gave the benediction.

Dr. W. F. Missman, chairman of the local Troop Committee, introduced the members of the Court of Honor Committee.

These men presented candidates with second and first class badges; second and first class merit badges, Star and Life Badges, one Civic Service Bar, and contest awards.

The Scout program was made of more interest by the introduction of several numbers which were greatly enjoyed by all and included, selections by the High School Orchestra, a male quartett composed of M. F. Penrod, Ralph and Henry Ludeke, and Emil Patet, a humorous reading by Scout Dorance Day, two numbers by Miss McGinnis and her High School Girls Glee Club, a cornet duet by Scouts Kenneth Kluckhohn and Kenneth Patet, and a piano solo by Miss Gracka Quandt. Wm. Breitske had charge of the closing ceremony, using the Color Retreat and the Indian Benediction, followed by "Taps."

W. P. Butler, Mason City and Area Court of Honor Chairman was present and presented Troop 31 of Crystal Lake, and Troop 19, Garner, with 2nd and 3rd place pennants won in the recent Area Wide Contest. This is a signal honor for both the Troops honored, as well as the entire District Four. Thorn, Troop 25 won the President's loving cup by piling up 6,405 points. They were but 498 points ahead of Crystal Lake, who had 5,907 points. Garner was right on the heels of Crystal Lake with 4,148 points. Mr. Paul Manor, A. S. M., of Garner, in a brief talk praised Klemme who won fourth place with 3,529 for the part they took in making Garner and Crystal Lake step to hold the place they held in the contest. He emphasized the fact that whether or not certain troops won, they al received a great benefit, and especially the high ten troops who put so much pep into the contest.

The next Court of Honor for District Four will be held at Britt on March 17th. Everybody invited!

BARTLESON TO CONSTRUCT BUILDING

BARTLESON BROS., FOREST CITY AWARDED CONTRACT

Work On New Structure Will Begin Early This Spring

The contract for the building of the new Reformed Church in Klemme was awarded to Bartleson Bros., Forest City contractors, at a meeting of the building committee held Monday afternoon. The contract was let for $21,000.00, for the general building. The heating, plumbing, wiring, fixtures, furniture etc. is not included in the contract price. These extras will make the total cost for the building complete about $28,000.00.

Designed After Plymouth Church

The general design of the new Reformed church will be along the lines of the new church at Plymouth except that a number of improvements have been added to the Klemme structure. The main part of the building will be about 34x80 feet; with a wing from the east side about 18x26. The building will be modern through-out and will have all of the convenience usually found in an up-to-date public building.

The brick selected for the new church is dark colored with a modern face and wil be apropriately trimmed. A forced air heating system will be installed. The building is so designed, byt Architect Thorwald Thorson, that there will not be a square foot of lost space in the entire building. There are no unnecessary obstructions, either on the main floor, or in the basement. The basement will provide adequate space for a modern kitchen and a large dining room, and other rooms needed. The coal storage room will be outside the building, and the forced air heating plant will be so installed that it does not spoil the appearance of the down stairs room.

The Bartleson Bros. have built a large number of churches and those near here include the new churches at Plymouth and Crystal Lake.

Mr. Thorwald Thorson, the architect has specialized in churches and has designed more than fifty fine churches. He will oversee the building operations for the building committee of the church.

The Reformed people, and especially Rev. Grosshuesch and the building committee, are to be congratulated and complimented in their undertaking. It has meant a lot of hard work and much time sacificed but they have performed their job well. The congregation has responded liberally in a financial way and they are to be complimented for their progressiveness.

HAD BIRTHDAY SURPRISE FOR MRS. FRANK KLUCKHOHN

Friends Brought Well Filled Baskets And Served Supper

Mrs. Frank Kluckhohn had a birthday Saturday, but it was not until the following afternoon that her friends staged a surprise for her, when they arrived with well filled baskets of goods things which they served for supper. The surprise was quite complete.

The evening was spent in a social way. Mrs. Kluckhohn was presented with aprons as a birthday gift.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Keraus; Wm. C. Keraus and sons, Otho and Verle; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kudje and daughters; Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Waterman and Marian; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson and son, Buster; Fred Kluckhohn and daughter, Thelma, and Sadie Turgasen.

MANUFACTURING PORTABLE BUILDINGS AT NORTHERN

Local Lumber Company Doing An Extensive Business In New Line

It may have escaped the general public, but the Times brings to light an interesting featuer of the Northern Lumber Company's business during the winter months.

Paul Grange, manager of the local yard here, sometime ago conceived the idea of creating more work for local carpenters during the winter months by putting them to work turning lumber into useful farm portable buildings.

A large work shop building has been built at the rear of the lumber yard and here the men build and assemble chicken brooder houses, hog brooder houses, and other small buildings in a variety of shapes and sizes. The buildings are light, of strong material, and insulated against cold and heat. They are so built that they are easily moved about on the farm.

The buildings have all of the modern equipment and sell at a very reasonable price. In fact, the price is so low that the farmer can buy them cheaper ready-built than he can buy the material and do the work himself.

We beleive the farmers will find the Northern Lumber Co. display of portable buildings quite interesting. And, Paul likes to have them call and see the buildings and tell him if they could be improved in any manner.

HANCOCK COUNTY SPELLING BEE

ALL SCHOOLS OF COUNTY WILL ENTER REGISTER CONTEST

Many Valuable Prizes Are Offered Contestants This Year

(By Co. Supt. J. R. Baggs)

The schools of Hancock County have entered the 1930 Statewide Spelling Bee sponsored by the Des Moines Register. This is the fifth annual contest of its kind and each year the town, rural and consolidated schools haves hown increased interest in this undertaking. A large majority of these schools aro now hard at work preparing for the county contest to be held in Garner some time in March. The spelling bee offers a splendid opportunity not only for more efficiency in spelling but also for developing sociability and a competitive spirit that is highly beneficial to the boys and girls of today. Every school is entitled to one representative in the county contest.

Lions Club Offers Prizes

The Lions Club of Garner, a service club, gave cash prizes last year. The club has been so favorably impressed with the merits of the venture that it is offering twenty dollars in cash prizes to the winners in this contest. This should be a great incentive for better preparation on the part of the fifteen hundred boys and girls of the county who are now enrolled in the spelling bee.

The winner will represent Hancock County in the State Bee to be held in Des Moines, April 26th.

Trip To Washington Is Prize

The prize for the state championship will be a trip to Washington, chaperoned by a representative of The Des Moines Register, with all expenses paid, and an opportunity there to comepte for the national championship and a part of the national $2,500 prize fund.

Teacher To Receive Free Trip

In addition to this the teacher of the Iowa Champion wil be sent to Washington with all expenses paid to enjoy the pleasure of the week's entertainments at the Capitol City and have the privilege of meeting President Hoover.

Other Prizes To Be Given

The second prize will be $50; the third, $25; fourth, $15; fifth, $10; sixth to fifteenth prizes, inclusive, each $5. Prizes for each school winner in the county will be a neatly printed certificate. The prize for each county champion will be an appropriate medal; these medals will be distributed at the state bee in Des Moines.

MOST OF ROADS IN COUNTY ARE NOW OPEN TO CARS

The County snow plows the past week have been busy in the county clearing snow off the roads on all of the rural mail routes.

At this writing most of the main county and township roads in Hancock aro open to cars, and many farmers are again able to go to town via the gasoline route.

The new plow equipped trucks recently purchased by the county are certainly doing a nice job of clearing the side roads.

Birthplace of Lincoln, Hodgenville, Ky.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ALTHOUGH, as Secretary Stanton, standing at the bedside of the dying Lincoln exclaimed, "Now he belongs to the ages," three states have always taken particular pride in claiming as their own the great American whose birthday we celebrate on February 12. Kentucky gave him birth; Indiana nurtured him in his boyhood and witnessed the first tragedy in the life of this man of sorrows; Illinois gave him to the nation and in her rich soil laid his weary body to rest when his work was done.

Now, thanks to the researches of an indefatigable Lincoln scholar, at least five other states may lay claim to having contributed something to the greatness that was Abraham Lincoln—if heredity may be regarded as the prime factor in evaluating the greatness of a man. One of them is Massachusetts, another is New Jersey, another Pennsylvania, another West Virginia and the last—and herein lies another example of the eternal fitness of things—is that "Mother of Presidents," the commonwealth of Virginia. The scholar who has brought to light the facts which justify the above statements is William E. Barton, who in his book "The Lineage of Lincoln," published by the Bobbs-Merrill company, apparently has revealed all that is ever likely to be known about the forebears of Abraham Lincoln.

In his foreword Barton states that "This quest has carried me three times across the ocean and has sent me to innumerable courthouses in Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois." In the latter places he was working in virgin historical soil and amid the dusty crumbling old documents which he unearthed, he established for the first time the complete record, so far as it seems likely ever to be complete, of Lincoln's maternal ancestors, the Hankses. The story of the Great Emancipator's paternal ancestors, the Lincolns, has been told before, but Barton's investigations have added to, and in some cases, corrected some minor errors made by previous workers in that field.

It is in tracing the Hanks ancestral lines, however, that Doctor Barton's work has been so outstanding. "For two hundred years, from their first landing in Virginia, no member of the Hanks family, in the ancestral line of Abraham Lincoln, made one known scratch of the pen to aid the genealogist, and the public records are almost incredibly scarce," says Doctor Barton. "Not only so, but wars from Bacon's rebellion to the Civil war have wiped out completely the records of some counties where our need was greatest.

Compared to all these difficulties, the tracing of the paternal Lincoln line has been comparatively easy. The name of Lincoln goes back to in its earliest form to the days of Roman occupation of England. Lindum was a Roman colony established about 86 A. D. Through the successive modifications of Lindum-Colonia, Lindumcolny, Lindcolon and Lindcoln the place name of Lincoln finally emerged. So there was a city of Lincoln in Lincolnshire and since in the early days surnames indicated where a man lived, there came into being families of Lincolns. The first recorded use of Lincoln as a family name appears in the Domesday Book in 1086. Alfred de Lincoln (i. e. "Alfred who comes from the county of Lincoln") was a Saxon by birth, but his lands were saved from confiscation by his marriage to a Norman woman.

Although the name of Lincoln originated in Lincolnshire, it was from Norfolk that the first Lincolns came to America. Abraham Lincoln's great-great-great-great-grandfather was Samuel Lincoln who was born in Hingham, Norfolk, in 1619, emigrated to Massachusetts in 1637 and died in Hingham, Mass., in 1690. From this original immigrant seven Lincolns in direct line to Abraham, the President, can be traced. It is in tracing this line that three states, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Virginia, get their claim to the immortal Lincoln. The tracing of this line is also a striking commentary on the migratory habits of the pioneer stock from which Abraham Lincoln sprang. For not one of the seven died in the same town in which he was born and only one in the same state. They are the following:

I Samuel Lincoln.

II Mordecai Lincoln, Sr., was born in Hingham, Mass., in 1657 and died in Scituate, Mass., in 1727.

III Mordecai Lincoln, Jr., was born in Scituate, Mass., April 24, 1686, and after a residence in New Jersey died in Berks county, Pa., in 1736.

IV John Lincoln was born in Berks county, Pa., in 1716 and died in Virginia in 1788.

V Capt. Abraham Lincoln was born in Virginia in 1744 and died in Kentucky in 1786.

VI Thomas Lincoln was born in Virginia in 1778 and died in Illinois in 1851.

VII Abraham Lincoln was born in Kentucky in 1809 and died in Washington in 1865.

The maternal line of Abraham Lincoln, the Hankses, also trace back to England, and antedate the Lincolns by many years. In his investigations, Doctor Barton found innumerable Hankses as far back as the reign of King Athelstan and before . . . Athelstan died in 941, more than a century before William the Conqueror and his Normans invaded England and subjected the Saxons to their rule. Thus, too, there were Hankses recorded in history before the name of Alfred de Lincoln was written in the Domesday Book.

The Hankses were Malmesbury men. There was fighting in that part of England during the English Civil war and it was as a result of this that the first Hanks came to America. He was Thomas Hanks who was one of 27 persons deported from England in 1654 as a punishment which was being inflicted on Cromwell's men who were captured by the Royalists. Thomas Hanks became an important landholder in what is now Gloucester county, Virginia. The most that we know about him is through various land purchases but his name disappears from history after the Indian uprising of 1675 and the Bacon rebellion of 1676. But in 1697 the name of William Hanks appears in Richmond county. There is every reason to believe that he was the son of Thomas Hanks and from him the maternal ancestry of Abraham Lincoln is traced. That line reads as follows:

I Thomas Hanks.

II William Hanks. Born probably in Gloucester county, Virginia, about 1655. Died in Richmond county in 1704.

III John Hanks. Born in North Farnham parish in Richmond county, date unknown, and died in 1740.

IV Joseph Hanks. Born in North Farnham parish, December 20, 1725. Died in Nelson county, Kentucky in 1793.

V Lucy Hanks. Born probably in 1766 in Richmond county, Virginia, and died in 1825(?).

VI Nancy Hanks. Born in Mineral county, West Virginia in 1783. Died in Spencer county, Indiana, October 5, 1818.

VII Abraham Lincoln.

It will be noted that the place of Nancy Hanks' birth was given as Mineral county, W. Va. It was not known by that name in 1783 for it was then Hampshire county of Virginia, but during the Civil war the western part of the Old Dominion became a separate state and thus another state is added to the roll of those which have a particular claim upon Abraham Lincoln. Joseph Hanks and his family had moved from Richmond county to Hampshire county some time before 1782. In March, 1784, that family again migrated, this time to Kentucky where Nancy Hanks was to meet Thomas Lincoln, marry him in Washington county, June 12, 1806, and then on that February day 121 years ago give birth to the boy whose name was to become world famous.

But the fact that Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia have joined Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois in the list of states closely connected with the career of Abraham Lincoln is not the only revelation in the new Barton book. More interesting still is the fact that the two outstanding leaders in the Civil war were relatives. In one of his chapter headings Barton makes the startling statement "Lincoln was a Lee" and in that chapter proves that both Abraham Lincoln, by virtue of his office as President, commander in chief of the Union forces, and Robert E. Lee, the great battle leader of the Confederate forces, trace back—Lincoln through the maternal line and Lee through the paternal line—to a common ancestor, Col. Richard Lee.

Col. Richard Lee and his wife Anna arrived in Virginia in 1642, an event which "marked the beginning of the authentic Lee history in the Old Dominion." The second son of Richard and Anna was also named Richard. The fifth son of this Richard was Henry Lee, and the third son of this Henry was the Lieut. Col. Henry Lee, who married the Lucy Grymes who according to the story was "the Lowland Beauty" of Washington's early life. The second child and oldest son of Lieut. Col. Lee was Maj. Gen. Henry Lee, who bestowed upon Washington the famous encomium "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." And the fourth son of General Lee was Robert E. Lee, of Arlington and Appomattox.

"And now, before we introduce the Hanks family into this narrative, it is time for us to take a lesson in geography," says Doctor Barton. And he gives that lesson thus:

When Colonel Richard Lee established his home in Virginia in 1642, there were but eight counties in that commonwealth and he lived in the County of York. That county was subsequently divided and redivided and subdivided. Before Colonel Lee died, his estate, which he called Paradise, was located in Gloucester county, on the borders of New Kent, later the home of Martha Custis Washington. Gloucester was then the richest and most populous county in Virginia and was in the peninsula formed by the York river on the south and the Rappahannock on the north. His neighbors may be presumed to have varied in quality, but if Virginia had an aristocracy in that day, Gloucester county was the center of it, and some of his friends were among the most noted men in Virginia.

We are already aware that Thomas Hanks was at least twenty-one years a resident of this Gloucester region. And now we discover that, as his holdings widened and his boundaries followed the lines of other planters, two of his patents grant him land adjoining the estate of Colonel Lee! This was none other than Colonel Richard Lee, progenitor of the Lee family, and ancestor of Robert E. Lee! That belligerent old royalist, foremost in Virginia in support of Charles I, and one of the first to hail Charles II as the lawful sovereign of England, lived for many years a near neighbor of Thomas Hanks! The loyalist ancestor of Robert E. Lee and the rebel ancestor of Abraham Lincoln were next-plantation neighbors in Gloucester county!

Furthermore, when Bacon's rebellion was over, and the Hanks family moved across the Rappahannock, so did the Lees.

And as Thomas Hanks had long lived neighbor to Colonel Richard Lee on the south shore of the Rappahannock, their children in successive generations lived neighbors on the north shore of the same stream. The Lees established their abiding place at a plantation which they named Stratford, and the Hankses, intermarrying with the Woodbridge family, whose plantation occupied the site of an old Indian village not far away, lived for a hundred years with Lees on three sides of them.

It was only natural, therefore, that sometime there would be intermarriage of the two families. And that is exactly what took place. The original Richard Lee had seven sons, and one of these had a son named William who married a Dorothy Taylor, the daughter of an Elizabeth Taylor who lived to a great age. William and Dorothy in their turn had a son whom they named William, and Elizabeth Taylor made this son, who would be her grandson, the executor of her will, dated 1747. The executor took his time, and at his death in 1764 he had not completed the settlement of his grandmother's estate.

When his own affairs were adjusted balances were found to be due to four of his children under the will of Elizabeth Taylor. But two of these children by that time had passed away, and their balances were awarded to their surviving husbands, of whom one was Thomas Hanks and the other Joseph Hanks. The inheritances amounted in the one case to £9, and in the other to £2. The records contain the Taylor will and the settlement of the estate of this William Lee, and from these records Doctor Barton got his start in this quest. Thomas Hanks is shown to have married Betsey Lee, and Joseph Hanks became the husband of Ann Lee. Joseph and Ann had a daughter Lucy, who became the mother of Nancy Hanks, the mother of Abraham Lincoln.

Thus Robert E. Lee, born in Virginia in 1870, is shown to have descended from one of the seven sons of Col. Richard Lee of 1642; there were four intervening generations, "rather wide apart," says Doctor Barton, because in several instances the descent was through younger sons. Abraham Lincoln, born in Kentucky in 1809, is traced back to the same Col. Richard Lee through another of his seven sons, but this time there were six intervening generations.

"In establishing the descent of Abraham Lincoln from the illustrious families of Lee, Woodridge, Taylor and the rest, we practically assured ourselves of his descent also from such intimately related families as the Wormsleys, the Carters, the Corbins and the others," Doctor Barton continues. "Abraham Lincoln sprang from the loins of the common people through 'second' or 'undistingulshed' families (Lincoln's own words), but they were not disreputable families and in his veins was some of the bluest blood of the First Families of Virginia.

"Robert E. Lee was born January 19, 1807. His father was the brilliant and improvident 'Light Horse Harry.' His mother was of the proud stock of 'King Carter.' Little more than two years later, on February 12, 1809, in Kentucky, late a county of Virginia, in a log cabin, Abraham Lincoln was born. His father was the good-natured and almost impecunious Tom Lincoln, and his mother was the gentle and intelligent Nancy Hanks. All these were native Virginians.

"These two men present contrasts enough, but both were intellectual, both had unusual ability, both were men of magnanimity, who emerged from a cruel war without hatred, and who sought the welfare of a reunited country. Both were men of great heart and unsullied honor. Both were Virginians, and both belong to the whole of America. Both North and South should be proud to know that these two great and noble Americans were kinsmen."

There is another interesting bit of history which Doctor Barton uncovered in his researches in the Hanks ancestry. "We think of the Puritans of New England as far removed from the Cavaliers of Virginia," he says, "but how many of us know that a few of those same Puritans went south and mingled their blood with that of the first families of Virginia. Perhaps, if we knew all the maternal lines, we should find that both Robert E. Lee and Abraham Lincoln were Mayflower descendants."

Needless Suffering

The next time a headache makes you stay at home—

Or some other ache or pain prevents your keeping an engagement—

Remember Bayer Aspirin! For there is scarcely any pain it cannot relieve, and relieve promptly.

These tablets give real relief, or millions would not continue to take them. They are quite harmless, or the medical profession would not constantly prescribe them.

Don't be a martyr to unnecessary pain. To colds that might so easily be checked; to neuritis, neuralgia; to those pains peculiar to women; or any suffering for which Bayer Aspirin is such an effective antidote.

For your own protection, buy the genuine. Bayer is safe. It's always the same. It never depresses the heart, so use it as often as needed, but the cause of any pain can be treated only by a doctor.

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play, can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine; it always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

"Always in Good Humor" says Bill "and my Folks, too"

YOUNG BILL FREEMAN, Jr., of 707 South Street, Key West, Florida, has started in early telling the world his secret of health. "I don't know that I would have been the cause of divorce," writes Bill, through his mother, "but certainly the first three months of my life my mother was a nervous wreck, and so was I. I never saw father because he didn't like my disposition—and every day it was a fight at our house—either castor oil or an enema, and I was just about ready to quit home.

"Finally, they started in giving me a half teaspoonful of Nujol night and morning. I am five months old now, and I take Nujol every other night, which keeps me so well regulated that I am always in good humor, and so are my folks."

How simple it is, after all. No drugs, no medicines, no irritating cathartics. Just simple and natural lubrication which our bodies need as much as any machine. Nujol is not absorbed by the body. It is non-fattening; it can form no habit; it cannot hurt the smallest baby. What it does is keep our bodies internally clean of the poisons we all have and which, unless they are swept away as regularly as clock work, give us headaches, make us feel sick, low in our minds, blue, down on the world.

Nujol is as tasteless and colorless as pure water. Start this very night and see how different you will feel after a few days. It costs but a few cents and it makes you feel like a million dollars. You can buy it at any drug store in a sealed package. With millions of people all over the world keeping well with Nujol there is no reason why you, too, should not be joyous, full of pep, with the happiness that comes of good health. Get a bottle today.

BARTON'S DYANSHINE SHOE POLISH

Desperate Wives have been known to boil their husbands' pipes in lye. This kills the lingering authority of over-strong tobacco, but good-bye pipe! Well, it's time those husbands discovered Sir Walter Raleigh's favorite smoking mixture. It's a blend of choice tobaccos mellowed to a surpassing mildness and flavor, and wrapped in gold foil to keep it fresh. And fragrant? Wives positively love it.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

DORMANT SPRAY IS BEST FOR INSECTS

Do Not Apply Oil When in Danger of Freezing.

Scale insects and plant lice are controlled through the use of the dormant spray to fruit trees. This is the first spray of the season and when applied to peach trees must be timed so as to get on before the buds swell so as to control peach leaf curl as well as the scale insects. For apples the application is made most effectively when the leaves have protruded about one-fourth of an inch from the buds.

The dormant spray is primarily a control for scale insects, advises C. H. Brannon and G. Fant of the North Carolina State College extension staff. Yet when oil or nicotine sulphate is added to the lime sulphur at the rate of three-fourths of a pint to 100 gallons, plant lice are also controlled, especially when the application is made at the green-tip stage of growth.

Oil sprays have come into wide use for dormant sprays because the oil will control the scale and is more pleasant to apply. Such sprays may be made at home though it is advised that they be purchased unless the grower has a large number of trees to treat. Brannon and Fant say that there are many excellent products on the market and growers should get authoritative information before investing. Do not buy worthless materials, they advise, and do not apply oil sprays when there is danger of freezing weather.

Where the orchard is troubled with peach leaf curl, growers should use either the lime-sulphur by itself or all the bordeaux mixture to an oil spray and apply before the buds begin to swell. Oils have no value in controlling plant diseases. Brannon and Fant advise against mixing lime-sulphur with oil unless the label on the oil container says that it might be done.

Concentrated lime-sulphur will give good results as a dormant spray and will control both insects and diseases. However, if there is much scale the two experts advise the use of oil.

Regular Pruning Work Aids Disease Control

In the regular pruning work, canker areas on the bark should be destroyed by cutting them out. Briefly, the process consists of cutting out to healthy bark on each side and above and below, disenfecting and painting the wounded area. The pruning knives and tools should also be disinfected before going to another tree. In removing blight cankers and other cankers on smaller branches, it is well to cut from four to six inches below the diseased portion, in order to be sure that all the diseased parts have been taken away. Such work will help materially in reducing the spreading of blister canker, black rot canker, fire blight, and other diseases.

Cedar rust, a fungus disease of the apple, cannot be effectively controlled by spraying. It is, therefore, necessary to cut all red cedars growing within one or one and a half miles of apple orchards. The fungus has two hosts, or food plants, the red cedar and the apple. Closely related fruits like the crab apple and the haw are also injured by cedar rust. Late fall and early winter is an effective season for cedar eradication, as the trees may be seen long distances, and the orchardist may have more time to search them out, cut and burn them.

Pruning Small Fruits Will Increase Yields

Small fruits respond to pruning better than any other class of fruits, according to A. L. Ford of the South Dakota State college extension service. Proper pruning, he believes, will give materially higher yields.

Raspberries should be pruned by removing at the base all canes that bore the previous season. New canes that are too long should be headed in without damage. Canes that are to bear should be thinned out where they are too thick, leaving eight or ten canes per plant. All prunings should be burned immediately.

In the case of gooseberries and currants, where the two and three-year-old wood bears the best fruit, wood more than three years old should not be allowed to remain on the bush. About one-third of the wood should be removed, according to Professor Ford, taking out only the oldest wood. The young suckers that come up from the center should not be removed as they will be bearing fruit when two and three years old.

Control Downy Mildew

The most important time for the application of bordeaux mixture that downy mildew and black rot may be controlled is the spray just previous to the blossoming. The other applications are given as supplements to the early application, and are of great value when made as such. But the omission of the first can rarely be counteracted by the later treatments. It was found in 1915 and later that sulphur-lime dust was very effective in controlling downy mildew.

Properly Fitted Collar for Horse

One Most Important Point Often Overlooked in Rush of Work.

No more inexcusable thing is to be seen on the farm than a horse working in the field with an improperly fitted collar. If the collar is too large, chafing and sores result and it is agony to the horse to be kept in harness. If, on the other hand, the collar is too short, the horse is choked down and cannot give satisfactory service.

A few points in selection of collars are well worth remembering.

Points on Selection.

If the horse is thick through the upper portion of the neck, he should be fitted with a "half" or full "sweeney" collar. The reason is that these collars are not so fully padded about the upper portion of the neck as they are farther down, where the neck of the horse is not so thick and needs heavier padding. A well-fitting collar results from a careful study of the animal's shoulder in these respects.

After the collar is selected, measure it on the neck. This is best done by pressing the collar back against the horse's shoulder and while so held, testing whether there is enough room between the neck and the sides of the collar to permit passage of the fingers up and down. If so, the collar is not too tight, and yet is large enough, for anything roomier would probably cause chafing.

Next test for length by fitting the collar on the horse with hames and traces in place and arrange to have some pull exerted on the traces while the horse walks. If this is not possible, have a man on each side of the horse, pull down and press back on the collar in order to get it firmly placed against the shoulder. In this position there should be a space of one and one-half inches between the bottom of the collar and the neck of the horse. If the collar is too short, the horse will choke, as has been explained; if too long, the draught of the hames will be brought too low and improper balance will ensue.

Pulling Contests Help.

"Horse-pulling contests," says the American Horse Breeders' association, in a recent pamphlet on "Horses and Mules for Power and Profit," have been and are of immense value in demonstrating the proper fitting of collars.

Rich Calcareous Loess Helps Corn Production

The corn belt soils are the world's richest because they are young soils, according to Dr. R. S. Smith of the University of Illinois. The origin of the soils is rich calcareous glacial deposits or rich calcareous loess.

"The time elapsed since the last glacial age has been short and the weathering of the soils is not far enough advanced to deplete the fertility of the original elements. The climate of the corn belt is favorable to formation of good soils due to the frozen condition of the soil a good part of the year, which prevents leaching for the period of the winter.

"The grass that grew on the prairies of the corn belt contributed organic matter to the soil, while the forested areas left very little vegetable matter in those soils."

Mice Gnawing Harness Is Very Common Trouble

Gnawing harness by mice is a very common trouble, but an inquiry among a number of harness manufacturers indicates that none of them know of any material which can be rubbed on the harness to discourage the mice. One or two suggest that fish oil might help, but are frankly doubtful of its doing any good. The only practicable remedies seem to be to hang the harness on wire suspended from swinging racks or in mouse-proof harness rooms, or to trap or otherwise destroy the mice. If any of our readers have found a remedy, we should like very much to have their experiences.

Agricultural Squibs

Sweet clover will give one crop of hay in a season, but not much chance for two.

When sweet clover is sown on bluegrass it is recommended that unscarified seed be used.

It will pay anyone who likes to garden to use a seed drill. The initial cost may seem high, but if cared for will last almost a lifetime.

A seeding made up of six pounds of timothy, three pounds of alsike and two pounds of red clover would give a splendid hay crop of good quality.

Every gardener should have a compressed air sprayer and a powder gun or bellows. There are many cheap blowers available, but a dollar buys a good one and is cheapest in the long run.

* * *

About this time of the year wheat plants may be seen standing dead in the row. By digging into the drill furrow one may find one or more of the "white grubs." They often damage early sown wheat as it comes up.

"No other Flour could make such light fluffy Biscuits," says Mrs. Schneider

"That's How I Knew It Was 'Kitchen-tested' Flour"

"My husband brought home a 'sack of flour' and put it in the bin. I did not see him do it and I did not ask him what kind it was. But when I made biscuits with this flour—which I consider the supreme test—they came out light and fluffy every time. Then I found the blue slip and I knew I was using Gold Medal Flour. It had met the test and come through with flying colors. No other flour can satisfy me now. I could tell Gold Medal 'Kitchen-tested' flour in the dark."

Thousands of Women Have Banished "Guess Work" From Their Baking. They now know they can get perfect results every time—that time is saved and worry eliminated.

THEY use a new-type flour for all baking purposes—GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour—that simplifies baking remarkably and banishes the cause of most baking failures.

Failures, experts found, were mostly due to the fact that two sacks of the same flour often acted differently, even with the same recipe . . . it was not uniform in oven action.

So now all GOLD MEDAL Flour is "Kitchen-tested" before it comes to you. As each batch comes through the mill it is tested by actual baking—bread, cakes, biscuits, pastries—in an oven just like yours. Only flour which acts the same perfect way every time is allowed to go out to you. Thus you know in advance exactly what your results will be.

Rescued Doe

A handsome doe, apparently fleeing from hunters, got out on the ice of Webster lake at Franklin, N. H., and after skidding around unable to maintain a footing fell helpless. Denver Boy is a Winner

Every mother realizes how important it is to teach children good habits of conduct but many of them fail to realize the importance of teaching their children good bowel habits until the poisons from decaying waste held too long in the system have begun to affect the child's health.

Watch your child and at the first sign of constipation, give him a little California Fig Syrup. Children love its rich, fruity taste and it quickly drives away those distressing ailments, such as headaches, bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness, feverishness, fretfulness, etc. It gives them a hearty appetite, regulates their stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord. For over fifty years, leading physicians have prescribed it for half-sick, bilious, constipated children. More than 4 million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it.

Mrs. C. G. Wilcox, 3855½ Wolff St., Denver, Colorado, says: "My son, Jackie, is a prize winner for health, now, but we had a lot of trouble with him before we found his trouble was constipation and began giving him California Fig Syrup. It fixed him up quick, gave him a good appetite, made him sleep fine and he's been gaining in weight right along since the first few days, taking it."

To avoid inferior imitations of California Fig Syrup, always look for the word "California" on the carton.

Conception of "Uncle Sam" Goes Back to 1812

The creator of "Uncle Sam" is unknown. The character first appeared in publications during the War of 1812. The type is a genial Yankee trader of the time: the beard, the hat, and the cut of the clothes, are of that period.

The earliest recorded use of the name Uncle Sam for the United States government appears to be in the Troy (N. Y.) Post of September 7, 1813. The Post used it in a phrase which already had some popular currency, and explained that "the letters U. S. on the government wagons, etc., are supposed to have given rise to it."

At first the nickname was employed only in the anti-war papers, and in a derisory sense. The cartoon conception of Uncle Sam did not arrive until a little later.

There seems to be no ground for a popular story ascribing the origin to "Uncle Sam" Wilson, a government inspector in the War of 1812.

Sea Gull Stowaway

A sea gull bummed its way aboard an airship from San Francisco to Los Angeles. The bird flew into the cabin of an air liner and secreted himself in the baggage hold. When high over the city of Fresno it was found asleep and invited to get out. It only hopped higher into an inaccessible place and went back to sleep. When the plane slid into the landing field of Los Angeles the gull stretched, yawned and departed.

PHENOMENAL GAIN IN TRUST SERVICES

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers Association

SO phenomenal has been the increase of trust business that statisticians are unable to keep a true record of its advancement.

John G. Lonsdale

There are now something like 3,500 active trust departments in banks in America, while in 1900 only 165 active trust departments had been established in becoming the custodians or the guardians of the property of others, bankers assume what has been fittingly described as one of the "most exalted human relationships ever created by law." They become at once a big brother, a big sister, an advisor, or a confessor, sworn so to conduct themselves that clients will be won to them by their ability and integrity.

Thousands of little children have received an education and have been started off right in life through the trust department's safe keeping and guidance of the family estate, numberless widows have been protected from merciless stock swindlers, many thousands of business men have been relieved of troublesome details in the conduct of their business through the creation of a living trust and still others have safeguarded their business enterprises through life insurance trusts.

The favorable reaction of the public toward trust department service is not accidental. It may be traced jointly to the growing intelligence of the American people in financial affairs and to advertising to the world at large the merits of trust services. Advertising used in a sensible, judicious way is necessary, a power that has accomplished much good for humanity.

Among the detailed services, rendered by a trust department the one that seems to be winning favor the fastest is the life insurance trust. Life insurance is the quickest known way of creating an estate. In reality it affords the possessor the opportunity of setting up a positive monetary safeguard for his family and then paying for it on the installment plan.

A married man is not fair to his family if he fails to carry life insurance. I would say to the young man, "Buy insurance before you buy the ring," and to the young woman I would say, "Marry no man so thoughtless as to scoff at life insurance."

MODERN EDUCATION REVERSES OLD IDEAS

Business Institutes Use the Plan of Getting People to Think Rather Than Merely to Learn.

There is one general principle at the basis of all good teaching and it is that a person learns more readily by assimilating the experiences which he himself encounters than in any other way, says Harold Stonier, National Educational Director of the American Institute of Banking. This institute is the educational section of the American Bankers Association through which 35,000 bank men and women are receiving scientific instruction in their chosen business.

"The most advanced people in teaching today are emphasizing the importance of activity on the part of the student," he says. "In the schoolroom of former days we often heard such phrases as, 'Be still,' 'Learn by heart,' 'Don't do that,' 'What does the book say?' The newer education asks, 'What do you think?,' 'What was your reaction to that experiment?,' 'What did you discover?,' 'What reasons have you for answer?'

The New School Calls for Action

"The 'expressing' school is taking the place of the repressing and listening school. The classroom is becoming an open forum, a studio of self-expression, a place of mental growth. The modern concepts of education are personal experimentation, individual investigation, critical discussion and creative self-expression. The pupil really learns only as he is able to assimilate the new meanings of facts and principles with his previous experiences. Activities therefore constitute the pivotal force around which are grouped the new factors in education. The primary responsibility of the teacher is to furnish a constant stream of activities which will afford the stimulating urge to mental growth.

"Education is a process of experiencing, and the program of the institute is so arranged as to give the greatest opportunity to gain by such experience. Through this we develop the art of thinking. Thinking has been described as the ability to handle experience and to bring it to bear on a problem. Effective thinking arises when we are presented with the choice of conduct. Our previous experiences become helpful as we marshal them and bring them to bear upon the matter of our choice."

The students in the American Institute of Banking by reason of the fact that they continue to go on about their employment in banks while taking the banking association's study courses have an opportunity to combine learning with practical thinking and action.

Profits in Marsh Land

With proper care a bit of marshland, generally considered worthless, may be made to yield a profit. The tendency has been to drain such a piece of land and then cultivate it Sometimes this works out, but often not. Instead of this, such wet areas may be more successfully utilized for the production of fish, wild ducks and geese, and beaver and muskrats. Wet areas may also be made to produce vast quantities of food suitable for feeding and producing millions of ducks, geese and other waterfowl, and certain fur bearers—animal life that would add materially to our supplies of attractive food as well as afford recreation through hunting, with either camera or gun.

Towns With Historic Names

Names famous in British history and literature are found in a small district of southern Ontario, Canada Here is the city of London, one of the most important of the province, located on the Thames river. Less than fifty miles away is the city of Stratford, which, as in the Shakespearean tradition, is located on the Avon Nearby is a town which bears the name of the great dramatist, while another community in the region is called Waterloo. Not far from Stratford is the city of Kitchener, which before the World war was called Berlin.—New York Times.

Pet Squirrel in Church

The strains of Lohengrin resounded through a Kansas City church. Just as the last "I do" was repeated at the blossom-laden altar, a bit of fur dropped lightly to the sill of a nearby window. A flash of gray and Perky, the bride's pet squirrel, landed squarely on his mistress' head. He sat bolt upright on his throne of orange blossoms and lace, his bushy tail curled over his back, and gave the audience stare for stare. After a slight pause the bridegroom gravely removed Perky from his seat and unceremoniously dropped him out the window.

Take Warning

A man who owns one of those Pray-as-you-enter bungalows on Long Island entered a large sporting goods house to purchase a canoe. The salesman tried to sell him a launch. Finally he left without buying anything.

"I wanted a canoe," said the man. "The salesman got me interested in a launch. Then I became dissatisfied with a canoe and not having money enough to get a launch I didn't buy anything!"

Super salesmanship.—New Orleans Item-Tribune.

His Classification

He was a good-tempered little man and very chatty, and it was unfortunate that he should have got into so dull a carriageful of passengers. He beamed upon them all, and tried to start a conversation in two or three directions, but without success. Silence reigned; the interest in newspapers was intense. The snubbed one, too, sank into silence, but at the first stopping place he got out, and before slamming the carriage door, witheringly remarked, "Waxworks, by gum!"

CONTEST WINNERS TO SPEAK AGAIN

SUB-COUNTY CONTEST WILL BE HELD NEXT THURSDAY EVE

Places Won In Tuesday Evening's Contest Announced

In the Declamatory Contest between twelve of our local students held here on Tuosday evening of this wek, the folowing students placed as follows:

ORATORICAL

1st. Raymond Barz
2nd. Clarice Wellemeyer.

DRAMATIC

1st. Valeria Koerner
2nd. Margaret Gates.

HUMOROUS

1st. Floyd Klotzbach
2nd. Mitchell Bock.

Mrs. Trissel of Mason City acted as judge.

Contest Here Thursday Eve

Our seconds will contest again with seconds from Hayfield and Garner in our own auditorium on next Thursday evening, Feb. 6th at 8:00 o'clock. The winners of both first and second places in this sub-county contest wil then meet the first and second place winners of the sub-county contest in western half of our county between Crystal Lake, Corwith, Kanawha and Britt, sometime the following week in Garner. There will be three judges for each of the other two contests.

Our first will represent us at Belmond, perhaps on February 26, where they will meet the best from Rowan, Dows and Belmond.

Enthusiasm Stirred Up

Considerable interest has been created in this extra curricular activity and for this we are indebted to Miss Trumbell who is an enthusiast along these lines. Considering the heavy teaching schedule imposed on Miss Trumbell we feel she has done splendidly with our students. Miss Trumblel has prepared her students for both victory and defeat, for there seems to be lacking in the winners that all-too-common attitude of loftiness and in those defeated that disgruntled and crbaby disposition we have observed in other places. Mrs. Trissel complimented our students on their good sports manship and for that we all take pride.

New Students Enrolled

We are glad to have enrolled again Verl and Otho Keraus; Verl in the eighth grade and Otho in the Senior Class. Both are good students and agreeable to both class mates and teachers.

All Set For Spelling Bee

Supt. Baggs of Garner made us a call on Wednesday of this week. He ise ncouraging the schools in the spelling program again being promoted by the Des Moines Register. Our teachers have received their material from the Register and our students now have a worthy goal to strive for, that of outspelling others in their own grade.

Take One; Lose One At C. L.

The two basket ball games played by our high school first and second teams on last Friday night were divided between the two schools; Klemme winning the game between the first string players and Crystal Lake the other. Our victory was less impressive than Crystal Lake's. We appreciate the support given our teams by the several who made the journey so far on a cold winter night to see them play. Among our townsmen who were there were our Editor, R. A. Jorgenson, one of our bankers, C. G. Waterman, Rev. Grosshuesch, Rev. Whyte and our merchant, Mr. Day. Perhaps the interest displayed by our more prominent citizens is what gave our first string men the determination to win and their resulting victory. They have now won 5 of 6 games played..

Alexander Here Friday Night

On this Friday night, Alexander high school boys come here for a return game. We won against them at Alexander last semester and hope to win by an even larger score on our own floor. Our young band will make their first public appearance on this occasion and everyone interested in the organization will want to hear them. Our peppy high school girls will also be heard in their rousing cheers and songs, led by Valeria Koerner. The game begins at 7:45 and admission is 25c and 35c.

Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson and Mrs. H. E. Whyte were welcome guests at school on Wednesday of this week, visiting both grade and high school classes.

FARM BUREAU MEETING WAS WELL ATTENDED

Interesting Program Was Feature Of Meeting At Center School

The Liberty Farm Bureau held their January Meeting at the Center School Wednesday evening. In spite of the extremely cold weather a fair sized crowd turned out. The principal part of the program was a play called, "Beads on a String," put on by the young people of Dist. 8., Richard Ax, Glenn Lange, Red Carlson, Bernard Pringnitz, Kermit Stille, Mildred Gast, Ethel Pringnitz, Helen and Lorraine Lemke. A few selections of music was played by Lloyd Ulrich and Fred Pannhoff. A short talk was given by the new County Agent, Walter Weiss. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served after the program.

MRS. EMIL BEIER'S CHICKENS LAY DOUBLE EGGS

BANKERS FIND GROUP BANKING WIDESPREAD

Over 13 Billion Dollars of Bank Assets in Affiliated Systems Numbering 1,850 Members—In Nearly Every State.

Over 1,850 banks with more than thirteen billion dollars in resources are shown to be associated with chain or group banking systems in the United States in facts recently gathered by the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association. The chairman of the commission, R. S. Hecht of New Orleans, pointed out that the facts indicate that "almost 7½ per cent of our banks and over 18 per cent of our banking resources are in the great net of group or chain banking that now covers almost every part of the country."

The commission's facts comprised chain and group banking affiliations in the broadest sense of the term, the report said. They included those groups in which the controlling element was a particular bank, there being reported 78 instances of this class involving 407 banks and about $6,473,000,000 in combined banking resources. They included also groups in which a non banking holding company, not subsidiary to any particular bank, was in control and of this class 28 instances were found, involving 380 banks and nearly $5,335,000,000 in resources. The report also included groupings in which control was exercised by individual persons and these cases numbered 167, involving 1,071 banks and about $1,468,000,000 in assets.

The Total Figures

The total was over $13,275,000,000 in aggregate resources. Some of the systems comprised 50 to 100 banks each. Head offices of the groups were found in all jurisdictions, but nine of the states and the District of Columbia.

"We have not included in these figures," the report says, "banking groups in which a commercial bank, a trust company and an investment house, and sometimes a savings bank, are tied together by some form of stock holdings and operated as complementary elements in an organization rendering complete financial services. We have held that such groups are similar to a departmentalized bank and different in the purposes and operations from a chain or group banking system.

"For purposes of the present report we define chain or group banks as systems in which centralized control, whether corporate or personal and either rigid or informal, directs the operations of two or more complete banks, not functionally complementary, each working on its own capital and under its own personnel and located in one or more cities or states."

Commenting on the question whether the rapid development of chain banking was in the nature of a reaction against restrictions imposed on branch banking by the banking laws in many states the report says that observation does not wholly confirm this theory since chain banking is prevalent in some states where virtually no restriction is imposed on branch banking, as well as in those where the establishment of branch banks is prohibited. It adds:

The Question of Branch Banking

"However the facts do show that anti-branch banking laws have been a factor in some cases, and probably in some sections, in the spread of chain banking. Instances have come to our attention where expansion along chain bank lines has been carried out by state banks whose expansion along branch bank lines was stopped by the passing of state laws prohibiting further branches. Yet whether expansion would have been along branch bank lines if the laws had imposed no barriers, it is impossible to say. There is obviously a well developed banking opinion in some sections that the chain bank method brings to outlying banks the strength and efficiency of a big organization without depriving them of their local individuality and sympathies. In view of the mixed factors noted, we feel it is unsafe to generalize as to what bearing branch banking laws have on chain developments.

"The recent era of rapid chain bank developments has found specific reflection in some state legislative action tending to restrict or control chain or group banking. Also we find a sharp difference of opinion among state bank commissioners who have expressed their sentiments regarding chain banking."

In a foreword to the report, issued in booklet form by the association at its New York City headquarters, Chairman Hecht says that "the Economic Policy Commission does not take a stand in advocacy of or in opposition to this new method of concentrating banking resources through the affiliation of banks into groups and chains, but is simply offering as a fact finding body what we believe is the first complete national picture of this rapidly growing movement."

SCHOOL SAVINGS GROW

A total of 4,222,935 school children participated in school savings banking in the United States during the last school year, depositing $28,672,496 and rolling up net savings of $10,539,928, bringing total bank balances now credited to this movement to above 50 million dollars, according to the annual report of the Savings Bank division of the American Bankers Association. Schools to the number of [illegible] are enrolled in the plan.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Naval Parley Starts With Good Chance for Success —Young Plan Signed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

EVERYTHING except the physical atmosphere of London was auspicious for the opening of the naval limitation conference on Tuesday, and every one connected with the parley seemed optimistic concerning its results. King George, making his first public appearance since he fell ill on Armistice day, 1928, started the proceedings with a warm but brief address of welcome to the delegates gathered in the royal chamber of the house of lords. He was followed by the heads of the five delegations, all of whom made appropriate speeches full of generalizations and hope.

Significant extracts from these five addresses are:

Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain: "If we are not careful we shall be once more involved in feverish competition such as heralded the outbreak of the war in 1914. . . . The way of Great Britain is on the sea. The stock of its people came from the sea; its defense and its highroads have been the sea; its flag is a flag of the sea. Our navy nowhere is superfluity to us. It is us."

Secretary of State Stimson of the United States: "I feel it is more important to emphasize the fact that we do not look upon this effort toward disarmament as final. Naval limitation is a continuous process. We regard disarmament as a goal to be reached by successive steps. . . . We sincerely hope that increased feeling of security may enable still more drastic reduction in the future."

Premier Tardieu of France: "Our needs are determined, as Mr. MacDonald has justly observed, by our geographical position, our historical position, our economic, maritime, colonial, political and defensive situations. Taken altogether they define what is called a nation."

Reijiro Wakatsuki of Japan: "It is the unanimous desire of the Japanese people that peace should be lastingly established. . . . I see no insuperable obstacles in our path."

Dino Grandi of Italy: "The fascist government is desirous of securing real and tangible results in the fields of disarmament and security. . . . The problem is one calling for courageous action. . . ."

FROM their public expressions and the information that came from their private conversations with one another, it appeared the representatives of the five naval powers had at least reached a unity of opinion on five broad principles. They were agreed upon the necessity for a naval holiday in the sense that competitive building of war fleets should cease. They admitted that the public opinion of the world demanded economy in naval expenditures and relief for the peoples from financial burdens. They believed it advisable that any agreements arrived at by the conference should be for a comparatively short period so they might be revised and improved in later years. As to the last point, it was said the British and probably the Americans favored revision of agreements in 1936 and the French wished the term to be about twice as long.

The three highest hurdles the conferees will have to surmount probably are the British determination to bring about a sharp reduction in battleships with their possible elimination in the future; the contest between France and Italy for control of the Mediterranean and the Italian demand for parity with France on that sea; and the desire of the French that any agreement reached shall be advisory to the League of Nations' disarmament commission.

When the question of the method of limitation comes up, the Americans and British, who prefer restriction by categories, will probably make concessions to the French and Italians, who advocate the theory of global restrictions, and offer to accept an arrangement of global limitation by which 10 per cent of tonnage may be transferred from one category to another on one year's notice.

Business sessions of the conference began Thursday, but it was the opinion of Mr. MacDonald that it would be two weeks before the delegates got to the point of putting their sea strength estimates into terms and figures. In formal meetings he urged them not to be too hasty in getting down to statistics and categories and lists of tonnage, believing the problem should be attacked slowly and piecemeal. The three hundred journalists gathered in London from all parts of the world were bitterly disappointed when it was announced that the "plenary" sessions of the conference would not be open to them for the present. Their exclusion, however, did not prevent their sending many columns of speculation and gossip to their papers every day. It is good reading but the wise reader accepts their statements with reservation.

WHEN on January 20 the delegates of nineteen nations signed the revised and amplified Young plan at The Hague, the World war actually came to an end. Twenty separate agreements, fourteen annexes and fifteen special clauses were signed and presented to Premier Jaspar of Belgium, chairman of the second reparations conference, and he thereupon declared the conference adjourned. After ten years of discussions, quarrels, military occupations and parleys, the final act of liquidating the war had been performed.

The Young plan as modified and accepted requires Germany to pay about $9,282,000,000 from April of last year through 1966. The system of annuities is little changed. The sanctions clause that was added implies that military occupation can ensue if The Hague tribunal holds that Germany has wilfully defaulted. The international bank will be merely a clearing house for the payments.

The first concrete result of the adoption of the Young plan will be the withdrawal of 20,000 troops of occupation left in the Rhineland. This already is under way, for the French are moving out of the forts in the Rhine valley and the Germans are blowing up those fortifications in accordance with the evacuation agreement and the Versailles treaty.

CONGRESS has elevated the American legation in Poland to the rank of an embassy, and President Hoover has nominated Alexander P. Moore of Pennsylvania to be ambassador to Warsaw. Similar action, of course, was taken by the Polish government, Tytus Filipowicz, the Polish minister in Washington, being named ambassador.

The nomination of Edward E. Brodie of Oregon to be minister to Finland was also sent to the senate by the President. The senate confirmed the nominations of four ministers. They were Gilbert Baker Stockton of Florida, to Austria; John Motley Morehead of New York, to Sweden; Ralph H. Booth of Michigan, to Denmark, and Henry Wharton Shoemaker of Pennsylvania, to Bulgaria.

IF ANY citizens still thought the Wickersham crime commission intended to take up the question of the desirability of prohibition, they were undeceived last week by Mr. Wickersham himself. In a radio address that was broadcast to the nation the chairman of the commission made it quite plain that that body was concerned only with the enforcement of the dry laws, and he appealed to congress and the people to aid the authorities in making the country arid.

"The Eighteenth amendment is a part of the Constitution and it is the duty of congress to enact adequate laws for the enforcement of its provisions," said Mr. Wickersham. "The detection and prosecuting agencies of the government should be properly organized and there should be tribunals properly constituted to deal promptly and efficiently with violations of the law. These would seem to be elementary principles not requiring argument."

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Prohibition Commissioner Doran appeared before the house committee on expenditures in the executive departments in behalf of the Wickersham commission's bill for the transfer of the prohibition bureau from the Treasury department to the Department of Justice. The wet members of the committee tried in vain to lure Mr. Mellon into giving his personal opinion of prohibition and the possibility of enforcing it.

In the house of representatives the wets had another chance for sarcastic oratory when five bills to relieve overcrowding of federal prisons were under consideration. But they got nowhere and the bills were passed.

Federal Judge J. W. Woodrough at Omaha declared unconstitutional that part of the prohibition act which permits personal injunctions against habitual violators of the law.

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE LAMONT announced that, on the basis of statistics compiled by the new construction division of his department, it seemed certain there would be in 1930 an expenditure of almost seven billion dollars on construction and maintenance of public works and public utilities. This total, Mr. Lamont said, does not include residences, commercial and industrial structures and other private operations which last year totaled more than three billion dollars.

Programs for betterments to plant and equipment, announced by public utilities, railroads and telegraph companies represent expenditures of $3,250,000,000, divided as follows: Class A railroads, $1,050,00,000; electric, gas and street railway companies, $1,400,000,000; American Telephone and Telegraph company, $700,000; independent telephone and telegraph companies, short line railways and privately owned waterworks, $100,000.

Complete returns from the governors of 26 states indicate probable expenditures of $1,778,742,901 for public works and this combined with conservative estimates based on partial returns from the remaining 22 states aggregating $1,275,000,000, it was stated would give an indicated total of $3,053,742,900 for public construction by the various states. When federal construction is included, this total for public construction, it is estimated, will be increased to $3,325,000,000.

FOURTEEN passengers and two pilots lost their lives in what was called the worst tragedy in the history of aviation, near Oceanside, Calif. A big tri-motored plane that was bringing passengers back to Los Angeles from the race track at Agua Caliente, Mexico, got out of control and as the pilots were attempting to make a landing on the beach the machine burst into flames and crashed. Every one on board perished, their bodies being burned beyond recognition. Eight women were among the victims.

TWO Latin American quarrels reached a somewhat dangerous stage last week. While negotiations were under way for peaceful settlement of the border dispute between Bolivia and Paraguay, there was a clash between troops on the frontier with some casualties. Bolivia said the Paraguayans were the aggressors and were defeated. Paraguay blamed the Bolivians and both complained to the League of Nations.

The government of Honduras ordered a mobilization of troops to dislodge Guatemalan forces that were alleged to have occupied Honduras territory. The foreign minister at Tegucigalpa in a statement disclosed that military movements on the Guatemalan border had threatened the life of the joint boundary dispute conference which is now seeking a solution of the problem. The status quo ante was restored, however, and the conference resumed its work.

MRS. WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, widow of the "Commoner," died of arthritis in Los Angeles at the age of sixty-eight years.

Other deaths of the week included those of Stephen T. Mather, former director of the national parks system; James Dahlman, mayor of Omaha; George Le Maire, well known comedian; D. A. Boody, one of the veteran brokers of Wall Street, and Viscount Esher, one of the most influential of British peers.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

There have been many fine examples of farm homes designed and built during the last fifteen or twenty years. They have ranged all the way from the bungalow to the American colonial, English and French type house. But after all, probably the most economical farm home is of the square hip-roof type which was popular some years ago, and which is not built in all sections of the country.

A fine example of this square type farm home is shown in the accompanying illustration. It has the appearance of solidity, roominess and comfort. But what appeals most to those who contemplate building a new home is the fact that for a given amount of floor space and the roominess, this type of home provides the best for the amount of money invested.

Shown here are architect's floor plans of the house—basement and first and second floors and a cross section showing some of the details of construction.

While this house appears to be a large one its dimensions are only 36 feet by 25 feet 6 inches. However, there is provided a large reception hall, living and dining rooms, kitchen, office and washroom on the first floor and four large corner bedrooms and a bathroom on the second floor. The basement is of the same dimensions as the house, and as will be seen by the floor plans, space is provided for a fruit cellar, also fuel bin, laundry and drying room, basement heating plant and for laundry equipment.

While the architect's plans for this house call for a frame construction set on a concrete foundation, this house may be erected in any of the popular building materials—brick veneer over wood frame; solid brick or tile with either a stucco coat or with a brick veneer outer wall. Thus a prospective builder has a wide range of material for use in this home.

The three-floor plans have been drawn so as to give a wealth of detail. A study of them will reveal that this house is suitable for a large family, that the rooms have been arranged so that the work can be done with a minimum of effort and every convenience which is now available to the farm homemaker is provided for.

One of the good features of this home is the fact that it may be made unusually attractive through the planting of shrubs, flowers and hedges about it. Landscaping always makes a home, whether it be in the country or city, more attractive. But the square lines of such a house as this may be broken most advantageously through the use of flowering shrubs and flowering plants of all kinds.

Midseason Painting Is Declared Desirable

Contrary to general opinion, spring and fall are not the only nor are they the best seasons in which to do interior painting.

In these seasons there may be considerable fluctuations in temperature and the atmosphere is usually fairly moist. Hence summer and winter are the two seasons that are usually most suitable for interior painting. In the summer the atmosphere in the interior of the house is kept comparatively warm and dry by the heat of the sun, and in the winter we find the same conditions produced by artificial means.

In the early spring or the late fall, though it may not be apparent, the interior of the house tends to be damper than at other seasons. Water vapor abounds in the atmosphere at these seasons particularly. This moisture condenses invisibly on nearly all surfaces, and when paint or varnish is put over it the heat of the house may "draw out" the moisture, causing the paint film to blister or peel, as it does in the case of paint that has been applied over damp, new plaster or over lumber in new houses.

OLD DOCTOR'S IDEA IS BIG HELP TO ELDERLY PEOPLE

In 1885, Dr. Caldwell made a discovery for which elderly people the world over praise him today!

Years of practice convinced him that many people were endangering their health by a careless choice of laxatives. So he began a search for a harmless prescription which would be thoroughly effective, yet would neither gripe nor form the habit. At last he found it.

Over and over he wrote it, when he found people bilious, headachy, out of sorts, weak or feverish with coated tongue, bad breath, poor appetite or energy. It relieved the most obstinate cases, and yet was gentle with women, children and elderly people.

Today, this same famous, effective prescription, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is the world's most popular laxative and may be obtained from any druggist.

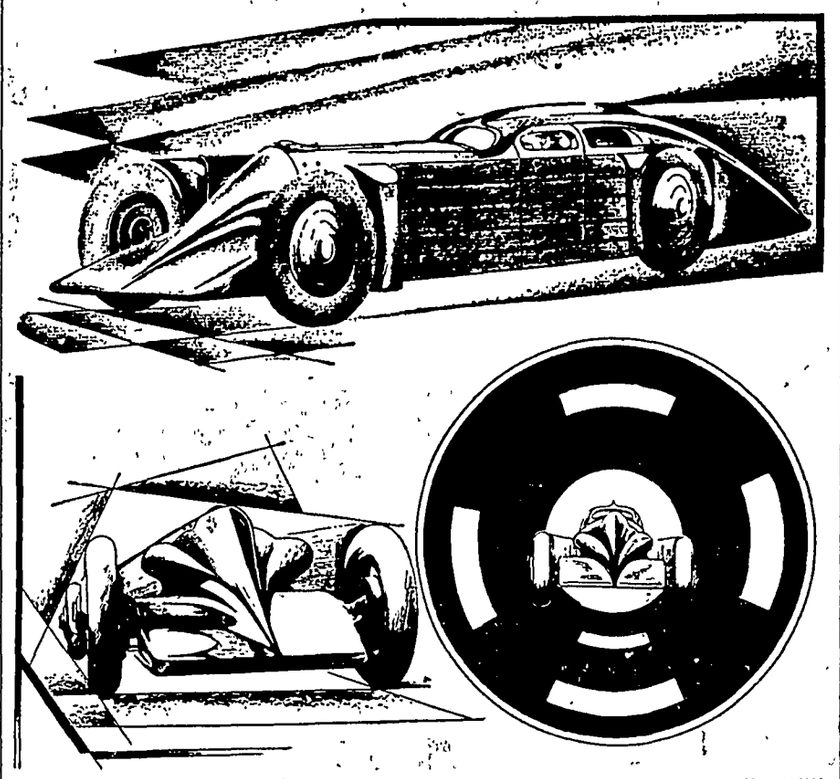
AUTOMOBILES TO MAKE FAST SPEED SAFE



Above Is Shown the Artist's Conception of What the Automobile Will Be When Transportation Requirements Will Demand Ten Years From Now Safe Speeds in Excess of 100 Miles an Hour Over Superhighways.

What manner of automobile will rule the roads ten years from now, successfully competing with airplanes that cruise far overhead and land on tops of skyscrapers with utmost security?

Behind a screen of deepest mystery, one of the great automobile manufacturers of the United States is evolving just such an automobile. It will not be ready for several years, probably, and by that time it is anticipated that roads suitable for safe speeds well in excess of 100 miles an hour will extend the length and breadth of the country.

Wind pressure, which now fights against speed, will be the friendly genii that will make these great speeds safe. To this end, every feature of the mystery car is being tested in the whirlwind of super wind tunnels, designed after exhaustive research by ventilating engineers. Powerful fans provide hurricanes beyond any ever loosed by nature in her wildest moods.

Under the pressure of a wind which, if developed by the car's own motion, would represent a speed far in excess of 100 miles an hour, this mystery model hugs the ground and is held steady against all stresses and strains of the road.

As scientists know, a fast moving object acting on still air causes it to present almost the characteristics of a solid, and this fact is being utilized to the utmost in the development of the car of the future. Instead of exerting a pressure that tends to lift the car from the ground as in the case of most present-day models, the wind pushes down, exerting tremendous pressure and making it impossible for the car to turn over while traveling at high speed. This tends to make speeds in excess of 100 miles an hour really safer than the slower speeds, and with good roads built to equal the capacity of the car, will bring about a new era of fast automobile transportation.

Some idea of how this works can be obtained by looking at the "Golden Arrow," the racing car of Maj. H. O. D. Seagrave, who established a record of 231.2 miles per hour on the sands of Daytona Beach, Fla.

So far this car represents the farthest advance in turning wind resistance into "wind assistance" ever seen in the United States. The scoop-like prow presents an area against which the wind forms a terrific pressure. The gently upward slope transfers this back pressure into a downward pressure which holds the car against the road. Careful streamlining prevents counter-acting pressures against the rest of the car.

HONEY IS USEFUL IN ZERO WEATHER

Mixed With Water It Has Been Tested as Anti-freeze Solution.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Another agricultural product finds a new use. This time it is honey. Honey, mixed with water, has been tested as an antifreeze solution by private motorists and state agricultural colleges. Practically all reports of these experiments have been favorable, says James I. Hambleton, apiculturist in charge of the bee culture laboratory of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Proper Proportion.

The proper proportion of honey to water varies according to the lowest temperature expected, says Mr. Hambleton. Where zero weather is expected, equal parts of honey and water are commonly used. Such a mixture begins to form slush at zero, however, and a greater proportion of honey is required for best results at lower temperatures. In the northern part of the United States and in Canada a mixture of three parts of honey to two of water, or even two to one, may be best. A quart of alcohol added to each three gallons of the mixture will improve the circulation.

To make the solution, use a cheap grade of extracted honey, stirring it into hot water. Heat the mixture to a boil and skim off the scum. If alcohol is used, stir it in and boil from three to five minutes. Fill the radiator and maintain the level by adding water as needed.

Mr. Hambleton cites a number of advantages of the honey mixture. Because it boils at a higher temperature than water there is no loss from evaporation, and it is necessary to add only water from time to time. Honey solutions expand much less than water when freezing, and when in proper proportions they do not freeze solid but form a slush. This tends to eliminate the danger of bursting radiators. Furthermore, says Mr. Hambleton, some motorists may find it advantageous for use in the summer when long steep grades or heavy pulls are encountered, for it not only freezes at a lower temperature but boils at a higher temperature than water.

Avoid Leakage.

When honey is used as an antifreeze mixture it is important that all gaskets, pump packing, and hose connections be tight. A slight seepage around the hose connection is not serious, but any considerable quantity leaking into the engine may cause considerable difficulty. Should honey reach the cylinders and valve heads, it will carbonize, making it necessary to remove the engine head and clean out the residue.

Attempting to Eliminate Road Crossing Accidents

A new apparatus which has been put into use by the German government in an attempt to eliminate the danger to automobiles at the railway crossings. The signals are worked by light. Generally the white light is flashing. When a train comes near it makes a contact on the rail which changes the light to a red flash.

Air Cleaners Essential Portion of Automobile

Air cleaners are now an essential part of nearly every automobile and tractor engine, keeping out dust and minimizing wear. The oil-wetted type of air cleaner generally will operate a year without attention; but under extremely dusty conditions they need cleaning oftener. This is done by removing the cleaner and moving it up and down in a pail of gasoline. Then allow the cleaner to dry a few minutes, then saturate the filtering material with oil and replace.

MOTOR BRIEFS

Never permit children to play in or around the car.

Be sure "dimmers" really dim; it's no joke driving into a blinding glare.

Paris mechanics use magnets to clean automobile gear cases of metal particles.

Upon signal from another driver approaching from the rear, pull over to the extreme right and allow him to pass.

The percentages of women driving automobiles is increasing steadily in the United States. This fact has influenced the use of colors and added to the beauty of design in cars.

POULTRY

LEGUMES USEFUL AS GRAIN FEED

Each Hen Could Profitably Use Pound of Hay Daily.

The Ohio experiment station has done some valuable work in testing out the use of alfalfa, clover and soy bean hay as substitutes for green feed for the laying flock. They found that each bird could make profitable use of about one pound of leafy, fine-stemmed, bright hay per month. The hay should not be coarse or contain a high per cent of crude fiber.

It is nearly always possible to get at least a limited amount of such hay from the last cutting of alfalfa or the second cutting of clover. A considerable number of farmers are cutting a small portion of their alfalfa late in the fall, after the removal of the last regular crop. The least mature of the soy beans, when they have been cut for hay, are equally satisfactory.

These Ohio tests indicate that these three, alfalfa, red clover and soy beans, are equally valuable if cut and cured properly. In these tests the feeding of the hay in hoops of poultry netting was found to be very satisfactory. Cutting the hay in half-inch lengths made the feeding easier and the hens ate more. A silage cutter or feed chopper can be used to cut the hay.

The shatterings that accumulate where the alfalfa or clover is handled in feeding the cattle or other live stock is equally valuable if the hay is of good quality and not injured by weathering or heating in barn or stack. Alfalfa meal made from green hay in the mash or fed as a separate part of the ration, is another green feed substitute.

Litter Not Desirable Place for Grain Feed

Experimental work at several stations as well as the practical experience of a large number of poultry keepers prove that hens do not need to hunt in the litter for their feed in order to lay well. More and more people are feeding the whole and cracked grain to the poultry in troughs to keep it cleaner than it would be if scattered in the litter.

Litter is highly desirable in a poultry house during the time that the flock is kept confined, but its virtue is in keeping the feet cleaner, the floor drier and more easily cleaned, and the house warmer than when no litter is used, and not to furnish a place to hide the grain feed. Some grain will be dropped in the straw or chaff, or shredded fodder or peat moss, even though troughs are used, and the hens will scratch for it. But deliberately scattering the grain in the litter, unless there is no container available, serves no useful purpose.

Poultry Hints

It is good business to hatch chicks early.

In hauling eggs to the market, do not expose them to the direct rays of the sun.

Insist that the buyer pay cash for your eggs, and that he buy them on a quality or grade basis.

A standard incubator which will successfully hatch chicken eggs should hatch the turkey eggs with equal success. Many have been used successfully.

All parts of the incubator should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. One per cent formalin can be used. Then level the machine and regulate carefully to the desired temperature.

Poultry raisers not being fortunate to have clover, alfalfa or other green feed ranges, or those wishing to plant green feed for summer use in their poultry runs, will find sudan grass very good.

Male birds with large combs are most apt to become frosted after they are wet.

A lot of poultrymen confuse lice with mites. Lice stay on the birds all the time, whereas mites attack them only at night and hide in cracks and crevices during the daytime.

Often ducks make a very disagreeable puddle around the drinking fountain. A good device to prevent ducklings from forming such a puddle, is a wire covered frame.

Raising pullets is one of the most important jobs of the poultry keeper, for unless these new pullets are grown right, they will get off to a poor start and the year's work will be seriously hampered.

Should the young pullets show any signs of unthriftness, the poultry keeper will do well to see if there are any intestinal worms present in the flock.

Proper housing of the poultry flock generally pays dividends in more eggs and healthier chickens.

Supervisor F. J. Oxley was in this vicinity yesterday, supervising the operation of the county snow plow in removing snow from side roads around Klemme.

Tom Nelson, Sr. is at Clear Lake visiting at the home of his son, Andrew, as Andrew's wife was taken to the Mason City hospital Monday for a major operation.

School No. 5, Liberty, of which Miss Mabel Schaefer is the teacher, was dismissed last Wednesday on account of the funeral of Raymond Wessels.

Ethel Schoenwette, who is staying at the Hans Hanson home, came down with the measles last week. At this writing she is well on the way to recovery.

County Supt. J. R. Baggs of Garner was visiting the Klemme school yesterday and calling on his Klemme friends. John paid this office a visit. We are always glad to see his round, smiling face popping through our office door. Come again John!

"AGRICO", 'AA QUALITY" Fertilizers, North Iowa Grain Company.

Miss Minnie Blumer, of Jewell, was operated upon for mastoids at the Webster City hospital last week Wednesday. At this writing she is reported as getting along fine.

Walter and Emil Blumer drove to Webster City Wednesday to see their sister, Minnie, who is a patient at the hospital there recovering from a mastoid operation.

The Ladies Aid of the Reformed Church met at the home of Mrs. Emil Keraus Wednesday afternoon of this week. A delicious lunch was served following the regular meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kluckhohn entertained Mrs. G. W. Kluckhohn, and Sadie Turgasen and sons, Vernon and Donald, to a roast goose dinner, with all the trimmings, Sunday noon.

Miss Mildred Johnson came home the first of the week fo ra visit with her parents and to see her sister, Hulda, of Los Angeles, California, who was home for a short time.

The R. N. A. Lodge met Friday at their hall with the Misses Viola Freie and Eunice Braund as hostesses. The ladies served a dainty lunch at the close of the business meting of the lodge.

A number of basket ball fans drove to Crystal Lake Friday evening to see the basket ball games. The Klemme second stringers lost, but the high school tema brought home the bacon.

John Lemke and Jacob Blumer drove to Webster City Saturday to see Miss Minnie Blumer, who is a patient at theh ospital recovering from an operation. Miss Blumer's sisters here have been ill and have not been able to go and see her.

Mrs. Benn Coobs and son, Melvin, returned Saturday from Columbus, Indiana, where she has been staying with her father a few weeks, following the death of her mother. Mrs. Harry Buss and son returned last week Sunday, and she is now busy getting ready to move to town.

Miss Hulda Johnson came Monday from New York City for a visit at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe E. Johnson. Miss Johnson has been in New York for the past three weeks buying merchandise for Los Angeles stores. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Johnson drove to Des Moines to meet her.

Wm. Breitske has been selected as a Patrol Leader in the District Four Training Course to begin February 4th, for Hancock and Winnebago County Scouters. The first session will be held at Britt, then Crystal Lake, Garner, and Klemme, and will rotate in that order for twelve weeks, every Tuesday night. Any men interested in Scout work are invited to take the course.

Mrs. Chase of Garner is caring for Mrs. C. A. Larsen and the fine new baby son. Fred Bell drove up to Garner early Monday morning to bring Mrs. Chase to Klemme. They encountered a heavy fog on the way and the car ran off the grade at the Addis Greiman farm north of Klemme. The car was somewhat damaged and Mr. Greiman brought Mrs. Chase and Fred into Klemme.

R. A. Jorgenson and C. G. Waterman drove to Mason City Sunday evening to attend a chicken dinner for the men who are to act as officers in the Red Cross First Aid Course for Scout Leaders. C. G. Waterman will act as the Training Course Scribe, and R. A. Jorgenson will act as a Patrol Leader, or Red Cross Team Captain. The men will work in teams of five. The course will run for eleven weeks. As usual several Klemme men will take advantage of this training.

It Entered His Mind First!

The teacher explained to the class "Words ending in 'ous' mean full, as, 'joyous' means full of joy; 'vigorous' means full of vigor. Now will someone give another example of such words?"

The boy with the scratch on his nose raised his hand. 'Pious!" he answered.

The Court of Honor held here on Monday evening was well represented by ministers. There were present, besides Rev. Grosshuesch of the Klemme Reformed Church, Rev. C. H. Van Metre, of Garner; Rev. McNulty of Crystal Lake, and Rev. O. E. Schaal, of Corwith. Three or four other Corwith men braved the weather to atend the Court of Honor here. An effort is being made to organize a Scout Troop at Corwith. The Corwith men are very enthusiastic and no doubt will soon have a very fine scout troop in operation.

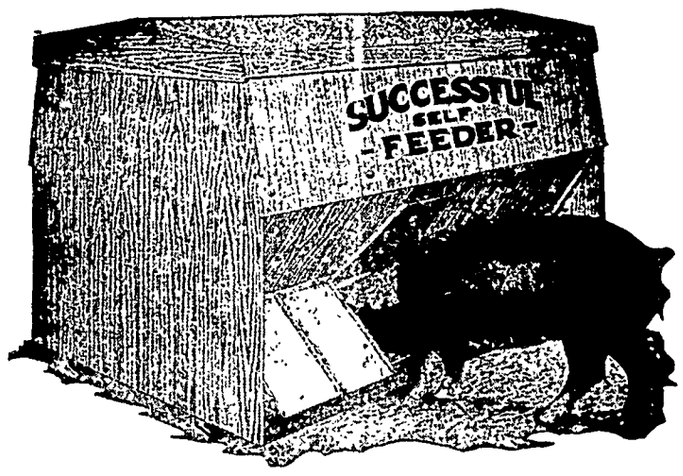
A Successful Feeder



Never Clogs With Any Kind Of Feed

The 1930 "NEW SUCCESSFUL FEEDER" is the feeder to buy. It feeds hogs economically. Why dump the feed over the fence and let them get what they can of it?

We are so sure that you will be satisfied with this feeder, not only with the results it will give you, but the price also; that we will make you this unheard of proposition—Tell us the size you want and we will let you take it out and try it for THIRTY DAYS and if it does not come up to your expectations (you to be the judge) return it.

Come in, look them over; get a plan of the feeder, study it over, compare the price and you will no doubt take one home the next time you are in town.

SHERIFF WAHLERT ACCIDENTLY KILLED

AUTOMATIC PISTOL FALLS OUT OUT OF HOLSTER, FIRES

Accident Happened On Crystal Lake Road North Of Britt

The Times has heard so many versions of the acidental death of Sherly E. H. Wahlert, Tuesday night near Britt, that we belive the following story as printed in yesterday's Britt News-Tribune is perhaps the most authentic. The story follows:

Sheriff E. H. Wahlert is dead. He came to his death while in the performance of his duty at about 10:30 p. m. Tuesday. His body was found lying beside the car by his deputy Bruce Orr at a point a short distance north of the John O'Hern place a mile and a half out of Britt on the Crystal Lake road. He was still alive when found, a shovel was lying close by and his Colts automatic pistol but Mr. Wahlert was so weak he was unable to tell the story of the accident. A car returning to Crystal Lake bearing two men whose names the News-Tribune was unable to learn came to the scene. They assisted Bruce Orr and called Dr. C. O. Brewster to the scene imediately but when the doctor arrived Wahlert was dead. His body was taken to the Treganza undertaking establishment where Coroner F. W. Ziegler of Garner, and a number of others examined the extent of the wounds but postponed further action until 10 o'clock this morning when an inquest was held.

County Attorney H. C. Meyer was called soon after the unfortunate sheriff was found and he in turn got in touch with the Department of Justice at Des Moines. H. V. Yackley, state agent, was dispatched to the scene and arrived at about six o'clock this morning to assist the county attorney and coroner in making a thorough investigation of the matter.

As the News-Tribune gets the story, Sheriff Wahlert and Deputy Orr were on the lookout for bootleggers. They followed a car out of Britt north. The car went to the driveway to Roy Clark's farm and turned around Sheriff Wahlert let Deputy Orr out and he was hidden along the roadway on the diagonal road running northeast from the Mrs. Augusta Johnson farm home. Wahlert turned back to Britt but a short time later came out again and passed the point where his deputy was standing. This Orr was able to know because of the numbers on the sheriff's car. Wahlert proceeded on to the straight road and went on north about half way between the John O'Hern farm home (now the J. A. Redden farm) and the corner turning east to the Swan Ranch place (the Miller farm.)

It appears he decided to turn around without going to the corner and in doing so slipped off the main road into loose snow and got stalled. He got out of the car with a shovel to throw some snow so he could get out. In the meantime Deputy Orr reached his car and saw that he was standing. After convincing himself that the sheriff was stuck he walked up and getting near the sheriff he heard a noise as of a man groaning. He then ran and discovered the sheriff lying by the car as above described.

A bullet entered his body a few inches below the naval. It had struck the car and through the tip of one finger. There were holes in the overcoat and in the pants that indicate the bullet might have passed thru. The shell was left in the pistol, indicating that the fall must have discharged the shell. If the pistol had been fired from the trigger the shell would have been ejected automatically.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been made awaiting news from relatives living at distant points. Sheriff Wahlert was 57 years old, a veteran of the Spanish-American war and had served a year and a month as sheriff. He is survived by a wife, some brothers and a sisetr.—Britt News-Tribune.

INDEPENDENTS WIN THRRE MORE BASKET BALL GAMES

Brought Home Scalp Of Undefeated Algona Team Tuesday Night

The Klemme Independent Basket Ball team have certainly put on a flash for winning the past week and have hung up three more victories.

Last Thursday night they drove to Kamrar to meet the supposedly fast team of that town, but whom they defeated 45 to 17.

Next the independent team from Garner, took on the Klemme "Red Devils" here Friday night as an extra for the Klemme-Alexander High School tilt, and much to their sorrow Garner came out of the scrap with but 10 points, while Klemme piled up 53 counters.

Tuesday evening the Independent team were invited to meet the undefeated Algona Independent team on the Algona floor. This was no easy match and Algona continually threatened to hold the lead and had seven points to the good in the last few minutes of play The Klemme Red Devils at this point displayed their superior team work and staged a great come-back, overcoming Algona's lead and piling up five more to the good to end the game 32 to 27 in Klemme s favor.

They play again at Belmond this Friday evening.

The Red Devils have been invited to participate in the State Tournament to be held at Marshalltown.

A game may be scheduled to meet Swea City, the only other team in North Iowa to give Algona a real run. Algona defeated Swea City by only one point recently. Klemme would like a crack at them also, as they are reported to be fast.

Frank and Donald Gibbs, Orville Stokesbary, Mike" Tanner and Kermit Koerner comprise the regullar quintet. Bob Taner and Sport Bridges supply the reserves.

MAY HAVE MEETING HERE FOR THOSE INTERESTED IN BEETS

Klemme Farmers Should Investigate Possibilities In Beet Raising

Mr. Darrow, of Kanawha, fieldman for the American Beet Sugar Co., of Belmond, was in Klemme the fore part of the week and stopped at the Times Ocice.

He informed us that the Company may, at a later date, hold a meeting here, if the farmers of this community would like to know something of the new methods of raising sugar beets. Mr. Darow pointed out that there is a lot of mighty good beet land around Klemme and he believes that the farmers coudl make a nice profit on beets, especially on the new plan of cross cultivating, which eliminates much expense and labor.

Any farmer who might be interested in beets may procure more information from the Company ,and there will be no obligation.

If a meeting is held in Klemme, Mr. Darrow wants all the farmers to come and the situation will be fully explained, after which a lunch will bo served free to all. This will be a sort of educational meeting and problems will be discussed and no "high presure" sales methods are employed to get the farmer to sign up contracts.

LOCAL FARM MACHINERY MAN ANNOUNCES NEW TRACTOR

Northern Lumber Company Have Newest Tractor On Display

The Northern Lumber Company, the local dealer of the J. I. Case Company, is anouncing by an attractive advertisement in this issue, the new Model "C" Case Tractor. They have also arranged for a showing of this new tractor at their place of business and cordially invite all of the local farmers to come in and see this latest creation of tractor design and construction.

This new tractor is a small brother of the Case Model "L" which was anounced last spring and which has proved to be such a sensational success all over the world, ever since. This tractor offers something entirely new in power output and all-around usefullness. In comparison with the large, crude and clumsy tractors of several years ago, this trim, compact tractor is a revelation. It will pull a two or three bottom plow, or operate a small or medium sized thresher with all attachments, or operate other machines needing a like amount of power.

"We are living in a fast age, an age of speed,' said Mr. Osborne, the manager of the Implement Department of the Northern Lumber Company. "Things are moving faster today than ever before. This applies to farm operations as well as anything else. This new Model "C" Tractor is an example of the increasing productiveness of this age. It has three forward speeds, and will work at either 2 1-3, 3 1-3, or 4½ miles an hour, and give a highly efficient performance at every kind of field job. This enables the farmers, who have one of these tractors to do a great deal more work in a day, thus greatly reducing the cost of production and thereby increasing the profits of the farm."

"I am at a loss," continued Mr. Osborne, "to find suitable words to describe this new tractor. All I can say, is to come into our store and see it. It will speak for itself."

BIBLE CLASS HAS SURPRISE ON ALVIN THIEMAN

Alvin Assisted In Celebrating His Nineteenth Birthday

The Bible Class of the Reformed Church staged a successful birthday surprise party on one of their members, Alvin Thieman at his home last Friday evening. The party was given in honor of Alvin's nineteenth birthday.

At the appointed time the young people gathered at the Thieman, bringing with them well laden baskets of good things to eat, and also gifts which they presented Alvin.

The evening was spent in a social way and games were enjoyed. At a late hour a delicious lunch was served the gathering. All report a most splendid time.

DOINGS AT SCHOOL THE PAST WEEK

FIRST ROUND OF DECLAMATORY CONTEST HELD HERE

Basket Ball Boys Annex Alexander Victory Here Friday Eve.

The first round of our county declamatory contests will be held this week. One of them at Crystal Lake between that school, Britt, Corwith and Kanawha; while the other between our own school, Garner and Hayfield will be held here in our own gymnasium on Thursday evening of this week at 8:00 p. m. There will be three judges for this contest all from Belmond. These contests will be participated in by the seconds in each of the local contests over our county and the winners of both first and second places in each class of each sub-county contest will be entered in the final county contest on some date next week, probably February 13. The final county contest will be held at Garner.

Basket Ball Friday Night

Our high school second team will play Goodell here on Friday night in our own gymnasium. We have been trying to get a game for our first team men on the same date here also and believe it will be possible.

Took Alexander Victory

Our boys won their second victory from Alexander on last Friday evening defeating them 20 to 14. This makes a very good record so far, 7 victories out of eight games thus far played.

Eighth Grade Exams Here

On Friday of this week we look for from twelve to fifteen rural 8th graders here to take the county examination. We shall furnish them room and Mr. Baggs has agreed to send someone to conduct the examinations. This will make it necessary for us to dismiss one of our grammar grades while the examination is in progress.

Were Contest Judges

The Superintendent and Rev. H. E. Whyte were invited to Thornton on Tuesday evening of this week to judge a local declamatory contest. Seventeen selections wre given.

JAMES S. ROSS APPOINTED SHERIFF BY BOARD

Was Sheriff Of Hancock County A Few Years Ago

The Board of Supervisors today appointed James S. Ross of Britt as Sheriff of Hancock County to serve the unexpired term of E. H. Wahlert, who was accidently killed near Britt Tuesday night.

Mr. Ross served as Sheriff several years ago and was a very good official.

The weather for the past week has been rather mild, and it thaws nearly every day. However, the sun has gone on vacation since "ground hog day." Whether or not Mr. Hog saw his shadow is hard to say. We had a hard time seeing our own shadow most of the day.

STEADY DECLINE OF AMERICAN FORCES

Maps and diagrams from Hughes' "The Savior of the States," courtesy William Morrow and Co. "Washington at Valley Forge" from Lossing's "Life of Washington."

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IT IS common knowledge to most Americans that the greater part of the credit for winning the War of the Revolution and the independence of the Thirteen Colonies belongs to one man—George Washington. But how many Americans, except possibly a few historians, know that Washington won, not so much because of the aid given him by the majority of the people in those colonies, but rather in spite of them? Yet that is the simple fact. And it is a fact which is presented so convincingly in a new book that to deny it or attempt to conceal the fact that Washington's gigantic task was made all the more difficult by the "corruption, treachery, and cowardice" of the very people he was trying to serve is to shamefully deny him the honor and reverence due him for accomplishing his task. That book is the third volume in Rupert Hughes' biography, published recently by William Morrow and company and bearing the appropriate title of "The Savior of the States."

"The graft and profiteering of the times was stupendous, and it is unjust to Washington as well as to truth to conceal any longer the fact that the generation of Americans which coincided with the Revolution was far from being the supremely virtuous race its descendants have been pleased to pretend," says Mr. Hughes. "I had either to suppress Washington's innumerable denunciations or do something to justify them. Offensive as this material will perhaps appear to certain types of patriots, I regret that I could publish only a slight skimming of the vast cauldron of corruption, greed and selfishness." He then continues:

If the Americans of that time had been what their posterity imagines, or anything like it, they would have driven the British into the sea in a few weeks and set up a government of ideal beauty immediately. Because they were what they were and were not what they were not, poor Washington was never able to give his military abilities a real test, but was compelled to spend most of his time running away from a lazy enemy or keeping a safe distance while he sent out heartbreakingly vain appeals for food, money, old clothes, soldiers, helpful legislation, the deferment of mutual jealousies, some unity of action.

The reader of this volume will feel that the author of it has a very low opinion of the majority of Americans contemporary with Washington. This is true, and if there were room for more evidence there would be evidence of a still lower opinion—an opinion almost as low as Washington's own.

A few soldiers, a few statesmen, a few devoted men did all the work, suffered all the hardships, and saved the country in spite of itself, while the majority ran away or kept aloof, grew fat and looked on. That was Washington's infinitely repeated declaration, and it is an insult to his memory to conceal it longer.

The more I read of the American Revolution the more difficult I find it to understand how it ever could have succeeded. I can hardly believe that it did. As a matter of fact it never did succeed in the way it was meant at the beginning; and its results were not at all what they were expected to be at the end of it.

Insofar as the writer of those lines has been listed among the "detractors of Washington" and the publication of the first volume of his biography four years ago resulted in a lengthy controversy in which he was misquoted, misinterpreted and attacked by many who had not even read his book and depended upon hearsay for their views on the subject, the following lines in the new volume are significant:

The more I study Washington the greater and better I think him, yet I am not trying to prove him great or good. I am trying solely to describe him as he was and let him speak for himself. He was a man of such tremendous undeniable achievement that he does not need to be bolstered with propaganda, protected by a priestcraft of suppression, or celebrated by any more Fourth of July oratory.

Since in this book George Washington "speaks for himself" it would be a truly patriotic duty for Americans to read in Washington's own words of the agonies of mind and body which he suffered in their behalf and to realize, perhaps for the first time, the wisdom, the valor and the unselfish devotion of the man whose birthday we celebrate on February 22. If they did that, perhaps the celebration of that day would have a new meaning for them.

This new volume in Hughes' biography begins with "The Dawn of '77." For Washington it was a cheerless dawn for "the year 1776 ended for him as a twelvemonth of almost unrelieved heartbreaks for which he could blame only his fellow-citizens." Written on its pages were the plot to assassinate him in New York, the failure of the expedition against Canada, the defeat and slaughter on Long Island, the shameful panic and stampede of his troops at Harlem, the defeat at White Plains, the loss of Fort Washington and Fort Lee and his flight across New Jersey with his army melting away so that he crossed the Delaware with only 3,000 of the 18,000 men he had had before the battle of Long Island.

His brilliant victory at Trenton the day after Christmas was one bright spot in the whole dismal year and when he would follow up that victory he found himself balked. For the term of enlistment of the Continental troops would soon end and the only way to hold them was by offering a bounty. He could expect no help from congress which had fled from Philadelphia at the approach of General Howe. However, as he wrote to congress on January 1, 1777, "After much persuasion, and the exertions of their officers, half or a greater proportion of those from the eastward have consented to stay six weeks on a bounty of ten dollars." But nearly half of those who promised to stay changed their minds and left for home—taking the bounty with them! So when he crossed the Delaware again on New Year's day he had 1,600 men, as compared to 2,500 with which he had crossed for the attack on Trenton.

With this slender force he conceived the audacious idea of an attack on the British at Princeton The story of that expedition is a familiar one—how he outwitted Cornwallis, who thought he had the "old fox" in a trap, how he defeated the British force at Princeton, killed 100 and took 230 prisoners and then retreated safely to Morristown, while "Cornwallis went puffing on to Brunswick expecting to find Washington ahead of him."

But this was the last triumph which he was to enjoy for a long time. Before him during that year of the "three sevens" were the failures at Brandywine and Germantown, failures on the part of his officers but charged up against him because he was the commander. And in the north his rival, Gates, who aspired to succeed him as commander-in-chief, was triumphing over Burgoyne at Saratoga. Before him, too, was the threat of the conspiracy to supplant him, inaccurately known as the "Conway cabal" since, as Hughes shows, General Conway was in reality the catspaw for others, and the terrible winter at Valley Forge.

Nor was 1778 much better. Against the recovery of Philadelphia, the success at Monmouth and the arrival of a French fleet to aid the patriots, must be checked the steady decline in men and money which threatened a total collapse of the fight for freedom. The same can be said of 1779 which ended in starvation and stagnation in the winter camp at Morristown. "Though it never supplanted Valley Forge in popular memory," says Hughes, "Morristown was the scene of far more cruel hardships for the army."

But if these years had been bad, 1780 was to prove the year of crowning disaster. There was the defeat of Gates at Camden and the loss of nearly all of the South to the British. There was the treason of Benedict Arnold and the failure of the French aid to bring any decisive result. And then at the beginning of 1781 came the mutiny of the Pennsylvania and New Jersey troops. But if the new year opened with despair it was destined to close with a triumph, the greatest in Washington's career as a military leader. For October brought Yorktown, the surrender of Cornwallis and the victory which assured the success of the fight for liberty.

This brief and necessarily inadequate epitome of those four fateful years can only hint at what the "Savior of the States" endured during that time. The full story of it cannot even be told in Hughes' thick volume of 700 pages, although it tells enough to justify his declaration that he cannot understand how the Revolution ever could have succeeded. Here is an amazing story of all the worst in human nature from which could be drawn up a terrific indictment of our forefathers. But depressing as that story is it but serves to throw into higher relief the gigantic figure of the man whom Americans ever since he suffered so deeply and strove so mightily in their behalf have come to honor as the "Father of His Country." If for no other reason than to show by contrast the greatness that was George Washington's that story should become a familiar one to Americans of the present day and of generations yet to come.

5218 Happy People Give up Their Secret

JUST suppose you could get 5000 joyously happy people together in one big hall and could ask them what made them all so full of pep. Suppose, strangely enough, that all of them had discovered the same way to be happy. You would feel that here, if anywhere in the world, was the secret of how to get joy out of life.

This is just what has happened during the last few weeks. We knew there were millions of people who had found the secret of happiness in the same way, and we asked them in one or two small announcements in the magazines and newspapers to tell us their story. Letters came to us from practically all over the globe.

All of them said "The secret of happiness is health."

How to get this health? The way that all of these people had discovered was not some magic medicine, not some powerful drug, not some difficult course of training—but only a simple, harmless, natural method. It was to keep the body internally clean, sweeping its natural poisons away each day, regularly as clock work—by the use of Nujol.

These people had made a great discovery. They had found out that Nujol contains no drugs; that it is as tasteless and colorless as pure water; pleasant to take and forms no habit; that it cannot hurt you, no matter how much you take; that it is non-fattening; not absorbed by the body; that it is only the internal lubrication your body needs, just like any other machine.

They have found the way to Buoyant, Zestful Health, and the Joy that goes with it

It sounds like a fairy tale, doesn't it, to be well and happy so easily? Well, all you need to do to find out if these people have made a real discovery is to get a bottle of Nujol today at any drug store and take it for two weeks. It costs but a few cents and it makes you feel like a million dollars. The sure way to happiness is through health.

BEST MEDICINE SHE KNOWS OF

Says "Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound"

Ft. Meyers, Fla.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine I ever heard of. Before my baby was born I was always weak and rundown. I had nervous spells until I couldn't do my housework. A lady told me about the Vegetable Compound and it strengthened me. Girl at the Top in Health Test

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

Children need no urging to take it. They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so that organs continue to act normally of their own accord. It stimulates appetite, helps digestion.

Thus mother, Mrs. Dana Allen, Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Barbara B. is absolutely the picture of health now, with her ruddy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful little body and she stands at the top in her health test. Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig Syrup. We have used it since babyhood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's ailments and it has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is quickly back to normal."

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll be sure to get the genuine.

Cares of State Forgotten

Abraham Lincoln reading to his son Thomas (Tad).

"Little Tad" Father's Pet

"Whatever became of Little Tad?" is the question I have been asked oftenest in my work of bringing forth new stories about the greatest of all Americans. Even those whose memories cover the two generations from the time Abraham Lincoln was living in the White House, seem confused about the identity of "the Child of the Nation." In Tad's day he was more widely known than Robert.

Tad, on account of the strange pet name his father had given him, has been confused with Willie, who died in the White House in February, 1862, or with Robert, who survived his father more than sixty years, to be secretary of war and United States ambassador to the court of Great Britain, as well as highly prominent in big business as president of the Pullman Palace Car company.

But the Lincolns' youngest son always will remain, "Little Tad" in the minds of the American people, though he grew to be a stalwart youth and lived a while in Germany, where, as has been related, he won the childish devotion of the little girl who was afterward married to the last of the czars of Russia and who heroically met the tragic fate of the Romanoff dynasty there.

In preparing this series of "New Lights" it has been necessary to review the many sources of light on Abraham Lincoln and his family. In this process of research for "things new and old" I have been surprised to find how many of the best Lincoln stories were started on their cheering way by the artist Frank B. Carpenter, who wrote "Six Months in the White House" after spending the first half year of 1864 there for the purpose of painting the now famous picture of "Abraham Lincoln Reading the Emancipation Proclamation to His Cabinet."

Near the President.

Carpenter wished to live near the President in order to catch his natural expression as well as to be at hand to arrange a sitting for the picture whenever possible. In that half year the painter saw and heard the best stories about Lincoln, which fact shows there were many times more stories which might have been related from and about Lincoln if some one had only been on hand to jot them down as Frank Carpenter was inspired to do; for Abraham Lincoln was himself a master story teller.

As one story suggests another, since I have been relating the new stories picked up in the course of twenty years writing for newspapers, books, magazines and moving pictures, I have received letters with stories from eye and ear witnesses from all parts of the country, even dating back as far as Lincoln's young manhood. Since the appearance of this series of "New Lights" I have received word from Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Washington (state), Oregon and California, offering fresh anecdotes which have never been published about Lincoln, who became the source of more stories than any other human being in history.

Naturally Carpenter's little old book could not have been true to the life if he had not related a number of tales about "Little Tad," to the first of which I now refer in order to make these stories more intelligible to the present-day reader. Here is the great portrait painter's introduction of Tad Lincoln:

"Some photographers from Brady's gallery came up to the White House to make some stereoscopic studies for me of the President's office. They requested a dark closet in which to develop the pictures and, without a thought that I was infringing upon anybody's rights, I took them to an unoccupied room of which 'Little Tad' had taken possession a few days before, and with the aid of a couple of servants, had it fitted up as a miniature theater with stage, curtains, orchestra, stalls, parquet and all. Knowing that the use required would not interefere with his arrangements, I led the way to this apartment.

The Rutledge tavern where Lincoln came to know Ann Rutledge.

Tad Asserts Rights.

"Everything went on well and one or two of the pictures had been taken, when suddenly there was an uproar! The operator came back to the office and said that Tad had taken great offense at the occupation of his room without his consent and had locked the door, refusing all admission. The chemicals had been taken inside and there was no way to get at them, he having carried off the key. In the midst of this conversation Tad burst in, in a earful passion! He laid all the blame upon me—said that I had no right to use his room, and that the men should not go in even to get their things, for they had no business in his room!

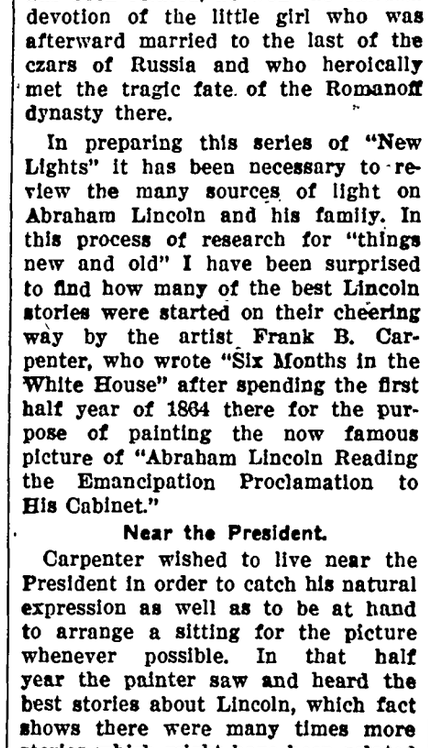
"Mr. Lincoln had been sitting for a photograph and was still in the chair. He said very mildly: 'Tad, go and unlock the door.' Tad went off, muttering, into his mother's room, refusing to obey. I followed him, but no coaxing would pacify him. On my return to the President, I found him sitting patiently in the chair, from which he had not risen. He said: 'Hasn't the boy opened that door?' I replied that I could no nothing with him—he had gone off in a great pet.

"Mr. Lincoln's lips came together firmly. Suddenly rising, he strode across the passage with the air of one bent on punishment and disappeared in the domestic apartments.

"Directly the President returned with the key to the theater, which he unlocked himself. 'There,' he said, 'go ahead; it is all right now.'

"He then went back to his office, followed by myself, and resumed his seat.

"'Tad,' said he, half apologetically, 'is a peculiar child. He was violently excited when I went to him. I said: "Tad, do you know you are making your father a great deal of trouble?" He burst into tears, instantly giving me the key.'"—Wayne Whiffle, in the New York World.



Abraham Lincoln when he was practicing law in Springfield, Ill. The majority of his portraits at that time show him with his hair carefully parted at the side, combed and plastered down. He did that especially to sit for his photograph, but the most of the time his hair was uncombed and tousled, as it is shown in this picture.

The true rule in determining to embrace or reject anything is not whether it have any evil in it, but whether it have more of evil than of good. There are few things wholly evil or wholly good.—Lincoln.

BIG LOSSES FROM SWINE AILMENTS

Much Could Be Prevented by Providing Dry Shelter.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Heavy losses have been experienced by swine owners this winter as a result of two diseases having symptoms somewhat resembling those of hog cholera. The cause in most cases investigated has been pneumonia, according to Dr. U. G. Houck, in charge of hog-cholera-control work in the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. The other disease is swine influenza, commonly known as "flu." Losses of swine from these diseases can be largely prevented by providing dry shelter for the animals to protect them from exposure to cold wind, rain, sleet and snow.

"Cases of pneumonia so common in the fall and winter months," Doctor Houck states, "usually follow a period of mild weather when the animals run out or are allowed to bed in the open. The first cold rain or snow nearly always results in a number of sick animals, but this year the loss has been greater than usual, especially in the central western states. In many cases the animals would not go into shelters unless they were driven, while others slept in damp bedding or drafty sheds.

"When permanent hog houses are lacking, comfortable quarters can usually be provided at small cost by the use of the portable A-type houses or other shelter which will protect against drafts, undue dampness and exposure. Even an open-front shed having a tight roof and sides will often afford sufficient protection. The use of bedding also helps to prevent sickness."

It is customary to regard the hog as a hardy animal needing little or no protection from cold weather. As a result of this mistaken idea, entire herds are often unduly exposed and become affected with pneumonia or "flu" with resulting heavy losses to the owners. Even a fat hog, government veterinarians point out, is not so well able to resist a sudden change to severe cold weather as are many other kinds of domestic animals. The thin covering of hair is not sufficient protection against exposure to cold weather, and the danger is increased when the hog lies on wet ground.

When an animal is affected with pneumonia, the symptoms often resemble hog cholera except that the congested condition of the visible mucous membranes is absent and there are no red spots on the skin. The trouble does not as a rule spread to the entire herd, and the post-mortem examination reveals lesions confined principally to the lungs.

Hog "flu" is characterized by the sudden prostration of a large number of the herd accompanied by loss of appetite and spasmodic breathing. When urged to move, the animals have violent fits of coughing. The eyes are swollen and there may be a discharge from the nose. When a herd shows symptoms of "flu" prompt measures should be taken to house and otherwise care for the animals in order to prevent losses.

"When any of the symptoms described occur in a herd of swine that has already been immunized against cholera," Doctor Houck adds, "one should suspect the presence of pneumonia, 'flu,' bronchitis, or similar disease, and take prompt measures to prevent losses."

Selling Old Sows and Keeping Gilts Is Best

Selling the old sows each year and keeping young ones for breeding is the most profitable practice in Minnesota, says H. G. Zavoral, extension swine specialist, university farm, St. Paul. By this method the breeding stock is kept continually growing and gaining in weight, thereby increasing its own market value as well as providing young stock.

Occasionally farmers may find it desirable to keep over pure-bred sows to improve the breeding in their herds. However, Mr. Zavoral says he has observed during the last ten years that the man who moves his sows every year and raises new ones will have the largest bank balance year in and year out, although he may not always produce the best hogs. Hog men who are most successful are the ones that mark every litter and select gilts from the best sows each year. The average man who follows this plan probably saves one pig less per litter than by using tried sows, but this loss is more than offset by the feed saved.

Castrate Ram Lambs

Many castrate the ram lambs at the same time they are docked. This saves catching them up again and in some cases the saving of labor justifies the practice. When the job of getting the sheep up to the barn is not too great, however, it is better to wait until the tails have healed before castrating. One operation at a time seems enough for a little lamb. Lambs should be castrated young, for the older they are the more severe the operation is for them.

Children will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always one sure way to comfort a restless, fretful child. Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than some powerful medicine that is meant for the stronger systems of adults.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is any need. In cases of colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. But it has everyday uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed to set everything to rights. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

Woman's Chief Charms Not to Be Purchased

The mouth is a photograph of the disposition. Some one has said that we are not responsible for the disposition we are born with, but we are responsible for the one that we die with. It is the same with the mouth The sweetness and kissableness and dearness of a baby's mouth are not dependent on the shape or size. Baby's mouth is sweet because his soul is sweet. No brand of lipstick, nor any artist in its use, can camouflage a sour mouth and make even a casual observer believe it is sweet.

Then there is the eye, which the contents of the vanity case cannot change. "The eye is the window of the soul." You can buy something that will lengthen the fringe on the curtains to your soul-windows, you can change the cut of the lambrequins above, but you can't keep people from looking in sometimes, unless you pull the shades down altogether and put yourself in darkness. No vanity case, not even a whole drug store or beauty shop, can make attractive the windows out of which looks a quarrelsome, envious soul.

Keep sweet within, if you want to get full value from your vanity case. —Nellie S. Russell in the Farm Journal.

God of Fellowship Is Need of Present Day

It would seem fitting that the exigencies of the weather which so much concerned the religion of ancient time should find its corollary in modern industrial life in the problem of unemployment. In this day of social worship, of a social interpretation of the Gospel we would paraphrase Elijah and cry: "The God that answereth by fellowship, let him be God!" And with a new consciousness of belonging to one another, make our prayers and deeds concern themselves more directly with the intimate life problem of our own day, with the problem that concerns the great majority of men and women. It is not enough that economists should point the way out. "If to labor is to pray," as the old monks said, then an active co-operation of heart and mind directed toward such a great social end is the direct obligation and the immediate concern of the churches in the present trend of social enlightenment upon this human issue.—The Churchman.

Refugee Churches

There is another refugee church beside the one at Austin Friars, London. A chapel in the crypt of Canterbury cathedral has been used by the Huguenots ever since Queen Elizabeth granted them a charter. The weavers who were among the refugees were allowed to use a portion of the crypt to set up their looms, and they used it for that purpose for many years. From time to time attempts have been made by the cathedral authorities to have the Huguenots removed from the precincts of the cathedral, but they have always failed to do so. The service is conducted in the French language by a minister in a quaint mediaeval gown.

Cigarette Paper

Practically all the cigarette papers in this country come from France, which makes the cigarette paper for almost the entire world. These papers are so thin and light that it takes several hundred of the little sheets that go around the cigarette to make an ounce. While commonly known as rice paper, this paper is not made from rice, but from flax and hemp trimmings, only new material being used. The flax and hemp is cut into small particles, thoroughly mixed and ground almost to a dust. Then it is put through a washing process, crushed into a pulp and rolled out into paper.

Childish Rhymes

Who originates the rhymes that school children repeat in their games at recess? Some are ancient, recalled, dressed over, adapted, from old folklore. Others are obviously quite modern. Who starts them? How do they travel around the world? Hundreds of them, never written down in print or handwriting, yet pass from place to place, from country to country, and from generation to generation —a survival of the ancient custom of the minstrels and story-tellers whose day preceded printing.

His Tongue Slipped

Philip had just said good-by to a nurse and mademoiselle reigns instead. At nursery breakfast she had been drilling Philip in the morning greeting to his mother downstairs. When the summons came she was heard exhorting the little chap at the top of the stairs:

"Bon jour, maman."

But what he said when he reached the dining room was:

"Mah-jong, mummie!"

Utopia

When it shall be said in any country in the world, "My poor are happy; neither ignorance nor distress is to be found among them; my jails are empty of prisoners, my streets of beggars; the aged are not in want, the taxes are not oppressive; the rational world is my friend, because I am a friend of its happiness"—when these things can be said, then may that country boast of its constitution and its government.—Thomas Payne.

ADDED USE means ADDED INVESTMENT

THE year which has just ended has shown a marked increase in the amount of current distributed by our company.

This growth makes necessary the investment of additional capital in larger and better equipment and distribution facilities.

To finance such additions and betterments, we are offering the people we serve the opportunity to become partners with us in the expansion of our business.

Ask our Manager or any employee about this plan of investing.

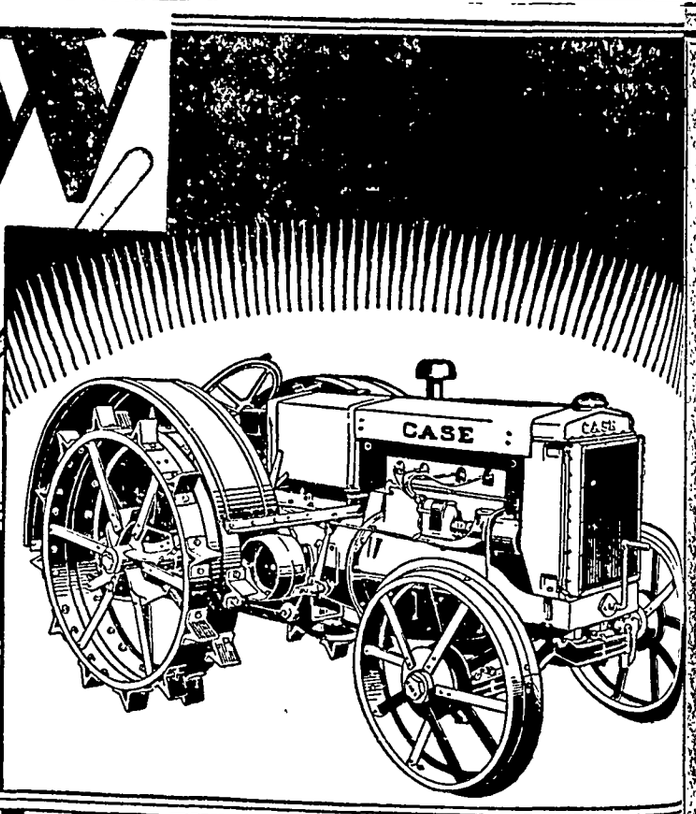
NEW POWER SPEED USEFULNESS



WE have seen many tractors in our experience, but never before anything that comes even close to approaching the new Case Model "C" Tractor.

Here you have every advantage to make tractor farming still more profitable. You have power to pull 2-3 plow bottoms, a small to medium size thresher with all attachments, or other machines of like capacity. You have compactness and light weight. The tractor stands only 48 inches high and weighs but a trifle more than two draft horses. You have three forward speeds, 2⅓, 3⅓ and 4½ miles an hour.

Because of these advantages, there is practically no limit to the versatility of the Model "C". You can use it for more different kinds of work—more days in the year. You can take it into the field when a heavier machine would be useless. You can speed up every farm operation. Not least in importance, you can get into corners and tight places, because the tractor turns short and with far more ease than is customary.

Never before have you been able to get a tractor with this combination of power, light weight, size, speed and ease of handling. By all means, come in and look it over.

Writer Would Combine Harmony and Business

Wanderers in the Home park at Hampton court are said to have been startled by hearing the gangs of workmen employed in renovating its ditches and copses break into song. How far have we strayed from Merrie England, when even highwaymen and hangmen sang at their work! We may well pine for a return to the days of Peachum and Macheath. Today errand boys whistle, grooms hiss through their teeth and taxi drivers groan, but only sailors, soldiers on the march and Welsh miners sing at their work. The rest of us confine our singing to the privacy of our baths. Behind locked doors we outsoar Chaliapin, but the presence of one fellow creature is enough to reduce us to dumbness.

It was not considered strange that the old-time milkmaid crooned at her task. Who expects the modern typist to follow her example? It is frequently complained that noise is the curse of civilization. Why not turn it into a blessing by making it harmonious? When every man sings no din of traffic will be heard. "'Tis a sure sign work goes on merrily," said Isaac Bickerstaff, "when folk sing at it." It is high time we forsook the idea that work is a penance to be performed in silence in a black coat.

Razing of Babylon Not Completed by Darius

Babylon was never entirely destroyed after the time of the conquest by Darius, described in the Book of Daniel. That conquest took place in the year 521 B. C., but except that part of the walls was razed during a rebellion in 514, Darius did not destroy systematically. His son Xerxes, destroyed part of the great temple of Bel, or Baal, called E—Sagilla, which was also a fortress. The religion of Darius, however, was monotheistic zoroastrianism and because of this many temples fell into disrepair. About 312 B. C. a dynasty arose called the Selencids, founded by a general of Alexander the Great. He conquered Babylon in 323. When the Seleucids founded the new capital Seleucis near Babylon they used the ancient city as a quarry and there is record that in 275 B. C. all the inhabitants of Babylon were transported to the new town, though it is known that religious services were still held in the old temple of Bel a century later.—Montreal Family Herald.

Originator of Income Tax

It is a curious fact that income tax was "invented" by an Oxford don, Dr. Henry Beeke, a fellow of Oriel college, who afterwards became dean of Bristol. Beeke was professor of modern history at Oxford, though his real forte was finance, and he frequently assisted Vansittart with the budget during that statesman's long tenure of the chancellorship of the exchequer. Disgruntled taxpayers will learn with grim satisfaction that Doctor Beeke came to a sad end. He died in exile at Torquay, whither he had fled for refuge from the "Bristol riots" at the time of the first Reform bill.—London Times.

Death for Selling Tobacco

China was introduced to tobacco early in the Seventeenth century, but it was not long before its use was prohibited by imperial edict and decapitation prescribed as a penalty for anyone who clandestinely hawked it, writes Dr. Berthold Laufer, curator of anthropology at Field Museum of Natural History.

The edict proved unenforceable and soon was rescinded, because of the general disregard accorded it by nobles and commoners alike, and because tobacco had been adopted as a remedy for colds in the army, unexcelled by any other remedy with which the Chinese then were acquainted—Detroit News.

Although operated by Catholics, according to its own principles, it is not sectarian in its social work.—Washington Star.

Master of the Angels

There was once a sculptor who lived so long ago that every one has forgotten his name, but he would not mind, for artists and critics have given him a new one; he is the Master of the Angels. He had a magic gift for turning dead stone into gracious faces and fluttering wings, and critics say his angels are different from all others.

The angels in the central and southern doorways of the west portal of Chartres cathedral, which dates from the middle of the Twelfth century, are said to be his work.

GOLDTHWAITE FOR CONGRESS

TO THE VOTERS OF HANCOCK COUNTY

Recognizing that the newspaper is the most serviceable and widely reaching medium for getting acquainted, I am using the columns of The Klemme Times to present some of the reasons for candidacy for congress. With your indulgence, I must resort to the first person singular at frequent times, realizing that this time the editorial "we" must go into the discard.

Geography is not as a rule considered as entering into the qualifications of a candidate, but the south end of the Tenth District has as you know, loyally supported a republican candidate from counties on the Minnesota line for the past twenty-two years. As a matter of political fairness, the south part of the Tenth, preponderantly agricultural, of course, like the rest of the district, but supplemented by many factories, would like to present a successful candidate for representative in congress in 1930. Boone county being the second largest county in the district, therefore, feels that its claim to recognition are well worthy of conscientious consideration, particularly in view of the fact that it has rarely asked for preferment. Of course, this does not mean that the rest of the district would not be fairly and frankly represented, and above all the agricultural needs. Agriculture has always been and will probably continue to be the most important enterprise in the Tenth district. My early days were spent on a farm, owned and operated by my father, and throughout my life my chief interests, outside my newspaper business, have been agricultural, and the clientele I have served has been agricultural. My father left me two farms and I acquired two more, all in Boone county. These were not the highest class farms, but they were such as we could afford I have been familiar with the problems of the renters and their many difficulties in the past few years. Recently I sold the largest farm to the renter and was proud to say that he made the payment down and met the future obligations on the dot. I have been a member of the Boone County Farm Bureau for many years, and I am fully alive to the economic injustices to which agriculture has been subjected. I think it is universally admitted that a newspaper man's general contacts with the people he serves through his paper is of a character which edvelopes a more sympathetic understanding of life's problems than is possible in many professions, and I have been keenly conscious that a rather radical readjustment was necessary in the farmer's behalf.

Nevertheless, I feel that the farmer is now making good progress in his struggle for parity with other forms of making a livelihood. Realizing that the successor to Hon. L. J. Dickinson, well known champion of the farmer and dubbed by Speaker Nicholas Longworth as a "Hell Raiser for Farm Aid," has a busy mark to aim at, I hestitated a long while before deciding to enter the field. However, I would not care to go to congress unless I could be of some service to somebody and I would certainly undertake first of all to keep the ball rolling in this movement towards absolute parity for the farmer. There is a lot of work to be done yet.

I believe a Great Lakes waterway system would be a very big help in this direction and would put forth untiring efforts for this accomplishment.

I am thoroughly in sympathy with the movement to abolish the Farm Loan Board and put the efforts for farm aid into one system under the direction of the new Federal Farm Board, where farmers will be treated like the rest of the people when it comes to obtaining financial credit.

There is another parity which is essential for the future well being of the people, and that is the parity of taxes. The burden of property tax, especially on farm property, on which taxation is fixed without any reference to its earning capacity cannot go on indefinitely. An income tax is the fairest, because it is assessed on net income and with regard to the capacity to earn. No income tax should be imposed however, which does not replace and relieve the excess burden of property taxes.

I am in sympathy wiht the worker and his endeavor through all fair means to make his compensation higher and his conditions healthier and pleasanter for working. In a word, higher wages and lower taxes is a condition to be attained, if full hapiness and prosperity are to prevail in the land.

This can be done only by strict economy in governmental expenses. The taxes which go toward a needless extravagance in supporting the never-ending demands of government bureaus could well be applied to an advance in the means available to the worker in the education of his family and in the enjoyment of some of the luxuries that are not now within his reach.

At the age of sixteen I got the smell of printer's ink and thereafter my vacations were spent at the printer's case instead of on the farm. Later I adopted the printer's trade, at which I worked in Boone and Chicago until graduating into business as a newspaper publisher. This latter has brought me into close contact with every form of business activity, along with a toleranable understanding of the the problems of every worker. My policy fairness to all interests, with especial attention to the improvements of farm and labor conditions.

Necessarily, an entire platform cannot be included in this limited space, and without wearying you further, I ask for your careful consideration in the coming contest during which I hope to become better acquainted with you. I hope we will find ourselves more and more in accord as the campaign goes on.

Yours faithfully,
S. G. GOLDTHWAITE,
Editor Boone News-Republican.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Naval Parley Getting Down to Business—Spain's Dictator Resigns.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

MOVING slowly and not very surely toward their goal, the delegates to the five power naval conference in London spent another week mainly in private conversations designed to develop national programs, some radio addresses and one plenary session. The correspondents made such a fuss about being excluded that room was provided for a number of them at the session and the others "listened in" by microphone.

At the meeting on Thursday the delegates told something about the progress they had made toward an agreement on preliminaries. Prime Minister MacDonald had had talks with the French, Italian and Japanese, and Dino Grandi of Italy had been pressed to agree that Mussolini's proposal for the immediate establishment of ratios should be examined later. Explanation was given by Mr. Gibson of the Franco-American compromise between global tonnage and category theories of measurement of fleet strengths which was alluded to in these columns last week. The agreement is based on a maximum of transfer tonnage yearly from one category to another, and it was understood that a percentage of one-sixth of the total of any category might be accepted as the amount of tonnage possible to transfer. The matter was referred to a steering committee on motion of Mr. Stimson.

Mr. MacDonald opened the session by stating that its main purpose was to consider the agenda. He explained that there had been wide exchanges of opinions and declared "gratifying progress" had been made.

The questions proposed by the French were: First, the system of global tonnage and the French transactional proposal; second, what classifications are to be adopted; and, third, the transfer of tonnage and the conditions to be applied to such a transfer under the British system of limitation by categories.

Italy proposed that the determination of ratios should be the first step and that the determination of levels of total tonnages of the various nations should then follow.

After adjournment Mr. MacDonald, who is chairman, told the correspondents: "I think we are now within measurable distance of solving the problem which up to now has not been solvable. Mind, I do not say that we are agreed as yet, but I think the steering committee will report agreement. The differences between us are so small that were you to put a candle to them, you could see through the wall of controversy." MacDonald emphasized, however, that Great Britain could not accept the global tonnage theory as now presented, saying: "There would be continued competition within categories."

IN A radio address to British and American hearers Mr. Stimson indicated that the American delegation had decided that the five-year extension of the present battleship building holiday would be the principal result of the conference. It seemed as if he had abandoned the program for cruiser reduction which was desired by President Hoover. The objectives of the United States, as outlined by Mr. Stimson, were summarized thus:

1. Parity between the British and American navies in "power and efficiency."

2. A reduction of the battleship building programs of all naval powers by postponing the five-year replacement of present capital ships, provided for by the Washington treaty.

3. Ending the rivalry in cruiser and destroyer building by limitation of the number and tonnage of these classes of surface craft.

4. Abolition of submarines, or, in any event, the reduction of their number, and prohibition of their ruthless use against merchant ships.

Reassuring his countrymen who might be alarmed by stories of crises and of the danger that the interests of the United States were being sacrificed, the secretary of state concluded:

"The members of the American delegation here in one capacity or another went through the great war. Most of us have had to study national defense in the course of our official duties. We are united in believing that our national defense, our national interests, and our prospects will continue; peace and prosperity can best be served by naval limitation and its consequent good will.

"In the belief that the same agreement, which holds out such prospects for us holds equal prospects for the other nations here, we go at our task with the assurance of the support of the people of these five great nations."

ONE of the interesting points brought out by conversations among the experts attached to the various delegations is that France and Italy must have warships large enough to store wine casks for the crews, and the extra displacement and greater tonnage required for this purpose is something to be considered, especially in regard to the smaller submarines and the torpedo boats.

There were many social entertainments for the delegates during the week, and these were never without their diplomatic importance. Some of the Americans spent the week-end at Warren house, Stanmore, the handsome country place leased by Mr. Stimson. It was announced that all the delegates would meet the duke and duchess of York at a banquet and reception on February 19, to be given by the marquis and marchioness of Londonderry. Tiaras and full evening dress will be worn by the women, and court dress of black satin knee breeches and silk stockings will adorn the gentlemen.

GEN. PRIMO DE RIVERA, for six years premier and dictator of Spain, resigned last week under virtual compulsion, and the country at once went into spasms that, it was thought, might ultimately result in the abolition of the monarchy. The dictator had put up to the chief officers of the army and navy the question of his resignation and their decision being against him, he stepped down. King Alfonso gave the job of premier to Gen. Damaso Berenguer, chief of his military household and inveterate enemy of de Rivera, and two days later Berenguer announced his cabinet, in which he took the portfolio of minister of war as well as premier.

Even before he had formed the new government the forces in opposition to Berenguer were gathering in Madrid. De Rivera, evidently believing a dictator might be down without being out, took the leadership of the Patriotic Union against his successor, and there were indications that the old charges against Berenguer in connection with the Moroccan disaster of eight years ago would be revived. There were riotous demonstrations by students and republicans which were suppressed by the troops. It was made plain that General Berenguer would rule with an iron hand until the government is firmly established. One of his first acts was the establishment of strict censorship. He announced that parliament by elections and the constitution of 1876 would be re-established. Dispatches from Madrid said it was certain Berenguer had the support of King Alfonso and the conservative leaders, but that the danger of a revolution was not exaggerated. Primo de Rivera was quoted as saying Spain still needed a dictator and that he would "continue to serve the country and give my life if necesary."

CARL BEN EIELSON, arctic aviator, and Earl Borland, his mechanic, perished on the coast of Siberia about ninety miles east of North Cape. The wreckage of their plane was found by Pilots Crosson and Gillam and was easily identified. At this writing searching parties are still trying to find the bodies of the unfortunate flyers. Eielson and Borland were engaged in transporting passengers and furs from an icebound steamer. Their plane evidently crashed when traveling at high speed and the disaster was believed to be due to a faulty altimeter on which Eielson relied when a snowstorm wiped out his visibility.

SENATOR ROBINSON of Indiana, the only regular Republican on the senate's lobbying committee, was foiled in his attempt to show a connection between Senator King of Utah, Democrat, and the German dye trust. It was brought out before the committee that contributions to King's campaign fund were made by Herman A. Metz, American agent of the German monopoly, but when put on the stand Metz developed a conveniently faulty memory and said he had kept no record of those contributions. He admitted he sent a check for $1,000 to King in 1928 because he was interested in the campaign of his friend Al Smith. This check, King had asserted, was not cashed and was torn up by him. Metz is an official of the American I. G., a subsidiary of the German concern. He denounced as nonsensical the idea that the American company was organized to control the dye and chemical industry here until American competition could be smothered and the German interests come into the open. The low tariff members of the committee treated the dyestuff man with great consideration, but Chairman Caraway was so rough with A. L. Faubel, secretary of the American Tariff league, that they almost came to blows.

WET members of congress were elated by the announcement that the house judiciary committee would hold public hearings on measures to repeal the Eighteenth amendment, starting February 12. There isn't the slightest chance that any of the bills for repeal or modification will get through the house, which is overwhelmingly dry, but the opponents of prohibition in its present form will have a chance to present their arguments and facts and figures. The drys will have the same opportunity.

The wet measures before the committee include the Cochran resolution to repeal the Eighteenth amendment, the La Guardia resolution proposing an amendment to restore liquor control to the states; the Sabath, Igoe and Clancy resolutions to repeal the Volstead act; the Cochran resolution to permit 3 per cent wine and beer; and the Norton resolution calling for a national referendum on the Eighteenth amendment.

Attorney General Mitchell, in a letter to the expenditure committee of the house, gave notice that the employees of the Department of Justice must be dry by practice and profession, and that candidates for appointment must measure up to this. "I believe," he wrote, "that no man who makes a practice of drinking intoxicating liquor, or who has definite or pronounced views in opposition to prohibition, belongs in any post having directly to do with the prosecution of cases under the national prohibition act. It seems to me that such men had better seek positions in some other branch of the government or a private occupation."

CHAIRMAN LEGGE of the federal farm board and Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, speaking over the radio, strongly urged farmers to hold down the production of surplus crops in order to help in the work of restoring their prosperity. Both speakers called attention to the outlook report of the Department of Agriculture, just issued, predicting little if any increase in farm commodity prices during 1930 if overproduction continues.

Messrs. Hyde and Legge then called on President Hoover and told him that Eastern life insurance companies are complicating the farm situation by curtailing purchase of farm mortgages in the Mississippi valley states. Unless this policy on the part of life insurance companies is changed, Mr. Hyde told the President, large scale foreclosures of farm land are certain to result.

NOTABLES taken by death during the week included Bishop Charles P. Anderson of Chicago, primate of the Episcopal church of America; Mme. Emmy Destinn, Hungarian grand opera prima donna; Dr. Harry B. Hutchins, president emeritus of the University of Michigan; Mrs. Rebecca L. Felton of Georgia, the only woman ever to hold a seat in the United States senate; Rear Admirals W. W. Kimball and Thomas Snowden and Gens. David S Gordon and Harry Taylor.

TAKE IT FROM DAD

By Frank H. Cheley

Why Is Gambling So Undesirable?

"Dad, I lost my bet on the football game Saturday. The principal caught me paying it in the hall this morning, and, oh boy, but I got bawled out. He fairly pounced upon me. First, I was as sore as a boiled owl, but he set me to thinking. I never thought of it as being wicked or disloyal to the school, for everybody does it—but, gee, dad, I'd hate to cast even a little shadow on you, so I just thought I'd talk it over a bit."

"Yes, Bob," encouraged Mr. Smithhough, "go right along."

"Well, dad, what I want to know, is why is gambling so wrong and undesirable. Everybody seems to be doing it under one circumstance or another. I had no thought of being any of the things the principal accused me of."

"Bob, it's a big question, and there is very much to be said about it. To get something for nothing except as a friendly gift is basically immoral. It is a little harmless seed from which much that is very, very bad springs automatically. Money is stored personally. All money is the price of life and labor, and to use it so flippantly in a world of as great need as ours is certainly immoral. To bet ten cents on this or that seems but a little thing, and is, but the principle involved is just as great. To steal ten cents or ten thousand dollars involves the same great principle of honesty. There, of course, can be no such thing as little harmless thefts, or no such thing as little harmless bets—to a man of staunch principle.

"To carry in your pocket money which has become yours by no use of your manly powers or efforts, which has ceased to be another boy's by no willing acceptance on his part of its equivalent, is degrading.

"You bet on the game, Bob, as you thought to prove your unquestioned support of your team, but betting, my boy, is the very height of unsportsmanship. Nothing will so surely kill true sport, for there can be no wholehearted love of sport for sport's sake where there is betting. It is betting, Bob, which introduces professionalism into college athletics, for by and by and invariably, when boys stake money, usually not their own, they are quite willing to do dishonorable things to shape the results so they can win. When they lose, the embarrassment financially often leads to embezzlement and dishonesty to cover up.

"Furthermore, Bob, betting is bad because it involves the principles of snobbery and conceit.

"The better is always certain he knows more than his neighbor and because of his superior wisdom exacts a toll. Scarcely any vice works more disastrously on the character of youth than gambling for it soon makes a part of the gambler's life philosophy that he can and ought to get something for nothing.

"Hand me down that volume of Charles Kingsley's letters. Unless I'm badly mistaken there is an enlightening letter there to his own son on the same question. From it, Bob, we'll see that the problem is as old as the race and that the best thought has always been the same concerning it. Here it is, sure enough.

"My Dearest Boy:

"There is a matter in your last letter which gave me much uneasiness. You said you had put into some lottery for the Derby and had hedged to make it safe.

"Now all this is bad, bad, nothing but bad. Of all habits gambling is the one I hate most and have avoided most. Of all habits it grows most on eager minds. Success and loss alike make it grow. Of all habits, however much civilized men may give way to it, it is one of the most intrinsically savage.

"It gains money by the lowest and most unjust means, for it takes money out of your neighbor's pocket without giving him anything in return.

"It tempts you to use what YOU fancy your superior knowledge of a horse's merits—or anything else—to your neighbor's harm.

"If you know better than your neighbor you are bound to give him your advice. Instead you conceal your knowledge to win from his ignorance; hence come all sorts of concealments, dodges, deceits—I say the Devil is the only father of it. I'm sure, moreover that Mother would object seriously to anything like a lottery, betting or gambling.

"I hope you have not won. I should not be sorry for you to lose. If you have won I should not congratulate you. If you wish to please me, you will give back to its lawful owners the money you have won. If you are a loser in gross thereby I will gladly reimburse your losses THIS time.

"I have spoken my mind once and for all on a matter which I have held the same views for more than twenty years, and trust in God you will not forget my words in after life. I have seen many a good fellow ruined by finding himself one day, short of money, and trying to get a little by gambling or betting—and then the Lord have mercy on his simple soul, for simple it will not remain long.

"Mind, I am not the least angry with you. Betting is the way of the world but to the Devil it leads if indulged in, in spite of the wise world and its ways. "Your loving Pater."

"That's that, but, Bob, there is still one last thought that is important. Every man who gambles helps to keep popularized and give social sanction to a system that multiplies embezzlements and deepens poverty.

Marketing Can Be Further Improved

Co-Operative Organizations Can Do Much by Handling Commodities.

Co-operative marketing organizations can improve marketing methods, expand the market for their products, obtain as fair a price as the demand justifies and promote better production practices, declares D. N. Donaldson, associate economist at the Colorado Agricultural college.

"Improved marketing methods will come about by increasing the efficiency of the present marketing machinery," Mr. Donaldson says. "Some agricultural products can be handled more cheaply than they are being handled at present.

Market Gluts Wasteful.

"Shipments in less than carload lots and the handling of commodities many times contribute to heavy marketing costs. Market gluts are wasteful and expensive and any scheme that will overcome congestion in the distributing centers will benefit both producer and consumer.

"With some commodities, especially those of a perishable nature, the opportunity for market expansion is great. The consumer cannot be induced, to any great degree, to increase his consumption of staple products such as bread and meat. However, he will respond quite readily to clever food appeals if they suit his fancy. The co-operative can aid materially in this respect.

"Co-operatives acting together as a collective bargaining group can obtain as fair a price for their product as the market conditions justify. This does not necessarily mean that the fair price will be their fixed price, but will be the price determined by competition in a particular market.

Grading Farm Products.

"Standardization and grading of farm products rests largely with the producer. Co-operatives can promote better cultural practices among their members. When a better grade of product is produced and offered for sale, the problem of marketing will be half solved. Co-operation should begin on the farm."

Combat San Jose Scale and Peach Leaf Curl

If San Jose scale and peach leaf curl must both be combated these troubles may be controlled by using a 2 per cent cold-mixed lubricating oil emulsion with Bordeaux made according to the 3-4-50 formula. Where San Jose scale is not present the Bordeaux alone or lime sulphur 1-15 or 1-20 is effective. One spraying is sufficient and it may be made in the fall after the leaves drop or in the spring before growth starts. In the control of peach leaf curl, it is imperative that the work be done before the buds swell in the spring. For both San Jose scale and peach leaf curl, thorough spraying cannot be emphasized too strongly. Unsprayed or partly sprayed buds may show the scale and curl.

Mice Often Worse Than Rabbits in an Orchard

Mice are often even worse than rabbits, especially in a mulched orchard. When planting young trees it is always safest to protect them with wire mesh collars. We have used both ¼-inch mesh and the 1-3-inch mesh with good results. We usually buy a roll of the wire mesh "hardware cloth" 18 inches in width, which we cut into strips 6 inches wide. These strips are rolled on a piece of pipe and they are then ready for use. When placing them around the trees push them into the ground about 2 inches. The tops of the collars can be bent outward slightly, to a bell shape, to prevent the trees from chafing against them as the trees sway in the wind. These collars also afford considerable protection against rabbits and sun scald.

Determine Kind of Lime to Use and the Amount

Several factors should be considered in determining the kind of lime to use. These are: cost of material, character of the soil and the rapidity of action required. Ground-limestone, on account of its milder action, will as a rule be found the better material to use.

The amount of lime to apply naturally varies with the nature of the soil and the degree of acidity. Generally speaking, two tons of ground limestone to the acre should be sufficient, although in some cases much larger quantities may be found necessary.

Soy Beans Will Prove Good Emergency Crop

Soy beans will prove a good hay crop to turn to this spring in case no alfalfa or clover was started a year or more ago or in case these crops fail to come through the winter in good condition. It is not a better roughage crop than alfalfa or clover and should never be so considered. Unfortunately, both alfalfa and clover sometimes winterkill or fail for some other reason. Ton for ton, soy bean hay may be equal in feeding value to alfalfa and possibly a little better than common red clover or alsike, but the feeding value is not the only thing to consider in the growing of forage crops.

FAMILY DOCTOR MADE MILLIONS OF FRIENDS

Fifteen years after his graduation, Dr. Caldwell became famous for a single prescription, and now, after forty years, is making friends.

Today Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the world's most popular laxative. Millions of people think of using anything else when they're constipated, headachy, bilious, feverish or weak; when breath is bad, tongue coated, or they're suffering from nausea, gas or lack of appetite or energy.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made today according to the original formula, from herbs and other pure ingredients. It is pleasant tasting; thorough in the most obstinate cases; gently effective for women and children. Above all, it represents a doctor's choice for what is safe for the bowels.

CONSTIPATED

Take NR—NATURE'S REMEDY—tonight. Your eliminative organs will be functioning properly by morning and your constipation will end with a bowel action as free and easy as nature at her best—positively no pain, no griping. Try it.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY

Up from the south at the break of morn,
Over the snow by the south wind borne,
Steals like the dawn or a sweet perfume
Promise of summer with bird and bloom.
This is the month when the banks of snow
Gurgle in streams to the rivers below.
This is the month of the mating moon,
Brooding new life that shall wake in June.

Down on the shores of the southern stream
Wild birds are chanting the deathless theme.
Voices of black bird, of wren, and dove
Warble the song of nest and love,
Borne by the breath of the southern breeze,
Soon they will brood in the northern trees.
Each one will croon, from his tree or vine,
Love-laden lays to his Valentine.

Come, lonely heart, put your sorrows away—
This is the month of St. Valentine's day;
Why should you pine in your gloom apart—
No one to love you and call you sweetheart?
Catch in your bosom the spirit of Spring;
Come, join the chorus of lovers who sing.
Maids in despair now in sadness repine.
Waiting the call of St. Valentine.

—The Woodmen News.

Valentine Customs and Superstitions of Old

There were certain superstitions during early times which now seem entirely to have passed away. For instance, if a young girl, on the eve of St. Valentine day, went alone and waited until midnight on the porch of a church, then started for home, scattering hempseed on the way, it was believed she would see her own true love in a winding sheet raking the hempseed behind her. Why he was supposed to be seen in a winding sheet has not been explained.

Another superstition was most interesting. If a young girl got five bay leaves and pinned one on each of the four corners of her pillow, the remaining one to be placed in the center, and if that night her sweetheart appeared in her dreams they would be married before the end of the year.

It is written of one young lady of those times that she confessed, in order to make the charm more potent, to having boiled an egg perfectly hard, removed the yolk, filled the vacant place with salt and, upon going to bed, eaten the entire egg, salt, shell and all, without drinking or speaking to any one after she had finished the eating of it.

But the really, truly way to find out the name of your own true love was to write the name of all your admirers upon bits of paper, roll them up in clay, put them in a vessel of water and the first one to rise to the surface was surely the one.

The practice of sending comic valentines is a much later one. These caricatures which poked fun at people's personal appearance, their clothes and even the work in which they were engaged had their greatest popularity perhaps 40 or 50 years ago. Fortunately they now seem to have lost their vogue. There is no doubt that many friendships were severed and enmities made because of these frequently offensive missives being sent with malice aforethought.

Meanwhile, the pretty valentines—all hearts, paper lace and cupids—grow finer each year. Beautiful hand-painted cards and painted and beautifully decorated boxes for confections are sold in great numbers.

The least interesting of the present day valentines are the various and sundry assortments of packages complete with all the paraphernalia ready to be assembled into lovely valentines which children love to prepare for their teachers, friends and family. As they now become more a day for children than for grown-ups, these cards afford much pleasure to the sender and to the recipient.

LOVE'S MESSAGES

Valentine, like butterflies,
Fly north, fly west,
Seeking each a true heart
That love has blessed;
Seeking each a fond heart,
But fond or true,
None can beat as my heart
Still beats for you.

Valentines, like sailing birds,
Fly south, fly east,
Seeking each a love land
Where love may feast;
Seeking each its own kind
The whole world through;
Never finding more love
Than I give you.

Valentines, like fairy folk,
Fly high, fly low,
Seeking choicest gift of earth
That man may know;
Seeking love you gave me
When life was new;
Love that lives forever,
That I gave you.

Nothing Sedate About Valentines of Today

Sedate stanzas whispering guardedly of love characterized the early American valentines, as shown in a collection made by the Chicago Historical society. Changing times produced more direct expression until in 1930, the collection reveals, the valentine verse makers leave no doubt of the senders' amorous sentiments.

The earliest valentine shown is dated 1800, but all before 1850 were handmade affairs, generally a red heart with a pretty but proper inscription.

Miss Esther Howland began making valentines commercially in 1851, the society points out, and it is from that time on that the lacy, heart-embossed creations date. Many of Miss Howland's valentines were simply inscribed: "To one I love."

Comic valentines appear to have enjoyed a perpetual vogue throughout the years, the society showing many which it describes as "ridiculous, witty and severe."

One of the valentines of the World war period has a picture by John T. McCutcheon, cartoonist, with verse by George Ade. The picture shows a mother who has apparently censored her daughter's mail to a soldier abroad. Beneath is printed:

Mr. Soldier Man:
I cannot send what my daughter wrote.
It might set fire to the darned old boat.

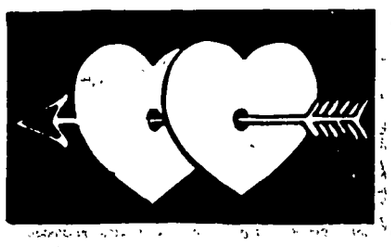
I HAVE CAUGHT YOU, VALENTINE

Valentine Presents

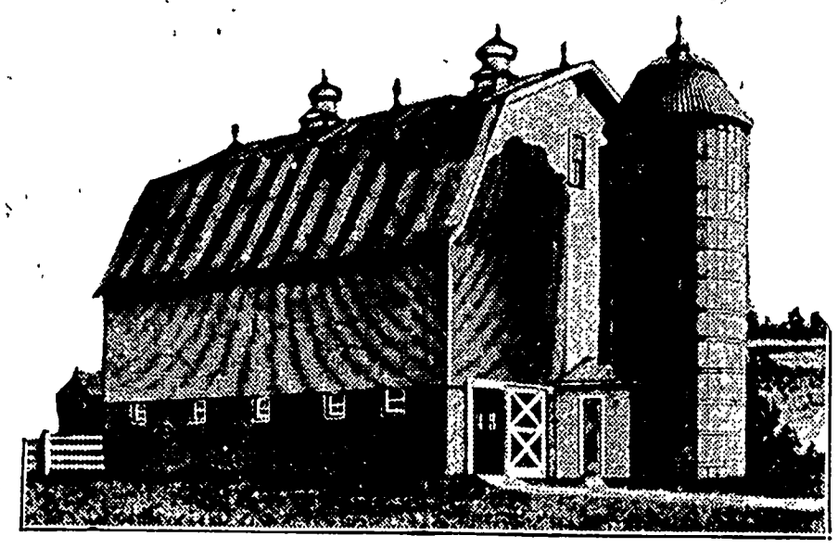
Not so very long ago, in some parts of England valentines were something more than we understand them today. Not only were messages and verse decoarted by hearts and darts, sent by post, but on the eve of St. Valentine day it was the custom to leave on the doorsill of friends presents of all kinds. Such bulky articles as a desk and an armchair were known to have been left there. The donor would then knock and disappear to watch from some vantage point until the door was opened and the valentine present taken in.

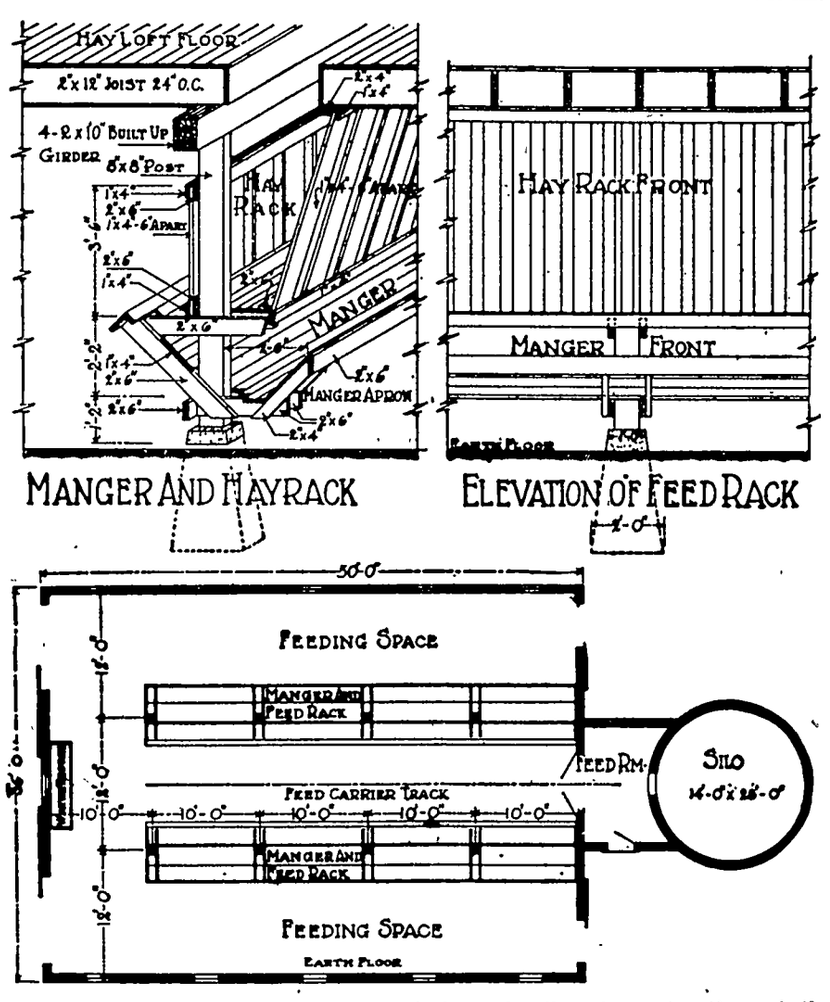
Sentimental Messages

Sentiment expressed on early valentines prove that the gentleman then meant the words he inscribed or that breach of promise suits weren't as customary as they are today. The wise young man of 1930 is satisfied with "To my sweetheart" inscribed on a large, red heart filled with chocolates, but a message inscribed in 1865 read as follows: "To my friend: The charm that best can sweeten life is found to be a faithful wife; the wife I seek—good, kind, and true—love whispers I shall find in you."



Modern Barn for Cattle Feeder
Investment That Will Pay Well





By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all problems pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Most farmers in the corn belt figure on feeding some cattle or sheep other than those raised on the farm. In order to do this many provide a barn which is designed especially to handle a carload or two of cattle or sheep. To some people it may seem an unnecessary investment to build a barn especially for this purpose, but when feed is being used to put fat on cattle, it is economical to protect the animals from the cold of winter so that the nourishment will increase flesh and weight rather than go to maintain the body heat against the cold winds and zero temperatures.

A barn designed especially for feeders is shown in the accompanying illustration. The stable floor is open and is equipped only with mangers and feed racks. A silo, 14 feet by 28 feet, adjoins and is connected with the stable floor by a feed room so that the work of feeding silage can be done indoors in the winter time. A frame carrier track runs through the feed room down the center of the floor to cut the cost of labor in feeding the animals. At the far end of the stable is a water tank.

The floor plans show the location of this equipment and demonstrate how simple it will be for one man to care for a considerable number of animals. Other architect's drawings show details of construction of the manger and feed racks and a cross-section of the building giving a number of details of construction.

This barn is 36 feet wide and 50 feet long. Aside from the silo there is a mow floor for the storage of roughage. Hay chutes enable the feeder to put the roughage directly into the racks which means saving in feed and a saving in labor.

Where an excess amount of feed is raised it is a profitable fall, winter and spring business to feed a bunch of cattle. Farmers get a good deal better price for their roughage and corn to finish the animals by feeding than by selling as a cash crop.

The capacity of this barn is 26 head of cattle. The mow floor will hold 78 tons of loose hay and probably twice as much as that if the hay is baled or chopped.

Insulation Big Factor in Proper Heat Level

Draughty rooms are not only uncomfortable—they are unhealthy. Our standards of heating and ventilation are set by the school, the church, the office, the store, the shop, where we spend a large part of our time. In such places, thanks to the modern architect and engineer, we become accustomed to temperature maintained at a proper level constantly. So the effect when we go into a home that's always overheated or chilly and full of draughts is unaccustomed, uncomfortable and unhealthy.

Nor can we forget that clothes have much to do with housing standards. The day of the red flannel petticoat is gone. Thin skirts, chiffon stockings, sleeveless and collarless dresses make uniform proper temperatures a necessity to comfort and health.

So insulation is more than an economy. It is a guaranty of comfort and a protection of health.

Brick Construction Is Not So Expensive

A Des Moines (Iowa) builder erected two small houses, identical in every respect except that one was frame and the other face brick construction. Final costs showed that the face brick cost but $84.80 more than the frame house. Total costs for the houses were $2,901.30 for the face brick and $2,816.50 for the frame.

Lightweight Tiles Are Made for Fireproofing

Lightweight and incombustible tile for use as fireproof partitions, roof-decks and floors are manufactured from gypsum and wood fiber, with about 97 per cent of the whole being gypsum and the balance wood fiber. When used for partitions such tiles are laid up very much as brick is laid up, only the mortar used is a gypsum mortar.

For roof-decks they are manufactured to special sizes, laid across the steel roof members, fastened and then are ready for any standard kind of a roof covering. When used for floors, they are covered with cement topping, over which the finish flooring is applied.

In addition to barring fire, because of their incombustibility, such tile reduces the transmission of heat and sound from room to room or floor to floor, because of the natural insulating properties of the gypsum from which they are made and because of the hollow air space that each tile contains. They also can be sawed to fit odd-sized spaces with the same ease that wood is sawed and nailed.

POULTRY

PLAN TO PREVENT POULTRY LOSSES

Poor Production Usually Due to Insanitary Methods.

Successful poultrymen realize that practically all heavy losses in poultry are preventable, according to Charles N. Keen, assistant professor in poultry at the Colorado Agricultural college.

Heavy losses and poor production in poultry are usually due, Mr. Keen says, to some of the following factors: Failure to have clean houses, clean feed, clean water, birds free from parasites and failure to remove sick birds from the houses.

The fact that one changes the straw regularly does not mean that the house is in a good sanitary condition. Regular cleaning of the dropping boards must go with it. When you enter a poultry house during cold weather and the odor is such as to make you halt when you open the door, it is evident that the air is not sanitary.

The practice of feeding in open hoppers, dishpans and the like, allows droppings to get into the mash feed. This spreads disease and causes a great deal of waste. Stagnant water left in the house for 24 hours, to three or four days at a time, is not a sanitary condition.

Birds which are affected with lice and mites become weakened and subject to disease. The following system used at the Colorado experiment station while birds are housed during the winter has proved very satisfactory, and we have little trouble with disease.

Dropping boards are cleaned three times a week or more and sprayed often with a spray consisting of 50 per cent crankcase oil and 50 per cent distillate or kerosene with one-half pint creosote disinfectant added to five gallons of the mixture. This spray is used from once a week to once a month, depending upon the amount needed. The dropping boards are oily from this spray. This helps in cleaning them during cold weather.

A good disinfectant mixed with water is used for nests and other parts of the house several times a year. For lice the perches are painted with nicotine sulphate four or five times a year, or more often if necessary. Whenever colds appear a good disinfectant is used in the water, and any birds appearing weak or showing a tendency to roup, are removed. All birds which become sick are killed. It is surprising how much the killing of a few diseased birds will save.

Sunlight for Poultry Flock Quite Essential

During the winter months the location and adjustment of windows in the laying house are very important. There should be windows in each end of the house so that sunlight will strike the entire floor some time during the day. Along the south wall should be a large number of windows, and it is preferable that these be made of a high grade glass substitute which permits the entrance of the maximum amount of ultra-violet ray. Muslin curtains and ordinary glass are not satisfactory for this purpose. These windows should be well fitted and should be kept clean as the ultra-violet ray does not penetrate through dust and dirt. Furthermore it is better that they be arranged so they can be taken down during the summer months and not subjected to weathering.

Adequate Ventilation Essential for Poultry

Adequate ventilation is important for a profitable poultry flock. Sufficient fresh air must be admitted to replace the moisture-laden air thrown off by the birds. It must be admitted so as to avoid drafts. The open front principle is used extensively in many sections. It has been determined that the openings in the front wall should equal approximately one-tenth of the floor area. To protect the flock during severe storms frames covered with a light weight of muslin may be used in the front openings.

Avoid Diseases

Raising strong healthy chicks is largely a problem of keeping them away from the infection and diseases which thrive in old poultry yards.

Experience proves that although the old birds are free from the effects of disease, they harbor many diseases which prove destructive to young chicks.

Wire screen floors have been used successfully for years by some poultrymen and their use is increasing rapidly.

Needs Shell Material

A hen producing 200 eggs a year must be supplied with sufficient calcium carbonate, so that after the loss that comes through digestion, she still will be able to deposit around the egg in the form of shell nearly three pounds of shell forming material. Such heavy calcium carbonate or egg-shell production demands serious consideration. Even though every other requirement is supplied, a deficiency of calcium carbonate will be limiting factor in production.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of good water.

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Phillips is the genuine, prescriptional product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

THE NEW ALL-ENAMEL

The Great Majestic

MANY NEW FEATURES FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE

Exclusive features and refinements of design that make the All-Enamol Majestic the last word in range efficiency and convenience.

You'll like the ready-polished, solid-plate cooking top which eliminates unnecessary lids and can be kept neat and shinning without polishing; the sanitary shelf, which replaces the old warming oven—a handy place to put dishes and pans while you are cooking; the smoke pipe, back of the range and out of sight, which has been built straight up from the bottom of the oven, insuring a strong steady draft and eliminating clogged pipes; the complete insulation which makes this range perfect for baking. You'll appreciate, too, the new features that make the All-Enamel Majestic easier to clean—removable oven door stakes, removable clean-out door and grate housing and many others. Don't miss seeing them.

The Majestic "PAY-AS-YOU-USE-IT" Plan

To make it possible for every housewife to own an All-Enamel Majestic, we have made special arrangements with the Majestic Manufacturing Company whereby this range may be bought on a "Pay-As-You-Use-It" plan. We would be glad to explain it to you in full.

The All-Enamel Majestic Is Now On Display In Our Store — Come In And See It Today!

Only the Majestic Manufacturing Company, with its years of experience, could have produced a range as fine as the All-Enamel Majestic . . . . The name MAJESTIC is its guarantee of highest quality. Come in and see it today!

DAIRY INDUSTRY NEEDS OUR HELP

MUST EAT MORE BUTTER TO STABILIZE INDUSTRY

A Quarter Ounce More A Day Will Put Butter Up Again

Unless eliminated in the near future, the present surplus of dairy products will prove dangerous to all efforts to stabilize and improve agricultural conditions, the Hancock County Creamery Association declared this week. They re-emphasized the remedy advocated by the National Dairy Council and agricultural leaders.

If each member of the rural communities of the country would eat one-half ounce more butter per day for the next two months, the surplus would be removed and the industry stabilized," the Creamery Association believes.

Extra butter in the diet would benefit every one. All food authorities agree, the Creamery Association said, that no one is eating enough dairy products for best health.

"It is now recognized by all scientists that butter supplies the substances necessary for growth and health and builds resistance," they pointed out. "Butter is also known to be the most economical and palatable form of food fat. Authorities in foods and feeding recomment in the interest of health, a daily consumption of at least one and one-half ounces of butter by each person.

Folks in this community should take immediate advantage of this opportunity of improving their health since it also means stabilizing one of our major industries. Eat more butter, cheese, and ice cream; drink more milk, now and in the future, and permanently secure dairying.

DAIRY SURPLUS MUST BE BROKEN UP BEFORE MAY

There Is A Great Danger Ahead For The Dairy Farmer

Farmers of Hancock County must win a race with time if they hope to receive an income from dairying in 1930 that compares with the figures of previous years, the Hancock County Creamery Association pointed out this week.

The great danger of the present surplus of dairy products, they said, lies in its continuance. If it lasts until May, the beginning of the flush period of production, the price the farmer will receive for his dairy products during the most productive period of the year will be far below that it was in 1929.

While this surplus will be dangerous unless removed, it can be very easily and successfully relieved, the Creamery Association believes. "All food authorities agree that we are not eating as much of dairy products as we should in the interest of our health. If some of our farmers are not eating butter they should begin at once in the interest of health and a stabilized industry—Nothing takes the place of butter on bread or in cook-

ORR IS CANDIDATE FOR OFFICE OF SHERIFF

Serving Hancock County As Deputy Sheriff

Orr, Deputy Sheriff, of this week places his announcement in The Times as a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Hancock County.

Orr has served faithfully and under Sheriff Wahlert, who last met death accidently. Mr. feels that he is well qualified for office, as he has had a great deal of experience the past year, in law enforcement and legal matters pertaining to the office of Sheriff. As a deputy at this time he is not eligible for the higher office and it will receive strong support at the June primaries.

ALBERS-ALBERS WEDDING WAS HELD SUNDAY

Reception For Couple Held At The George Albers Home Tuesday

Sunday, February 9th, 1930, at 5:30 p. m. occured the marriage of Miss Sophie Albers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Albers, of Swaledale, Iowa, to Mr. Theodore Albers, better known as "Ted", so nof Mr. and Mrs. George Albers of Klemme, Iowa.

The Bride is the oldest daughter of their family. She is a well qualified young lady in the occupation of housekeeping.

She was attired in a gown of pink georgette crepe and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations.

The Groom is the second oldest son of the family. He is a well known young man of Klemme and vicinity. He is highly respected by his many friends. He wore the conventional navy blue.

The sister of the Bride, Bertha, acted as bridesmaid, and wore a gown of green georgette crepe.

The brother of the groom, Lubbe, acted as best man and he was attired in a navy blue suit.

These young people were married by Rev. Muller of Rockwell. There were about sixty relatives and friends present at the wedding.

After the ceremony a bountious six o'clock dinner was served.

Many beautiful gifts were received. The evening was spent in a very sociable way.

Reception Held At Klemme

Tuesday evening, February 11th, a reception was held for the newly weds at the grom's parents. About one hundred relatives and friends were present. They also received many useful gifts here. The evening was enjoyed by everyone. At a late hour refreshments consstng of sandwiches, coffee, pickles, ice cream and cakes were served.

The young couple will start house keeping March 1st on a farm east of Klemme.

HARLOW HELPS AND DOROTHY MARSHALL MARRIED

Reception Held At Idle Hour Last Evening For Newly Weds

Wednesday afternoon, at 2:00 p. m., February 12, 1930, at the Methodist parsonage at Garner, occured the marriage of Mr. Harlow Helps and Miss Dorothy Marshall; the ceremony being performed by Rev. C. H. Van Metre. Miss Dorothy Helps, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Ernest Pringnitz, acted as best man.

Following the ceremony at Garner the party drove to Mason City where a wedding dinner was enjoyed and later a picture show was taken in, before the party returned to Klemme.

Both of the contracting parties come from the best families in our community. They have a wide circle of friends and are popular. The Groom is an industrious young man of fine character and has taken up farming as his vocation, of which he is very successful. He attended the Clarion schools. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Helps of Avery township.

The Bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Marshall, of Liberty township. She attended the Klemme high school. She is a young lady of ability and especially well versed in the arts of home-making.

Reception Held At Theatre

In the evening a reception was held at the Idle Hour theatre in Klemme and dancing was enjoyed by a large number until a late hour. The many friends who attended showered the young couple with all kinds of useful gifts.

About March 1st Mr. and Mrs. Helps will begin housekeeping on a farm near the Helps home in Avery township.

It's Name

In a kindergarten class, flags were shown, and in answer to a question, little girl gave the response that was expected of her: "This is the flag of my country."

"And what is the name of your country?" was the next question.

"'Tis of thee," was the prompt reply.

SCOUTING IN NORTH IOWA AREA COUNCIL

SCOUT LEADERSHIP TRAINING IN NORTH IOWA COUNCIL

Being Another Article Written By W. Earl Hall, Globe Gazette

The ultimate success of any venture depends upon the degree of training of the leadership. The Boy Scouts of America recognize this fact and have instituted a course of training for all Scouters which is known as 'The Five Year Training Program."

This course of training is so constructed that it takes the Scouter (adult) through the technical side of Scouting and then instructs these leaders in boy nature, the theory of teaching, the use of games, the values of nature study, etc.

The first step, known as "The Elements of Scoutmastership" gives technical instruction and teaching methods. It has been conducted three times in the North Iowa Area Council as an area-wide course and also as a District course. It is being conducted in four of the five districts this winter and began during the week of January 30th in District Five.

The second step, known as "The Principles of Scoutmastership" has been conducted once as an area-wide course with an enrollment of 125 men. It deals with the theory of Scouting, teaching methods, boy nature and kindred subjects. The course is twelve sessions in length and is conducted one night each week.

The third step is a First Aid Course conducted in cooperation with the American Red Gross. It is also twelve sessions course. A Scouter who successfully completes the First Aid Course has qualified for the Advanced certificate in American Red Cross First Aid.

A First Aid Course is being conducted this winter by the North Iowa Area Council. It is an area-wide course, held each Thursday evening in Mason City, and began last Thursday, January 30th, at 7:00 p. m. Enrollments for this course still continue to come in.

Two additional specialization courses are needed to complete the training under the Five-Year plan. These may be Archery, Map-Making, Camping, Life Saving, or something of a similar nature. It is also required that the Scouter spend a total of fourteen days in a Council Boy Scout Camp and that he act as a leader in one of the above mentioned courses. Upon the completion of the above training and five years service as a Scoutmaster, or three years as a Scoutmaster and two as a Deputy Commissioner, he is presented with the Scoutmaster's Key; a 14-karat solid gold arch on which is superimposed the badge of Scouting. This, to the adult in Scouting, can be likened to the Eagle Badge to the Scout, the highest award. A like Key is also being prepared for other Scouters.

Scout leaders' training is one of the functions of the North Iowa Area Council, Boy Scouts of America. The work of training is conducted by the Scout Executives and qualified volunteer leaders under the direction and supervision of the area leadership training committee, of which F. T. Vasey, Superintendent of Mason City Schools, is chairman; Dr. A. F. Bronson of Nora Springs, represents District II; Jack Logan of Eagle Grove, District III; Father Richards of Forest City, District IV, D. J. Kelley, superintendent of the Clear Lake Schools, District V; with A. J. Marshall and Harry B. Russell members at large.

P. T. A. PROGRAM ON FEBRUARY 20

PARENTS WILL SEE STUDENTS IN THEIR CLASS WORK

This Novel Meeting Will Be Held On Next Thursday Evening

On Thursday night of next week, February 20th, our students and teachers will put on the P. T. A. program in the form of class work. The pupils to recite in these evening classes will be excused between 2:00 and 3:00 o'clock Thursday afternoon and all parents and friends interested can hear them recite that evening between 7:30 and 9:00 o'clock. Let us know just what subjects you are interested in, parents, and recitations will be conducted in those branches for your benefit. In an effort to raise funds for spelling prizes in our local contest a charge for refreshments will be made and we hope all may come with a first rate appetite and plenty of change. These evening classes will be something new but they will be over before the sand man comes. Don't forget the date and your change. Remember the first classes will be called at 7:30, and the date is Thursday evening, Feb. 20th.

K. H. S. Won Three Seconds

The Sub-County Contest at Klemme last Thursday night ended in victories for Garner and Klemme with Garner getting the Lion's share as they won three firsts and Klemme three seconds.

Clarice Wellemeyer will represent us in the final round at Garner on Thursday night of this week in the Oratorical class; Margaret Gates in the Dramatic class, and Mitchell Bock in the Humorous. Both Margaret and Mitchel are only Freshmen and should be commended for the showing they have made this year. As Clarice is in her Senior year this will be her last appearance for our local school. All three are fine students. We are glad they have been disposed to take this additional training not demanded of them but nevertheless of great value to anyone aspiring to positions of leadership.

School Masters Met Here

The membership of the Hancock County Schoolmasters' Club were on hand at their monthly meeting last Saturday and this time in Klemme at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Keraus, who are boarding the local superintendent. All sorts of good things were brought by the families represented and these added to what Mrs. Keraus had prepared for us were before us at the lunch hour and devoured with relish by all. The superintendents in attendance were Mr. Wolf of Kanawha, Mr. Mounce of Garner, Mr. Thies of Britt, Mr. Hunt of Hayfield, Mr. Rankin of Crystal Lake, Mr. Baker of Corwith, Mr. Baggs, Co. Supt., and the local schoolmaster. All from out of town brought wives and some quite a few children. All seemed to have dismissed dull care and were in a very pleasant mood. We are glad Mrs. Keraus made it possible for us to invite them, to Klemme.

After the lunch hour the schoolmasters retired to our school rooms for a business session. A musical festival was planned for our county and the date set. It is to be held at Britt on Friday evening, April 25. The program will consist of ensemble work by school bands, orchestras, and glee clubs, both boys and girls, in addition to some special numbers to be provided by individual schools. More will be announced later concerning this new venture.

Tournament Drawings Made

The drawings were made for the Hancock County Tournament, but it was decided to maintain silence as to what they were until next week. The grade boys will begin their first round on Friday afternoon, Feb. 21, when there will be three games. The high school games will start at 7:00 p. m. the same evening. Three will be played, the first at 7:00, the second at 8:00 and the third at 9:00. Grade games will be resumed on Saturday morning at 9:00 a. m. folowed by high school games. There will be a game or two Saturday afternoon, but Junior College teams, to which officials and players will be admitted without charge. The finals of both grade and high school tournaments will be played Saturday night, Feb. 22. Admission to each session but one will be 50 cents and 35 cents. The admission to the grade games on Friday afternoon will be 25 cents to all.

Won Two Games, Lost One

On last Friday night our grade team boys were decisively defeated by the grade team from Britt; the scor being 34 to 6.

Our second string won their game from Goodell's first team by the score of 16 to 9. Our first team defeated the Britt High School second team by the score of 32 to 11.

Swaledale To Play Here

On Friday night of this week our high school basket ball team will play their final game of the season, prior to the tournament, on their home floor. A big crowd should be here to see this game as it is to be with a fast and hard fighting team. We refer to Swaldale. We took their measure once before this season on their own floor and they will be here Friday night determined to stage a comeback and humble our lads. They make us feel a little gloomy on the eve of our county tournament but we are hoping for better luck. But it will be a great game we are certain.

GOLL-MOBERLY WEDDING WAS HELD WEDNESDAY MORNING

Popular Young Klemme Couple Will Reside On Farm

Wednesday morning, February 12, 1930, at 8:30 o'clock, occured the marriage of Mr. Alvin Goll to Miss Golda Moberly, at the Reformed parsonage, officiated by Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch.

The Bride was attired in a beautiful gown of salmon color silk and was atended by Miss Emma Goll, as Bridesmaid, who wore a dress of maize color. Arthur Schlawin acted as Best Man.

Shortly after the wedding ceremony the young couple left n their car on a wedding trip to visit relatives and friends in Illinois. On their return to Klemme they will go to house keeping on a farm near here, on the place now occupied by Paul Goll.

The Brde is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Moberly of this city. She is a graduate of the local schools. She is a popular young lady and has a pleasing personality and is a young lady of real ability.

The Groom is a son of Mr. Gottlieb Goll. He is a popular young man who has taken up farming as his work and has already demonstrated his ability along that line and for him we predict success. He is a clean cut young man of excellent character.

We join their many friends in extending our congratulations.

BOARD EXPLAINS WHY ROSS WAS APPOINTED

James Ross, Sheriff, Will Not Be A Candidate At Primaries

The Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, in making the appointment to fill the vacancy caused by the unfortunate death of E. H. Wahlert, in their appointment of James S. Ross of Britt, a former Sheriff, made the following statement:

"Mr. Ross served the County as Sheriff during the period of the World War and devoted his time and efforts most conscientiously. We believe that the appointment of Mr. Ross will meet with unanimous aproval in Hancock County by all who know of the plendid service rendered by him in the past. Mr. Ross will not be a candidate for renomination before the June Primaries. The Board believe that it would give any person who may desire to be a candidate an unfair advantage over other candidates. As to the qualification of Mr. Ross, his record speaks for itself, and we feel that the citizens of Hancock County could not be better served than by the appointment of Mr. Ross to this office."

A FAMILY DOCTOR'S LAXATIVE IS BEST

Your health is too important! You cannot afford to experiment with your delicate bowels when coated tongue, bad breath, headache, gas, nausea, feverishness, lack of appetite, no energy, etc., warn of constipation. This applies not only to grown people, but more particularly to children. That's why a family doctor's laxative is always the safe choice.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is prepared today under strict laboratory supervision from fresh laxative herbs and other pure ingredients, and exactly according to Dr. Caldwell's original prescription.

Today, millions of families rely on Dr. Caldwell's judgment in the selection of their laxative. For Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in bottles ready for use, sold in all drugstores, is now the largest selling laxative in the world!

Modern World Too Keen on Material Matters?

The ancients said: "Knowledge is virtue"; the moderns say: "Knowledge is power"; so wealth comes, and peace departs. The body prospers and the soul decays. For what does it profit a man to gain the whole world, and lose his honor, his sense of beauty, his manners and his taste, his spiritual creativeness as artist, poet, statesman, philosopher and saint? The industrialists, the traders, the financiers never create, they only accumulate and exchange; they are busy transferring money from other men's pockets into their own. Their achievement lies in heaping things up, in making large sales, large fortunes, large buildings; never in transmuting quantity into quality by breathing into matter the soul of beauty and form.—Will Durant in the Thinker.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

W. H. Taft, Ill, Quits as Chief Justice and Hughes Named to Succeed Him.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, returning to Washington from Asheville a very sick man, sent in his resignation as chief justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. It was at once accepted by President Hoover with expressions of deep regret and of sympathy for Mr. Taft's condition, and Charles Evans Hughes was appointed his successor.

Though the entire matter seemed sudden, it was learned that the President had been informed of Mr. Taft's intention several weeks before and that Mr. Hughes had conferred with Mr. Hoover several times before accepting the appointment.

Mr. Taft's physicians admitted that he was seriously ill, and though toward the close of the week his condition appeared to have improved, they held out little hope for his recovery. They said that for some years he had had very high blood pressure associated with general arteriosclerosis and myocarditis and also had a chronic cystitis. President and Mrs. Hoover called on him the day after his return from the South, and so did several of the Supreme court justices. There was a constant stream of other callers at the Taft residence but of course most of them merely left messages of greeting and cheer. Mr. Taft's retirement closed a public career unparelleled in this country. For nearly fifty years he served the people, in offices ranging from an assistant prosecuting attorney to President of the republic and head of its highest tribunal. He was the first civil governor general of the Philippine islands and was secretary of war under President Roosevelt. He was appointed by President Wilson as chief justice in 1921. In accordance with a law passed at the last session of congress, he retires with his full salary of $20,500 a year.

Mr. Hughes presumably will take office when the Supreme court reconvenes on February 24. His appointment is the climax of a record in the public service almost as remarkable as that of his predecessor. He has held some of the highest offices within the reach of an American citizen, having fallen short only of the Presidency, for which he was the unsuccessful Republican candidate in 1916 against Woodrow Wilson. To make that campaign he resigned as associate justice of the Supreme court, to which position he had been appointed by President Roosevelt in 1910. About a year ago he was selected as a judge of the world court and spent last summer sitting at The Hague. From March 4, 1921, to March 4, 1925, he was secretary of state in the Harding and Coolidge cabinets, retiring voluntarily.

As a matter of propriety, Charles E. Hughes, Jr., will now resign as solicitor general of the United States, and it has been suggested that President Hoover may select as his successor Mr. Taft's son, Robert A. Taft, who is now district attorney at Cincinnati.

PASCUAL ORTIZ RUBIO was inaugurated president of Mexico Wednesday with simple ceremonies, and as he was leaving the national stadium an attempt was made to assassinate him, which was quite in accord with Mexican tradition. A young man standing behind a file of soldiers at the gate of honor emptied his revolver into the presidential car. Ortiz Rubio was shot through the cheek, the bullet lodging in the left jaw. His wife and niece and his military aide were slightly wounded, as was the chauffeur who nevertheless stepped on the accelerator and carried his passengers swiftly to a Red Cross hospital. A few hours later the surgeons announced that the president was out of danger.

The assassin was seized by the police and said he was Daniel Flores of San Luis Potosi state and was a follower of Jose Vasconcelos, defeated candidate for the presidency. He refused to say why he had tried to kill Ortiz Rubio, but the authorities were satisfied that it was a plot of the "Vasconcelistas." This was the view, also, of Portes Gil, retiring president, who told newspaper men that Senora de Ortiz had received an unsigned letter a few days ago which said her husband would not live to be inaugurated.

Only a week before the shooting the federal district authorities announced they had frustrated one such Vasconcelista plot with the arrest of nineteen persons who allegedly planned to assassinate both Senor Ortiz Rubio and Senor Portes Gil and seize the government. If that was the plan in this instance, events did not develop as was hoped, for Mexico City, except for an air of anxiety for the president's safety, was quiet with little or no indication that anything unusual had happened.

PRELIMINARY negotiations among the naval conferees in London did not proceed very smoothly. Prime Minister MacDonald announced that Great Britain sought the abolition of submarines, and immediately thereafter Henry L. Stimson, head of the American delegation, made it known that this position was supported by the United States and that he would propose the abolition of underwater war craft at the plenary session set for February 11. The French delegation at once met and examined the question and then declared flatly that they would not consider the proposal. It was understood that Premier Tardieu at the plenary session would meet it with a speech in which he would say that France considers the submarine as most necessary for the defense of the French coast though France does not want it as an offensive weapon and believes that submarine warfare should be "humanized."

Italy is willing to abolish submarines if France will do so, but it insists that Italians must have submersibles if her northern neighbors have them. Thus the Italian action will be governed by the French attitude.

The American delegation made public its plan for reduction and limitation, stating that it provided for immediate parity with Great Britain in every class of ship in the navy. Equality in battleships would be secured by abandonment of five by the British and three by the Americans. The cruisers would be so apportioned that the British would have an apparent advantage of 12,000 tons, which the Americans could equalize by including the number of their smaller cruisers. Critics of this plan declared it was a surrender to the demands of the British.

Delegates from the British dominions protested to Mr. MacDonald that the conference was making unnecessarily slow progress, and he therefore conferred with the other heads of delegations and they decided to speed things up. The first committee, which includes all the delegates, took up on Thursday the matter of the method of limitation, seeking a solution for the controversy between the global and categorical methods. London correspondents, however, said it was not likely any real progress would be made toward fixing tonnage figures until near the end of the month. This is due to the fact that the Japanese have a general election on February 20, and the Japanese are stalling vigorously on the figures until the present government can get settled in the saddle or a new government formed.

WHEN Maj. Gen. Herbert Crosby, chief of cavalry of the United States army, retires on March 21 next, he will undertake the task of making the city of Washington a model for the rest of the country so far as liquor and crime are concerned. He has been selected by President Hoover to direct the police, fire and traffic departments of the District of Columbia, and Mr. Hoover said the appointment "will be a guaranty to both the official and unofficial residents of the district, and especially to the nation at large, that the Capital shall be free of organized crime."

The police affairs of the District of Columbia have been under fire from members of congress for the last year or so. During that time there have been a wide variety of charges, including lax enforcement of the prohibition laws. General Crosby will succeed Proctor L. Dougherty as commissioner.

SAMUEL H. CHURCH, president of the Carnegie institute, proposed at a dinner of the eastern directors of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment that a new "liberal" party be formed by the wets, and while the idea was not indorsed at the meeting, it was decided that a nation-wide convention should be held in Baltimore in the spring. Leaders of the old parties and many prominent wets as well said the foes of prohibition would gain little or nothing by forming a new party. Those wets who are practical politicians believe they can accomplish much more by placing wet candidates in the field in three-cornered contests for the senate or the house. They think this might result in the election of wet Democrats and bring about a change in the policies of the Republican party.

REPRESENTATIVE C. L. BEEDY of Maine offered in the house an amendment to the Volstead act which would make possible the padlocking of places of business by public prosecutors in the absence of their owners, and it was generally accepted as an administration measure.

Beedy's bill provides that a district, state, county, or city attorney, failing to locate the owner of premises alleged to be a nuisance, may issue a "substitute" or dummy subpoena and, without serving it on the owner, may go into court and have his place padlocked. It also provides that the judge may speed up the case if his docket is congested by referring it to a master for proceedings under equity rules.

BY A vote of 48 to 6 the German reichsrath or national council of the states approved the Young plan, which has now gone to the reichstag for final discussions and disposition. The council also gave its approval to the separate German and American debt agreement. Bavaria's premier, Doctor Held, tried everything in his power to prevent the reichsrath from accepting the Young plan. He declared that the Young plan was based on the assumption that Germany was responsible for the war. Foreign Minister Julius Curtius countered by saying that Germany never has and never will sign a pact admitting war guilt.

ITALY greatly strengthened its position in central Europe last week by the signing of a treaty "of friendship, conciliation and judiciary regulation" with Austria. This, as a Rome correspondent says, means that post-war Austria's 7,000,000 inhabitants will be added to the circle of friends Italy has been cultivating in the Danubian states, and which, at present, includes Hungary and Bulgaria, plus the diminutive Adriatic monarchy of Albania. It means likewise that, besides burying the hatchet in South Tyrol, Italy extends her range of influence to the border lines of the little entente.

Austria, on the other hand, makes a noteworthy advance from her previous status of a political zero through this Italian alliance.

THROUGH Riga, Latvia, the world has learned that recently nearly five hundred former officers of the old Russian imperial navy have been put to death by the cheka or secret police. This massacre was ordered by Commissar Menshinski, chief of the cheka, and no reasons for his action have been given.

Because of the crisis in diplomatic relations between Moscow and Berlin and Paris, the Soviet foreign trade monopoly is contemplating a trade boycott of Europe and concentrating its European purchases in the United States, according to the Soviet trade delegate in Riga.

CONGRESS authorized the President to send a commission to Haiti to study conditions there, and Mr. Hoover last week was considering the make-up of that body. The commission, the President said, will be charged with the responsibility of recommending when and how the United States is to withdraw its military forces from the negro republic. It will also recommend the policy which this country should follow during the years that will elapse before American occupation ends.

Needless Pain!

The man who wouldn't drive his motorcar half a mile when it's out of order, will often drive his brain all day with a head that's throbbing.

Such punishment isn't very good for one's nerves! It's unwise, and it's unnecessary. A tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin will relieve a headache every time. So, remember this accepted antidote for pain, and spare yourself a lot of needless suffering. Read the proven directions and you'll discover many valuable uses for these tablets. For headaches; to check colds. To ease a sore throat and reduce the infection. For relieving neuralgic, neuritic, rheumatic pain.

People used to wonder if Bayer Aspirin was harmful. The doctors answered that question years ago. It is not. Some folks still wonder if it really does relieve pain. That's settled! For millions of men and women have found it does. To cure the cause of any pain you must consult your doctor; but you may always turn to Bayer Aspirin for immediate relief.

Twelve Years Mayor and Going Strong!

WHEN a man who has been mayor of a big city for twelve years finds out how to live, his words are worth listening to. Ex-Mayor E. N. Kirby of Abilene, Texas, discovered the simple way to health about ten years ago (he is now 64.)

"I am now a new man, and as active as a boy," says Mr. Kirby. "I feel fine all the time and rarely have an ache or a pain, although for twenty-five years I suffered with rheumatism, and sometimes was unable to stand or walk. I would not give up my simple health discovery—no, not for five thousand dollars in gold!" That discovery was Nujol!

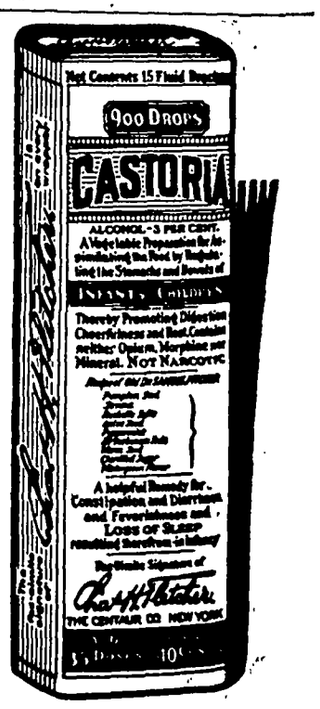
That's the wonderful thing about Nujol. Although it is not a medicine and contains absolutely no drugs, its harmless internal lubrication seems to make people feel better and look on the brighter side of life, whether they are old or young.

Of course you can understand why this is so: we all of us have natural poisons in our bodies that make us feel headachy, sick and low in our minds. Nujol, which is as tasteless and colorless as pure water, helps to absorb these and carry them away, easily, regularly as clock work.

Instead of drugging and irritating your body with pills, cathartics, laxatives, and other habit-forming drugs, give your body the internal lubrication which it needs, just as much as any other machine. After a few days you will be surprised at the difference in the way you feel. You can get Nujol in a sealed package in any drug store. Nujol may change your whole outlook on life. Get a bottle today and give yourself a chance to be well!

Hon. E. N. Kirby, for twelve years Mayor of Abilene, Texas, who has discovered secret of success.

When BABIES are upset



Baby ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea—a condition it is always important to check quickly. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready? There is nothing that can take the place of this harmless but effective remedy for children; nothing that acts quite the same, or has quite the same comforting effect on them.

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria; the genuine bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

BARTON'S DYANSHINE SHOE POLISH

IT isn't the pipe that causes these embarrassing moments, Mr. Puff. It's the tobacco. Isn't it time you discovered Sir Walter Raleigh—patron saint of pipe smokers, who discovered how good a pipe can be? His favorite smoking mixture really is milder. It really is just about the richest, mellowest, mildest blend of choice Burleys you've ever smoked.

How to Take Care of Your Pipe
(Hint No. 2) When breaking in a new pipe, smoke your first few pipefuls slowly. Don't let your pipe get hot. The Golden Bough

Over one hundred years ago an orange tree in Bahia, Brazil, developed a freak limb bearing seedless fruit, since called navel oranges. This new orange was propagated by budding, and was finally brought to the United States in 1870.

Two small trees of the new variety were sent to California in 1873, and it is principally from these that the modern California orange industry has developed. The present shipment of California oranges requires the services of some 55,000 freight cars annually, and the crop fills 25,000,000 boxes.—Wall Street Journal.

Sympathy or Sarcasm

"Just imagine; my wife tells me she trusts me only as long as she has me in sight."

"What a pity that she should also be nearsighted."

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

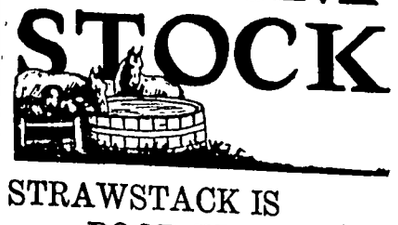
FARM STOCK



STRAWSTACK IS POOR PROTECTION

Hogs Huddle Up and Get Too Warm in Winter.

"Any port in a storm, of course. But a straw pile is one of the poorest of all possible poor ports for the hogs when a blizzard or a sudden cold spell hits the farm," says J. W. Wuichet, extension specialist in swine growing, for the Ohio State university.

"Letting the hogs burrow into a straw stack for shelter from the bad weather is better than leaving them to freeze to death, but not much better," says Wuichet. "The reason is that when hogs huddle into straw stacks they pile up in heaps, to keep warm they get too warm, and when they get out for feed or any other reason, are liable to pneumonia and other diseases.

"Even more important is the fact that such a refuge is highly insanitary, and a hog is more susceptible to unsanitary conditions than most other farm animals. When hogs pile up under a straw stack their skins are caked with filth and get into bad condition, and their general health is affected.

"Much better have some sort of houses, either central sheds or individual houses. In extremely cold weather bank these houses with straw to keep out the wind and conserve the body heat of the hogs, but be sure to leave sufficient ventilation."

Practical Plan to Feed Pigs in Creep or Pen

Fall pigs thrive much better if they start eating grain before they are weaned, according to W. L. Robinson of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station. When this is done there is no noticeable setback at weaning time.

Pigs will start eating grain when three or four weeks old but to do this the pigs must be able to eat unmolested by the sows. This is easily accomplished by providing a creep which consists of a pen with an opening through which the pigs can go but which will hold the sows back.

A good ration for the young pigs is made of 64 parts of corn, 22.5 parts of ground oats, 8 parts of tankage, 4 parts of linseed oil meal, and 1.5 parts of minerals. If the pasture is short or no green feed is available add about 4 parts of ground alfalfa or clover hay, or the leaves of either hay.

Alfalfa for Horses Fed in Balanced Ration Good

Alfalfa hay is good horse feed, according to A. O. Rhoad of the New York state college of agriculture, providing it is fed in a balanced ration. Corn and alfalfa make a balanced ration while oats, barley, peas and bran that are high in protein would provide too much protein to feed alfalfa as the only roughage. In this case there should be some other hay such as timothy with the alfalfa.

The firsts cutting is considered the best for horses. The usual recommendation of cutting alfalfa when one-third in bloom is best for cattle, but it is better for horses if cut when in the later stages of maturity, Rhoad states.

Live Stock Facts

Docking lambs up to two months of age is practiced.

Keep pregnant mares out of corn stalk fields. Provide them with plenty of pure, clean water.

Normally one-third of the spring pigs die before they are ten weeks old, or of weaning age.

Many castrate the ram lambs at the same time docking is done, but the preferred age for castrating is about four weeks.

* * *

Feed the mare generously on sound whole oats, bran and mixed clover, or timothy hay. Avoid moldy hay or silage, damaged grain, woody, weathered fodder, dusty or rusty straw, or hay containing ergot.

The mare in foal should be worked lightly or abundantly exercised every day. Exercise is absolutely necessary. She should occupy a roomy, clean, well lighted, and perfectly ventilated box stall.

* * *

Long-legged, narrow-backed hogs do not have economical feeding quality, and for that reason have been forced into the discard.

The brood sows which realize the greatest profits are those which are capable of raising two large litters of strong, healthy pigs each year.

* * *

The ideal time for docking is when the lambs are ten days or two weeks old. At this age the job is simple and can be done with little risk of serious bleeding and little pain to the lamb.

FARM POULTRY

PAYING POULTRY FLOCK IS GROWN

Spring-Hatched Pullets Carefully Developed Are Best.

Developing the spring-hatched pullets from the time the chicks leave the incubator until the pullets are placed in the laying house is the pathway to profits in the poultry industry.

"The object of this development is to have pullets of stamina, bone and vigor and fully up to the standard weight of the breed," says R. S. Dearstyne, poultryman at State college. "At first the proper mashes are needed until finally the laying mash containing 20 per cent of protein is given. The young pullets must have an abundance of succulent green feed especially, as the grass on the range gets old and tough. When placing birds in the laying house, do this about two weeks before they start laying so that they may become accustomed to their surroundings."

Nesting material should be changed often, runs cleared of litter, perch poles scraped and freed of mites, and the birds examined for internal parasites. A minimum of four feet of floor space to each bird is needed in the house, and at least two feet of perch pole for each three birds. Dampness in the house and damp litter is to be avoided if the birds are not to have roup and colds. Fresh, clean water is necessary and the mash hoppers are to be kept filled at all times. Oyster shell and grit needs to be kept before the birds, and grain fed twice each day with the heaviest amount at evening.

Mr. Dearstyne says that the poultryman will do well to spend about ten minutes each day in general observation of his flock. This will help him to find any lack of thriftiness or any indication of disease. Birds roughly handled, irregularly fed and watered, infested with parasites or neglected in other ways will not prove profitable.

Caponizing Profitable Way to Market Poultry

Caponizing is one of the most profitable ways of marketing late-hatched cockerels. In an experiment last year fifty June hatched cockerels were caponized. The birds were of dual-purpose breeds and caponized when they had reached a weight of 12 ounces to 2½ pounds. These birds were sold the following April and averaged six pounds each, dressed for market. They brought 35 cents a pound, or an average of $2.10 per bird. The feed cost of producing these birds was 84 cents each, and with an additional charge of 10 cents for dressing and picking, the net profit was $1.16 per bird.

Another poultryman caponized 191 barred Plymouth Rocks last summer. When sold their average weight was 7.7 pounds each, and they brought 43 cents per pound. The total cost of growing these capons—chicks, feed and labor—was placed at $366.14. There were 176 birds at selling time, which brought a total of $561.14, leaving a net profit of 85 cents per bird.

Poultry Notes

Winter egg profits will depend largely on the care given pullets.

Hatch the chicks early so that the pullets are mature for winter egg production.

Don't forget the importance of fresh, juicy greens for both the baby chicks and old hens.

The first half of April is the ideal time to hatch chicks of smaller breeds such as the Leghorns.

* * *

Giving hens 12 hours of light increases egg production at the season when the prices are high.

When calcium carbonate is not available in sufficient quantities, hens lay soft-shelled eggs or no eggs at all.

Making it easier for the hens to consume large quantities of mash aids in the production of eggs. At least 10 linear feet of double hopper space should be provided for 100 hens.

Culling should not be considered as a substitute for correct management of a flock of hens. Even the good producers may cease laying in the summer if proper care is neglected.

To carry on heavy production hens must have strong bodies and a good supply of nourishing feeds.

Good producing hens may become thin if not fed sufficiently. Total feed consumption can be increased usually by giving a moistened mash once a day throughout the summer months.

Give free range to the birds which are to be used as breeders this spring. They should also be fed an abundance of whole yellow corn.

* * *

Breeding, selection, and poultry culture are employed by alert poultrymen to meet the shifting market demands for poultry and eggs.

Solves Problem of Good Bread Making

Uses New-Type Flour, "Kitchen-tested"

Mrs. Maggie Wilcox
Sacramento, Cal.

Mrs. Wilcox Puts Gold Medal "Kitchen-tested" Flour To The Test. Wins Blue Ribbon For Home Baking At California State Fair

"I feel that I put Gold Medal 'Kitchen-tested' Flour to the test," says Mrs. Wilcox, "when I entered my bread at the recent California State Fair and won 1st Blue Ribbon Prize. Since good flour is essential to successful baking I use only 'Gold Medal' for baking bread, cakes or pie crust.'

Thousands Of Women Now Use Only This New-Type Flour

THEY have learned there is no "guess work" about perfect results—every time they get "Blue Ribbon" cakes and pastries, bread and biscuits.

They use a new-type flour for all baking purposes—GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour—that simplifies baking remarkably and banishes the cause of most baking failures.

Failures, experts found, were mostly due to the fact that two sacks of the same flour often acted differently, even with the same recipe . . . it was not uniform in oven action.

So now all GOLD MEDAL Flour is "Kitchen-tested" before it comes to you. As each batch comes through the mill it is tested by actual baking—bread, cakes, biscuits, pastries—in an oven just like yours. Only flour which acts the same perfect way every time is allowed to go out to you. Thus you know in advance exactly what your results will be.

BRITT BOYS SHOWED POOR SPORTSMANSHIP HERE

Evidently Angered By Defeat They Destroyed School Property

Evidently angered by the defeat received in the basket ball game here Friday night, the Britt high school boys sought revenge by pulling up seats in one of the class rooms which they were using as a dressing room.

Three of four seats were ripped up and tiped over, which splintered up the floor and several new boards had to be laid in again. A folding chair was thrown out a window and smashed and several library books were taken from the cupboard and tossed out into the mud, and later found in a car.

At a meeting of the superintendents here Saturday the damage was viewed and the Britt superintendent agreed that Britt would pay the bill.

There is absolutely no excuse for such actions. The guilty boys in this affair should be punished. A lay-off from athletics for a year in this case would probably cure them from atempting this again.

We hope Klemme boys will never be guilty of such poor sportsmanship, and if they were, we certainly would watn to have them barred from athletics.

MRS. A. D. WHITE BURIED AT GOODELL SUNDAY

Funeral services for Mrs. A. D. White, who died last Thursday, Feb. 6, at the home of her daughter in Torrington, Wyo., were held Sunday at the U. B. Church in Goodell, with Rev. Bainbridge officiating.

Margaret Ann Busnck was born in New Brunswick, N. J. July 3, 1858 and departed from this life on February 6, 1930 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Gordon Sherman at Torrington, Wyo., at the age of 71 years, 6 months and 3 days.

Her early home was at Oxford, Wisconsin, from which place she came to Iowa in a covered wagon, drawn by ox teams.

August 2, 1876 she was married to Mr. A. D. White, who passed away June 5, 1925. She leaves to mourn her death besides her children, one sister, Mrs. Sadie Moneaghan of Spokane, Wash., and one grandson, Albert White. The children are: Mrs. Ed. Hughes, of Belmond, Iowa; A. R. White of Klemme, Iowa; Mrs. Gordon Sherman of Torrington, Wyo., and Miss Mayme White at home.

Mrs. White was well known thruout the community as a kind, loving woman and she will be greatly missed by her many friends, who extend sympathy to the bereaevd ones.

LITTLE ELL BABY BURIED AT KLEMME TODAY

Mrs. Leo Ell's little baby died and the funeral services were held at Mason City today at 1:00 o'clock. Burial was made in the Klemme cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Hanson, who are the grandparents of the child, attended the services.

Mr. Leo Ell died a few weeks ago and was buried in Klemme.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended to Mrs. Ell and the bereaved relatives.

RECEPTION HELD FOR MR. AND MRS. DONALD NEWBERGER

A reception for Mr. and Mrs. Donald Newberger, who have been away on a honeymoon trip of a few weeks, was held Monday night on the farm where they will live, the place vacated by Chris Back, known as the Henry Josten farm.

The reception was attended by both old and young, neighbors and friends and a fine time was enjoyed and a delicious lunch served at a late hour.

A kitchen shower was given Mr. and Mrs. Newberger, and other gifts presented.

SWANSON ADDS NEW EQUIPMENT TO HATCHERY

Those Interested In Poultry Are Invited To Visit At Anytime

Albert Swanson, proprietor of Swanson's Leghorn Yards, poultry-raiser and operator of a large hatchery, has added both to his folck and to his hatchery equipment.

Mr. Swanson has increased his flock of Leghorns to over 1,000. He has installed another electric plant at his hatchery which insures him of beter production of god chicks.

Mr. Swanson invites any who are interested in poultry raising to inspect his equipment and to see his brooding and feeding system to start chicks.

Chance For Kiddies To Get Some Fine Pets

Albert says he is kept so busy with his poultry and hatchery business that he has not the time to devote to the care of his Chinchilla rabbits. He intends to dispose of all of them, which includes both old and young rabbits. Here is a good chance for the children to procure some fine pets cheap, and also to make some money raising rabbits.

Around Orchard

CUT FIRE-BLIGHT CANKERS AT ONCE

Best to Fight Disease Before Outbreak Occurs.

The time to fight the fire-blight menace is before the outbreak which may occur any season, says K. G. Parker of the plant pathology department of Cornell university, who cites the loss of three and one-fourth million bushels of apples and pears in New York during the 1925 season as the result of a bad outbreak.

From now until March is the best time of year to cut out bright cankers. These can be detected by the sunken and darkened appearance of the diseased area. A general recommendation is that all diseased and dead wood be removed regardless of the cause.

When the canker extends less than halfway around the trunk or branch, it may be cleaned out. The diseased bark is cut away with two or three inches of healthy bark on the sides and from four to six inches above and below the canker. The bark at the margin of the wound should be cut at right angles to the wood, and the wound should be painted at the upper and lower ends to insure rapid healing. A sharp farrier's knife is good for cleaning out a canker.

If the work is done before the middle of March no disinfectant will be necessary. After that time all wounds should be thoroughly disinfected. One part of mercuric cyanide dissolved in five hundred parts of water has proved most satisfactory, according to Mr. Parker.

After a careful removal of cankers the orchard should be gone through a second time for cankers which are sure to be overlooked the first time. Then the winter work should be followed by inspections and cutting during the growing season, especially with susceptible apple varieties, as Wagner and Alexander, and young pear and apple trees. After apple trees are ten years old, blight infections usually die out before they reach the larger wood.

Fire blight, says Mr. Parker, is a community problem and the neighbor's orchard or the trees along the road may be a menace to the home orchard; all should co-operate to control it. Remove all cankers that can be seen this winter, remove fruit spurs and sucker growth and burn the brush and a good start will be made in the control of fire-blight.

Time to Remove Mulch From Strawberry Bed

The proper time to remove a mulch from the strawberry bed is in the spring after heavy freezing and thawing is over, and just about the time that plant growth starts under the mulch. About two-thirds of the mulch should be removed in-between the rows. The amount which is left will help keep down the weeds, conserve the moisture, and keep the berries from being sandy after rains. The two-thirds that is taken off and placed between the rows will become matted down during picking time as the pickers walk up and down the rows, and it will be found a great benefit at that time in conserving the moisture and keeping the ground from becoming hard and packed between the rows. Growers who practice mulching their plants and placing in-between the rows the two-thirds that they remove, find that they have larger and more berries. If the mulch is used for no other purpose than this, it will be found a great benefit and some growers who do not get their berries mulched in the fall, do so in the early spring, because of the benefit derived from this placing of this straw between the rows.

To Prune Successfully Is Difficult Operation

Every branch which is pruned away must be cut off from the tree so that a slight shoulder remains on the trunk, says the American Home. When this is removed the wound produced is far too large, and it heals with difficulty.

Cutting off the branch above the shoulder is just as bad for it leaves a stump which decays, the decay entering the main trunk and producing heart decay of the entire tree. When cutting off a large branch always cut the lower side first so that bark will not be ripped off when the branch falls down.

After a slight cut has been made on the under side, cut the branch at the top and paint the wound, if it is large, with shellac dissolved in alhocol or cover with tree wax. Tar and oil paints are not well adapted for closing the wounds for the new bark has difficulty in growing over this surface.

Control Field Mice

Good cultivation of both young and old orchards from early spring until about the middle of July or August first, will not only tend to prevent serious injury by field mice but will usually do much toward making the trees more vigorous and healthy and consequently more profitable. Trash, litter, dead grass and weeds which may form a harbor for the meadow mouse should be kept away from the tree trunks. Some protection for the trees should be afforded.

Control Erosion by Deep Plowing

Also Helps to Keep Hillsides Planted in Hay and Pasture Crops.

Erosion of the soil not only cuts up many hilly farms with gullies, "washes" or ravines, but it also causes the washing away of much valuable plant food.

Erosion depends upon four things—the distribution of the rainfall, character of the soil, the slope, and the vegetation.

Erosion can be prevented in many instances by increasing the absorbing power of the soil through deep plowing and subsurface drainage, managing the surface of side hills so as to cause the water, when it must run on the surface, to flow through channels of the least possible fall, and keeping hillsides in hay and pasture as much as possible.

It is advisable when plowing hillsides to work crosswise of the slope rather than up and down and it is best to throw the furrow slice up hill, as this returns the soil to a certain extent as used, and on account of the position of the furrow slice permits a larger amount of the water to find its way into the soil than is the case when the furrow slice is turned down hill. A reversible or side-hill plow may be used to advantage. Cultivation should be practiced along the hillside as much as possible rather than up and down, and any small ditch into which water from the cross-rows runs should be protected by grass or by sowing oats.

Hillsides can be further protected by alternating long narrow strips of cultivated crops with grain and hay. Terraces and channels may be developed at intervals on steep hillsides to control the flow of the water when cultivated crops are to be grown.

Ravines and water courses can be protected by stones which to a large extent prevent the removal of the soil, or by grass, the roots of which hold the soil. Sometimes flumes of wood or metal are used in places where the fall of the ditches is steepest. Occasionally the course of the ditch is dammed with wire and brush which catches and holds the soil.

Overdo Evening Feeding Rather Than Underdo It

It is better to overdo the matter of evening feeding a little than to slight it. If a little grain is left in the litter, it will be eagerly scratched out in the morning.

Great care should be taken, however, so to feed that the straw is scratched absolutely free of grain at least once a day. In following this particular routine this should be the condition at noon.

The really skilled feeder is the one who so handles the ration that he constantly piques the appetite of his fowls, making them consume large amounts of feed with relish, yet never giving quite all they would like to consume.

Commercial Fertilizer Boosted Michigan Crops

A recent survey in Michigan showed the advantage of the use of commercial fertilizer on five staple crops. From one hundred to seven hundred farmers were interviewed in respect to the experiences they had with each crop. The addition of fertilizer increased corn yields from 36 to 47.5 bushels per acre of 206 farms. On 100 farms potato yields were raised from 115 bushels to 173 bushels. Wheat yields jumped from 16.5 bushels to 27.4 bushels on 712 farms. The increase for oats was from 38.6 bushels to 52.8 bushels on 344 farms. With beans 114 farmers stated that their crops averaged 13.2 bushels without fertilizer and 17.7 bushels with the fertilizer treatment. Other observations seem to support these findings.

Agricultural Hints

The sweetening of soils is one of the greatest farm problems.

Hauling out the manure aids in keeping the surroundings of the dairy barn clean and sanitary.

There are as many flavors of honeys as there are varieties of apples and many shades and colors.

Alfalfa requires a sweet soil and it also requires a soil capable of growing at least 40 bushels of corn per acre.

New York and Pennsylvania beekeepers are likely to prefer honey from buckwheat blossoms which has an entirely different flavor.

The leaves are the most nutritious part of alfalfa hay, yet they are often broken off and lost by the ordinary method of harvesting.

Vines alone will do much to cover unpainted buildings, unsightly corners and unlovely fences. In addition, they lend an air of coziness and provide much desired shade in summer.

* * *

The hatching season is fast approaching. It is time to mate the breeders. Choose only your best, well matured, vigorous males of good color and type to mate with hens which have survived your cullings.

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children. The prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

Manx Herring in Danger

The government of the Isle of Man fears that the famous Manx herring is doomed to oblivion. The recent decision of a large curing station to move from the island to the Shetland islands apparently is the last blow. The Manx herring industry has been declining since early in the Nineteenth century. The present number is very small.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

AMERICAN history is full of "ifs"—instances when the fate of the nation seemed to hang in the balance and when its destiny might have been different if certain individuals had done other than they did. While it is an idle pastime, no doubt, to speculate upon what might have been, it is, nevertheless, an interesting one.

Consider, for example, the case of the man of whom it has been written: "Renegade, drunkard, governor of two States, President of a republic, United States senator, friend of the Union, father of a Confederate soldier, poet, lover, duelist, empire-builder—where is there another figure like Sam Houston in the pages of American history, or of any other nation?" And what if to that list there had been added "President of the United States"? For Sam Houston might have been President, not just once, but twice, "if" . . . . . !

And if he had been, Virginia would have had just one more reason for her title of "Mother of Presidents." For he was born in Rockbridge county in the Old Dominion just 137 years ago. March 2, 1793, was the date. Another important event in Sam Houston's life took place on March 2. On his forty-third birthday he was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence which proclaimed the Republic of Texas free from Mexico. Having done that, the members of the convention elected him commander in chief of the armies of the new republic. All he had to do now was to make good that declaration and for that purpose he was provided a force of less than five hundred men to lead against the well-appointed army of 6,000, commanded by General Santa Anna, the Mexican dictator. March 2 is celebrated as a holiday in Texas, not as the birthday of Sam Houston but as Texas Independence day. But the Lone Star state also celebrates April 21 because it was on that day that Sam Houston won his astounding victory at San Jacinto which made good the declaration of March 2.

And when those dates come around this year, Americans in other states may well feel inclined to join with Texas in honoring the memory of Sam Houston, especially if they have read a book recently published. It is "The Raven—a Biography of Sam Houston," written by Marquis James and published by the Bobbs-Merrill company. Critics and historians have hailed it as one of the outstanding biographies of the past year, one even going so far as to call it "a masterpiece") and their verdict is that it is by far the most readable, as well as the most scholarly, account of Houston's life that has yet appeared.

As a youth Sam Houston was put to work in a store (after he showed a pronounced distaste for agriculture), but he soon discovered that he "preferred measuring deer tracks to tape" and the "wild liberty of the Red men to the tyranny of his own brothers." Such was Sam's own way of expressing his fondness for hunting, fishing and loafing with the Cherokee Indians whose country was across the Tennessee river from the Houston home. Finally he ran away from home and spent three happy years with the Cherokees. He was adopted as a son by Chief Oo-loo-te-ka and given the Indian name of Co-lon-neh—The Raven.

But when the War of 1812 broke out Sam returned to his own people and enlisted under Gen. Andrew Jackson to fight the Creeks. The story of his heroism at the terrible slaughter of the Creeks at To-ho-pe-ka in northern Alabama is a familiar one. His reckless gallantry there nearly cost him his life, but it also won him the approval of "Old Hickory" and that was to mean something when he aspired to political honors. Army life proving tiresome after the war was over, he obtained a commission as an Indian agent and was largely responsible for overcoming the objections of the Cherokees to being removed to the West.

Returning to Tennessee, Houston went into politics and as a whole-hearted Jackson Democrat was elected to congress, serving from 1823 to 1827. His career in the national legislature was not particularly distinguished but there were greater things ahead for him. By this time Jackson's star was rising rapidly in the political world. True, he had been defeated for the Presidency in 1824 by John Quincy Adams and—so the Jacksonians asserted—a "corrupt bargain" with Henry Clay. But Jackson's friends were still planning to make him President and Houston was one of the trio that Jackson dubbed his 'literary bureau' from the amount of writing they did to keep the General's candidacy before the country." So Jackson's friendship helped elect Houston governor of Tennessee.

Then when Jackson's health began to fail, aggravated by the death of his beloved Rachel, political observers began to speculate upon who was to be his successor. "Houston's name took its place on the inevitable list of 'possibilities' . . . From distant parts of the country the gaze of observers fell upon the rising figure in the West, idol of the politically consecrated populace of Tennessee. He seemed to be the Man of Destiny that many were looking for." His eligibility was further increased by his marriage early in 1829 to Miss Eliza Allen, daughter of a rich and powerful Tennessee family. Six weeks later Houston astounded the country by resigning his position as governor, deserting his bride and returning to the Cherokees across the Mississippi. He had thrown away his chance for the Presidency!

His reasons for doing so were for a long time a mystery. Throughout his lifetime Houston refused to discuss the matter, other than to say that it was a matter of personal honor to him. (One reviewer has suggested that Mr. James might have called his book "Honor," rather than "The Raven," because it is "the story of an empire that was won because of one man's notion of honor."). The scandalmongers immediately got busy but Houston refused to affirm or deny any of the reasons which they assigned for his action, although he did offer to fight whenever he heard of any aspersions being cast upon the name of his wife. Despite all the legend that has gathered around this incident it now seems clear that Eliza Allen was persuaded by an ambitious family to marry Houston instead of the man she really loved and when Houston discovered that fact he left her.

The next three years represent the lowest ebb in the career of this "Man of Destiny." Among the Cherokees he soon won the nickname of "Big Drunk." A political outcast, he gave up his American citizenship to become an adopted member of the Cherokee tribe and a renegade white man.

Then his rehabilitation began in 1832 when he went to Texas to aid in the fight for Texas liberty. That part of his career is a familiar story—his appointment as commander in chief of the little army which defeated Santa Anna at San Jacinto and his election as the first president of the new republic. Houston next proved himself an able diplomat. He desired that Texas be annexed by the United States, but the North, fearing the extension of slavery by the addition of new southern territory, was lukewarm toward that idea and Van Buren, a northern man, was President.

So Houston, concealing his real plans from every one, solicited French and British support for a project to conquer Arizona, New Mexico and the "Northern tier" of Mexican states. It was believed that the new Texas republic would attract the slave states out of the American Union and thus lead to a comfortable balance of power in North America. The Federal authorities were completely deceived by Houston's maneuvers and in a sudden diplomatic panic voted the annexation of Texas. So Houston was happy to replace the Lone Star flag with the Stars and Stripes and go to Washington as the first United States senator from Texas.

His career as a senator proved that the lesson of "The federal union—it must be preserved!" which he had learned from Andrew Jackson was well learned. He showed little enthusiasm for the war with Mexico. He supported the compromise of 1850. At the completion of his term as senator he returned to Texas in 1859 and was elected governor.

And once more "Governor Houston" was talked of as a Presidential possibility. In 1856 the Democrats of New Hampshire had "endorsed him for the Presidency and endeavored to stampede the country for his nomination" but "the General had no party behind him." But in 1860 the chances looked better. Political sentiment throughout the country was divided in many directions. As a result the "regular" Democrats nominated Stephen A. Douglas. The southern "bolters" nominated John C. Breckenridge. The new Republican party nominated Abraham Lincoln.

But there was another new party which called itself the National Union party that was yet to make its nomination. The choice of name was a happy one. National Union expressed precisely the sentiment of the vast, independent, voter-group whose ideas had not been met by any of the three nominations preceding. "Houston was the logical candidate of this group because his Texas triumphs were fresh in the public mind. He had strength in every part of the country. Lincoln, Douglas and Breckenridge were, each one, the choice of a section.' But the Whigs, who had joined the National Union party, rallied behind Senator John Bell of Tennessee, a man with "a good mediocre record, but in no sense a national leader or a figure of national caliber." The Houston managers seem to have been outmaneuvered by Bell's supporters who took the leadership in the new party and tried to play safe by putting up their colorless candidate. He won the nomination and, as a result, Lincoln, the unknown candidate of the radical Republican party, won the election and southern secession was assured. "If" Sam Houston had been nominated, it is almost certain that he would have been elected. And "if" he had been elected, secession and its terrible aftermath of civil war might have been averted.

So Houston returned to Texas, his hope for saving the Union defeated. When the Texas convention voted for secession, Houston refused to swear allegiance to the Confederacy and allowed himself to be deposed from his position as governor rather than to turn against the Union. He did not live to see the Union saved, for he died of pneumonia in 1863. Inside the ring his mother gave him when he enlisted for the Creek war was found engraved a single word—"Honor." His life had been an exemplification of that word. He had risen to the heights and descended to the depths but he never broke faith with any human being, Indian or Mexican, man or woman, white man or black, and he was true to himself. He once said of himself that he was "the last of his race." He spoke truly for he was the last of a race—of giants.

The DAIRY

DRIVING COWS TO MILKER FAVORED

Mechanical Milking Unit of Standard Make Praised.

Milking cows is being done in a new way by experts of the United States Department of Agriculture at the dairy experiment farm in Maryland and the plan being used may have several advantages for Minnesota dairymen, in the opinion of Dr. C. H. Eckles, chief of the dairy division, University Farm, St. Paul. This plan involves driving the cows to the milking machine, instead of taking the machine to the cows.

A mechanical milking unit of standard make is used, but instead of the usual portable receptacle for the milk, it is drawn into a stationary container located between two stalls. Cows are driven into the milking stalls from the rear and instead of being tied or stanchioned they are detained by movable gates placed in front of the stalls. These can be opened from the rear by the operator after each cow is milked, allowing her to move on and another bossy to take her place.

Doctor Eckles thinks the idea is well worth considering for dairymen who are contemplating building new barns and particularly so for farmers who wish to go into the dairy business, utilizing buildings which they already have, but which are not equipped for dairying.

For instance, a man who is raising beef cattle might easily and cheaply convert his place into a dairy farm by fitting up a small milking plant along the lines described above, using the regular sheds or shelters for dairy cows and driving them to the special stalls for milking. Large herds of dairy cows may be sheltered together without stanchions providing they are dehorned and the sheds kept well bedded.

Doctor Eckles would favor having enough milking stalls to permit the cows to remain in them while eating their grain. Feeding the cows their grain individually at milking time enables the dairyman to adjust the amount of grain to milk flow and also attracts the cows to the milking stalls. Beside being a relatively cheap way to equip a farm for dairying, this new system would make it easier to keep the milking quarters clean because of their smaller size, Doctor Eckles says.

Sweet Clover Excellent Ration for Dairy Cows

Cows may be pastured on sweet clover as readily as on clover or alfalfa. Care must be taken at first to turn them on only when the clover is dry and only for an hour or two for the first few days until the cows are accustomed to the clover.

Sweet clover is best seeded in the spring with oats or barley. The growth is slow at first, but in favorable years and on good soil it may be pastured lightly the first fall after the grain is harvested. Sweet clover is a biennial. The main crop comes the second year, when it should be pastured off closely, as the plant then dies. The best practice is, of course, to have two pieces, seeding one each year, and plowing up the land after the main crop has been pastured off.

Unless it grows wild in your neighborhood, seed inoculation will undoubtedly be a benefit. It is doubtful if sweet clover that is sown in the fall with rye or wheat would make sufficient growth to carry it through the winter and be strong enough to make a vigorous growth in the spring.

Dairy Hints

Cows like to breathe fresh air. Barns need to be properly ventilated.

Cows will eat three pounds of silage per day for every 100 pounds live weight.

Milk, from a cow properly fed, contains vitamines which are essential to human health.

Cows will eat from one to two pounds of alfalfa hay per day for every 100 pounds live weight.

* * *

Alfalfa or clover hay should be included in the ration of calves or yearlings being fattened for the market.

* * *

Don't turn cows on pasture until the grass has developed substance and has a good start. Put them out for only a short time at first that they may gradually become accustomed to the change.

* * *

Let the calf suck the fingers and gradually draw its nose into the milk, when the fingers should be removed gradually as soon as the calf gets a taste of the milk. This method may have to be repeated several times before the calf will drink alone.

* * *

Cows may eat and may also use for bedding, timothy hay, quack grass, etc. These roughages require from 18 per cent to 20 per cent digestible protein in the grain mixture. Such mixtures are more expensive than when alfalfa or clover is fed.

Mother of Four Babies

"Although I am only 22 years old, I have four babies to care for. Before my first baby was born my mother urged me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was so terribly weak. I had to lie down four or five times a day. After three bottles I could feel a great improvement. I still take the Vegetable Compound whenever I need it for it gives me strength to be a good mother to my family."—Mrs. Vern L. Dennings, 510 Johnson Street, Saginaw, Michigan.

SHAMROCKS DRAW BYE IN TOURNY

SHAMROCKS TO MEET EITHER GARNER OR KANAWHA FIRST

Prospects Look Good For Klemme As Contenders In Finals

For once in a lifetime Lady Luck is with the Klemme Shamrocks, the cagers of the local high school, for they drew a coveted "bye" for the annual county high school basket ball tournament to be held at Britt Friday and Saturday of this week.

Lady Luck showered double fistfuls of good luck on Klemme, as the grade team also drew a bye.

The Shamrocks will make their first appearance Saturday morning to meet the winner of the Kanawha-Garner game. If they win this tilt they go into the finals to meet the winner of the Corwith-Hayfield tilt. vs. Britt Crystal Lake game. In this line-up it will no doubt mean Britt will be in the finals Saturday night and there is no reason why Klemme and Britt should not put on the big show.

Hayfield, the only team which has scored a win over the Shamrocks this season must eliminate corwith and then either Crystal Lake r Britt.

Following is the line-up of both the grade and high school games:

FRIDAY AFTERNOON
—Grades—

3:00—Corwith vs. Kanawha
Bye—Klemme
Bye—Crystal Lake
3:45—Garner vs. Britt.

EVENING
—High School—

Bye—Klemme
7:00—Kanawha vs. Garner
8:00—Corwith vs. Hayfield
9:00—Britt vs. Crystal Lake.

SATURDAY MORNING
—Grades—

9:00—Winner of Corwith-Kanawha vs. Klemme.
9:45—Crystal Lake vs. winner of Garner-Britt game.

—High School—

10:30—Klemme vs. winner of the Kanawha-Garner game.
11:30—Winner of Corwith-Hayfield game vs. Britt-Crystal Lake.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP
—Saturday Evening—

8:00—Final GRADE game between winers of Saturday morning.
9:00—Final HIGH SCHOOL game between winners of Saturday a. m.

Officials for the tournament are McKinstry, of Fort Dodge, and Starr, of Gilmore City.

KLEMME AUXILIARY NOTES
By Mrs. P. W. Johnson

The February meeting of the Auxiliary was held at the home f Mrs. E. J. Arnold, Thursday night, February 13th.

Seven new members were reportde. This makes a total of thirty-three, but our quota is thirty-nine.

Several sick calls were reported.

A pleasant evening of conversation was enjoyed and at the close Mrs. Arnold and Mrs. Bredbenner served a lovely lunch of chicken sandwiches, pickles, coffee, three kinds of cake and home made ice cream. Members who did not attend this meeting missed one of the best times we will have this year.

All members of both organizations are urged to attend the gala party at the Armory to which we are invited February 21, at 8:00 o'clock. All you need to attend is your 1930 membership card. There will be music, addresses by the notables of Legion and Auxiliary circles including the National Commander. There will be eats and dancing. If you haven't your card pay up and attend this meeting, on Friday night. Remember its free, furnished by the Mason City Post.

SUGAR BEET GROWING IN IOWA RECEIVES ATTENTION

Many Farmers Are Going Into This Industry More And More

(By S. Christenson of the American Beet Sugar Co, Belmond, Ia.)

The business of sugar beet growing in Northern Iowa is receiving a much more serious considerartion from Iowa farmers within the last thirty days than has ever been done since beet growing became possible in this part of the state. The ne outstanding reason assigned to this is the uncertainty of the price of corn, oats and barley. The general trend of prices within the last thirty days has been downward and the outlook for next year's prices is not optimistic, to say the least.

From the requests coming to the Sugar Company from farmers in various sections of the state for the installation of beet dumps, it is very evident that their minds are turning to a crop that will prvoide insurance against unfavorable fluctuations of market prices for crops already in their rotation. With this as an index, farmers in the near enough proximity of an established beet dump will not permit of its loss thru not providing it with plenty of beets to handle.

Cross Cultivation Employed

The principle of cross cultivation gives such promise of entirely eliminating the unpleasant features of beet growing that it is sure to become as popular as corn in the rotation.

Not only does it carry with it a guaranteed price by a reliable concern for its principal crop—sugar beets—but its by-products, principaly beet tops, are as valuable for feed as a crop of alfalfa or one-third of the value of corn. Indirectly, its value can be measured only thru the increased crops that follow, depending on the fertility of the ground when the beets are planted. From an average crop it is estimated by Experiment Stations having studied the problem, that as much as one and one-half tons of free nitrogen is deposited in the soil to a depth of as much as six feet. It just so happens that the Sugar Beet plant has one of the most extensive root systems of any plant that grows, and the free nitrogen comes as a result of the decayed rootlets, stripped off and left in the soil when the beets are harvested. The root system of a sugar beet will permeate every cubic inch of a six foot cube. This, together with the cultivation given the beets during the growing season, keeping the ground free of weeds, is the reason for the increase in both yield and quality of crops that follow.

The value of a county, aside from its agriculture, is measured by the industries established within its boundaries. The factory at Belmond is one of these industries that adds to its taxable value and distributes large sums of money for raw materials and for labor employed. As an indication of the size of this institution, will say it received 1874 car loads of beets. It operated 68 days and paid $90,000.00 for wages and $475,000.00 for sugar beets. Large sums of money are spent annually for maintenance and improvments to maintain the institution at a high state of efficinecy.

We are proud of all of our industries because they help us to live better and enjoy more.

BRITT MAN IS CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY SHERIFF

Mr. George Morgan, of Britt, was making the rounds Wednesday to see the newspapers of the County to place his announcement for the office of Sheriff.

He came to Hancock County 20 years ago and farmed near Britt until 1918, when he sold his farm. He has been working with the Beet Company as fieldman until he resigned recently. Mr. Morgan has a family, and two of his daughters are teaching and hs boy is attending the University.

From what we can learn, Mr. Morgan is a man of good character and has a high standing in his own community. He has a fine personal appearance and no doubt will receive good suport from the voters in the coming primary.

HOT SCHOOL LUNCH BECOME POPULAR

ELL TOWNSHIP LADIES ENJOY THIRD LESSON OF COURSE

Hot School Lunches Being Rapidly Adopted In This County

Miss Myrtle Johnston held the third training school lesson on Nutrition at the home of Mrs. C. J. Wille, Monday, February 10th. Nine Co-operators were present.

The subject of the lesson was "The Diet of the School Child." Each lady brought her school lunch. One of the interesting features of the lesson was the scoring of this lunch, according to the following score:

1—Container
a Appropriateness	05
b Cleanliness	05
c Ventilation	05
2—Packing
a Order	05
b Wrapping	05
c General Appearance	05
3—Content
a Raw or Fresh Fruit Fruit or Vegetable	15
b Other Fruit or Vegetable	10
c Preparation of Food	20
4—Milk	20
Total percentage	100

A hot dish was prepared and served with the lunch. The benefits of the hot school lunch, how to start and conduct the hot lunch was also discussed.

Hot Lunches Are Popular In Hancock County Schools

Miss Johnston showed the map of Hancock County and the different school districts adopting the hot lunch. Several districts in Ell twp. use the hot pint method and is very satisfactory. The pupils who attend school in Garner are served a hot lunch.

Pupils Display Fine Manners

One lady told how she took her dinner and visited her school one day, and how pleased she was to see how orderly and easily the hot lunch was served. They use the hot pint method in this school. She said the children behaved well; they took plenty of time to eat, the environement was pleasant and they had good manners. All these things are essential to the health of the child.

The follow up meeting on this lesson, for the south half of Ell Township will be held at the Peter Josten home Friday, February 21.

Plan to attend this meeting as an enjoyable time is assured.

ELL TOWNSHIP FARM BUREAU PUT OVER FINE PROGRAM

Regular Monthly Meeting Held At The Louis Weaver Home

The Ell Township Farm Bureau met Tuesday at the Lew Weaver home for the regular monthly meeting. Everybody brought a covered dish for dinner and it was served in cafeteria style.

Miss Mildred Hampel, teacher of District No. 3 took charge of the program which was opened with the song of "Ameica," and after a few other familiar songs were sung some nice dialogs and recitations were given by the school children.

After the program Mr. Weiss, the County Agent, showed some interesting parts on soils.

The next meeting will be held at the schoolhouse, Dist. No. 4 on the 20thof March at 8:00 o'clock.

Everybody invited.

Patriotic Program Given

At the patriotic program given by the Bible Class of the Reformed Church Tuesday night, three members gave talks on the life of Geo. Washington, and three spoke about Abraham Lincoln. They were Ezra Tebbin,, Ewald Josten, Ethel Barz, Geraldine Smid, Henry Smid and Alvin Thiemann.

EAT MORE BUTTER SAYS M. D. MUNN

ONE-HALF OUNCE MORE BUTTER PER DAY CLEANS SURPLUS

"Help Yourself To More Butter" Is Slogan Of Dairy Men Now

"If each member of the rural communities of this country would consume each day one-half ounce more butter for the next 2 months, the present surplus would be disposed of and the industry would be stabilized," said Marcus D. Munn, president of the National Dairy Council, in a recent address which was broadcast to consumers of dairy products over station WENR.

The present situation is the direct result of accumulated surpluses of all dairy products. Since butter is the place where all surplus of dairy products ultimately goes, the question of present butter consumption forges to the front. If there is a surplus of cheese, evaporated milk, cream or milk, all this surplus inevitably finds its way to the creamery, since the world market is supplied by other countries. This has happened during recent months, resulting not only in a surplus of cheese, cream and evaporated milk, but a large butter surplus. This resulted in a sudden drop in butter prices far below profitable production.

This situation can easily and successfully be relieved, according to the National Dairy Council. Scientists agree that butter supplies in the most economical and palatable form of any food fat the substances necessary for growth, health and protection against disease.

The Council slogan for increasing butter consumption is, "Help yourself to more butter."

KLEMME DOWNS SWALEDALE IN CAGE BATTLE HERE

Other School News Of Interest For The Past Week

Our basket ball team won against Swaledale here last Friday night by a big margin, 37 to 12.

The final Hancock County Declamatory Contest last Thursday night was won by Corwith and Garner. Corwith won two first and Garner one. Garner won in the humorous class. Garner won two seconds and Klemme won the other in the person of Clarice Wellemeyer. Our Freshmen, Margaret Gates and Mitchell Bock did splendidly but lacked experience and perhaps confidence. The judges were from Mason City.

Winners To Speak At Belmond

Raymond Barz, Valeria Koerner, and Floyd Klotzbach, winners of first places in our own local declamatory contest will be heard on Wednesday night of next week at Belmond against speakers in that school, and against others from Rowan and Dows. This is the first contest of the state series and it should be a good one. We wish that many might go from here to give our speakers the support they deserve.

A Chance To Help School

Students from our high school are this week soliciting subscriptions for the Curtis Publications, the Country Gentleman, Ladies Home Journal and Saturday evening Post. Those wanting to subscribe for either of these can do so at the regular subscription price and in so doing the school will profit. Quite a few books have been purchased for our school from money from previous campaigns for this company's publications. We do not want, however, anyone to subscribe for a periodical just to oblige our students. But if parents or friends are expecting to subscribe any way they may as well subscribe through the school and help our students win some prizes and some money for their classes.

All aboard for Britt and the tournament.... Let's help our boys bring home the cup Saturday night!

GARNER COUPLE CELEBRATED GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schoenwetter Honored By Their Children

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schoenwetter, of Garner, were happily surprised on their return home from church Sunday to find 45 self-invited guests in possession to celebrate their golden wedding.

To honor this event, seven of the living children with their families gathered at the home. A brother, A. G. Schoenwetter and wife of South Dakota, also were present.

Charles Schoenwetter and Miss Sophia Holtz were married Feb. 12, 1880 at Columbus, Wis. They came ato nce to Hancock county where Mr. Schoenwetter had bought land the previous year. Here they farmed for 35 years after which they moved to town and have lived in Garner ever since.

At one time Mr. Schoenwetter owned over 1,000 acres in Liberty and Twin Lake townships. Six of their children now own farms obtained by their fathre years ago. They are Art Schoenwetter, Mrs. Flora Schlei, George, Ed. and Victor Schoenwetter and Mrs. Emil Pringnitz.

Miss Myrtle Schoenweter, bookkeeper for a big firm in Ft. Dodge, was in attendance. Only Mrs. Ella Geager of Hollywood, Cal., of all the children was not present.

The Times extends congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Schoenwetter.

ULRICH HIPPEN IS NO LONGER A BACHELOR

Klemme Farmer Marries Miss Bertha Michaelis, of Peoria, Ill.

Ulrich Hippen, who has ben farming with his brother two miles north of Klemme for some years, Wednesday of this week married Miss Bertha Michaelis, of Peoria, Ill., the marriage ceremony taking place at St. John's parsonage near Ventura, officiated by Rev. W. T. Wolfram. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Jass.

A wedding dinner had been prepared at the Jass home, after which the couple left for Waterloo for a visit with relatives.

The Bride is a young lady of fine qualities. For the past year she has lived with her sister, Mrs. Jass near Garner. Mr. Ulrich has been farming with his brother for some years and is a fine fellow in every way.

We understand they have rented a farm near Garner where they will begin housekeeping about March 1.

We extend congratulations and best wishes.

KERMIT STILLE AND AGATHA STEEMAN MARRIED

Stole March On Their Friends And Were Married At Waterloo

Monday, February 3, 1930, Mr. Kermit Stille and Miss Agatha Steeman staged quite a surprise on their Klemme friends and relatives when they were married at Grace Methodist Church parsonage by Rev. Harvey C. Travis, at Waterloo, Iowa. They were attended by the Bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Steeman, of Waterloo.

The Bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Steeman, of Waterloo. They were former residents of Klemme. She is a popular young lady and has a pleasing personality. She atended the Klemme High School while a resident of this place.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Stille of Liberty Township. He is a clean-cut and industrious young man, and is known as a promising man of excellent character and ability. Up to the present time he has been working with his father on the farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Stille have begun housekeeping in Waterloo where he has a position in a paper mill.

The Times joins with their many friends in extending congratulations and best wishes.

Aid Society To Meet

The Ladies Aid Society of the Reformed Church will meet with Mrs. Paul Mueller Wednesday, February 26th.

WILSON HIGHWAY WILL BE PAVED

NEW ROUTE WIL GO DUE NORTH FROM ELLTOWN CHURCH

Local Men Attended Meeting At Garner Last Friday Afternoon

Highway No. 15, or the Wilson s it is sometimes called, will be paved partly across the county the work to begin this spring, according to Fred R. White, state highway commissioner and Raymond Zack, district engineer.

Mr. White and Mr. Zack were in Hancock County Friday and met at the court house with the Supervisors and interested parties from Garner and Klemme. F. A. Arnold, Dr. Zinn and Henry Suckow were present from Klemme, and Owen Conwell from Goodell.

The paving will start at the paved highway No. 18 at Garner and will go south about ten miles, or almost to the county line south of Goodell. According to Mr. White the present highway No. 15 will be run due north from the Elltown church past the Ben V. Greimann farm and along the township line. A spur will run east at Garner to connect traffic going east.

The paving will be p¼ut in with money on hand and will be paved as far as the money goes, regardless of whether or not a bond issue should carry to complete all paving.

The Board of Supervisors will call a special bond election to raise money to pave all of No. 15 accross the county. If this carries the road will be paved to the Wright county line, and next year from Garner to the Winnebago county line.

LESSON ON SCHOOL CHILD DIET PROVED OF INTEREST

Ladies Brought "School Lunch" To Meeting At Ostendorf Home

The Co-Operators of Avery Township met at the home of Mrs. Harry Ostendorf, Wednesday February 12. "Diet for the School Child" was the lesson given by Miss Johnston.

We were asked to bring our own school lunch. Spinach soup was made and served with our lunch, and each lunch was scored according to a score card given.

The benefits of a hot school lunch were, that they were more appetizing, more vegetables included, more progress shown, teach children to eat different foods, also aids in better health.

Sandwiches for the school lunch and the use of raw vegetables used for fillings were discussed. Suggested choped carrots and peanut butter or cabage, celery, letuce, moistened with salad dressing be used.

A breakfast score card, height and weight chart, and also a day's menu for a 14 year old child was made out.

At the close of the lesson Miss Johnston played Schubert's Serenade on the phonograph. Franz Schubert in order to escape being forced to go into the army, commenced to compose with great rapidity. He was not a god business man and the remainder of his life was a struggle for existence.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Wets Give House Committee Opinion of Dry Laws—Hughes Confirmed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHAT the opponents of the Eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act really think of those pieces of legislation and their effect on the lives and morals of the American people was brought out forcibly last week in a hearing held by the judiciary committee of the house of representatives. That body has before it a number of bills designed to cancel or modify the prohibition laws, and Chairman George S. Graham of Pennsylvania, himself a wet, decided to give both sides a chance to present their best arguments. The public in Washington liked the idea and flocked to the hearing in numbers that thronged the large house caucus room.

Mr. Graham, opening the proceedings, said: "This hearing will not interfere with President Hoover's crime commission, but rather, be in aid thereof."

The Eighteenth amendment, he asserted, has been tested for ten years without satisfactory results. enforcement having left "a train of consequences most deplorable and depressing to every patriot.

"Let us reason together," he suggested. "Not with the fanatic, for he is the foe of religious as well as individual liberty, but with broad-minded men and women of every faith and belief, and try to relieve our country by conceiving a new system—one not founded on the bludgeon and violation of men's conscientious convictions regarding drink.

"No law can ever be enforced that is destructive of right and individual liberty. You may create a guerrilla warfare and its conditions, reeking with murder, bribery, corruption, violations, or evasions and disrespect for all law. Every law to be capable of being enforced without such a train of consequences must not be inconsistent with the mind of the people of the country as being right and must not be destructive of individual liberty."

Representative Sabath of Illinois first explained his proposed amendment giving the government control over the dispensing of liquor as in Sweden and Canada, and then called as his first witness Walter W. Liggett, a magazine writer whose articles on prohibition have brought him before various grand juries. For an hour Mr. Liggett told of the crime, debauchery, corruption and hypocrisy he said he had found existing in Washington, Boston, Michigan, Kansas, Minnesota and North Dakota. Summarizing it, he said:

"In Washington 700 speakeasies and 4,000 bootleggers operate unmolested. In Boston prostitution is rampant, with 15,000 persons engaged in purveying booze. In Kansas, after 50 years of prohibition, there is not a town where I can't buy a drink in five minutes; Detroit is in the grip of gangsters and crooked politicians; drinking goes on merrily in Minneapolis; and North Dakota consumes immeasurably more liquor than before prohibition."

The witness made many sensational detailed statements and when cross-examined by drys he declared he could prove them all but was sure he would not be called on to do so.

This was only the start, for the Association Opposed to the Prohibition Amendment had a long line of witnesses ready for each proposed bill. After the wets were through, of course, the drys were to have their opportunity, and they, too, were fully primed for the occasion.

BOTH wets and Democrats were cheered by the results of an election in the Springfield (Mass.) district to fill a congressional vacancy. The successful candidate was Fred D. Griggs, a Democrat and an avowed wet. The Democrats professed to believe this presaged the election of a Democrat in November to succeed Senator F. H. Gillett, who is not a candidate for renomination. The Springfield district, which is the home of former President Coolidge, is nominally Republican, but Griggs won by several thousand votes. Some of the Democratic leaders said the result was to be credited to dissatisfaction with the Hoover administration.

IN THE Central West there were several big events in connection with prohibition. A federal grand jury in Springfield, Ill., indicted the Fleischmann Yeast company, the Corn Products Refining company, and the Hubbinger Brothers company of Keokuk, Iowa, as corporation conspirators against the dry law. They are charged with furnishing large shipments of yeast and corn sugar to illicit distillers. A lot of minor bootleggers also were indicted. Another federal grand jury in Chicago returned indictments against 188 individuals and small concerns scattered over the country on charges if misusing industrial alcohol. The government officials said this was the breaking up of the biggest "alky" ring in the country, the king of which was Anastassoff Srebren, an internationally known chemist who invented a process of redistillation for removing non-drinkable ingredients from specially denatured alcohol.

BEFORE reaching a vote on the confirmation of the appointment of Charles Evans Hughes as chief justice of the Supreme court, the senate heard a number of rather violent attacks on the supposed attitude of Mr. Hughes toward economic problems and to warm defense of that gentleman and his record. Leading the opposition was Senator Borah of Idaho, the chronic opponent of almost everything anyone else wants. He, as well as Carter Glass, Cole Blease, Brookhart, Blaine, Wheeler and Connally of Texas based their arguments against the appointment mainly on their alleged belief that Mr. Hughes was more in sympathy with the oil, gas, electricity, coal, transportation and power magnates than with the people, and that his views, as Borah said, on matters pertaining to great combinations might, if reflected in Supreme court decisions, lead to "great economic oppression." All of which was replied to ably by Senator Glenn of Illinois and others.

The vote for confirmation of Mr. Hughes was 52 to 26. Voting for confirmation were 38 Republicans and 14 Democrats, while in the negative were 11 Republicans and 15 Democrats.

SUBMARINES are not to be banned as weapons of war by the naval conference in London, but their use against merchant ships is to be restricted and "humanized." Such is the assertion of Mr. Stimson and Mr. MacDonald, heads of the American and British delegations respectively, made after the question had been taken up by the conference in plenary session. The British proposed that the submarine be abolished and the Americans seconded that, but the French and Japanese objected, as was expected, and the Italians sat on the fence. All, however, were willing that ruthless warfare by submersibles on merchant vessels should be outlawed.

Premier Tardieu put France in a commanding position when he gave out the French demands. He announced that he was willing to abandon his government's naval requirements which were laid down in the 1923 program, on one condition only. This condition is a mutual guarantee from the other powers.

By 1936, the French memorandum says, the French navy will comprise a total tonnage of 724,479 tons. This approximates the sea strength of Japan, who proposes 757,070 tons as her proportion, and swamps Italy, who suggests a figure in the neighborhood of 400,000 tons as her needs. The French strength would approximate the British and American strength in a ratio of 3-2.

The Japanese delegation on Thursday made public its position, stating that Japan is ready to assent to a holiday in battleship construction until 1936, which also is favored by the Americans and the British; that Japan is willing that the tonnage of battleships be reduced to 25,000 tons and the maximum caliber of guns to 14 inches.

Mr. Stimson's demand, at first suppressed, that in arranging battleship parity with Great Britain the United States be permitted to build one new battleship of the Rodney type, of which England has two, appears to have been abandoned owing to the firm opposition of the British as well as adverse criticism at home. One rumor was scotched when Prime Minister MacDonald told the house of commons that there was no question of Great Britain scrapping any battleships of the Rodney and Nelson, Queen Elizabeth or Royal Sovereign classes, and that neither the Americans nor anyone else had asked this.

The conference delayed decision on the question of methods of limitation, referring it back to the first committee, together with the matter of maximum and minimum tonnages for individual cruisers in the smaller class.

In Washington it was said that ammunition to be utilized in combating ratification of any naval agreement based on the Stimson proposals limiting big gun cruisers for America to eighteen was being prepared at the direction of the chairmen of the senate and house naval committees.

He had overcome his restlessness at night and the sleep he obtained was so helpful that he was able to leave his bed and move about without assistance.

KING ALFONSO of Spain has extended amnesty to all those whom De Rivera exiled and taken other steps to please the people, but the republican sentiment in his country is growing alarmingly. Anti-monarchists who returned from foreign lands at once resumed their agitation and threats against the throne and its occupant are made openly. At a celebration of the anniversary of the short-lived republic of 1873 the attacks on Alfonso were savage. One of the speakers declared: "There are only two roads open to the Bourbons. One leads to the frontier and the other to the scaffold." The police were ordered by Premier Berenguer not to disturb this and similar meetings, though street demonstrations were barred. Count Romanones, former premier and leader of the Liberals, says the only way to save the monarchy in Spain is to establish a constitutional government modeled after that of England.

FREDERIC M. SACKETT, the new American ambassador to Germany, presented his credentials to President Von Hindenburg and was most cordially received. In his address Mr. Sackett expressed his admiration for the president as the living embodiment of German love for the fatherland. He then praised the energy and determination with which the German people are facing post-war problems, and expressed the hope that the two great republics would be able to labor together for peace in years to come.

TEN million dollars will be advanced, it was announced by the federal farm board, to the new Grain Stabilization corporation, organized in Chicago recently by grain co-operative associations, in an effort to check the decline in wheat prices.

The new corporation, the first of its kind created and financed under the terms of the marketing law enacted seven months ago, will be empowered to purchase and store such quantities of wheat as may be necessary to control the surplus and stabilize the market. It was incorporated in Dover, Del.

BASEBALL fans rejoiced to hear of the good fortune of Connie Mack, veteran manager of the world's champion Athletics. He has received the Edward Bok award of $10,000 presented annually to the man or woman who, during the preceding twelve months, "rendered the most outstanding service to Philadelphia." The gift was enclosed in an ivory case and accompanied by a gold medal.

POULTRY

TURKEY INDUSTRY GROWS IN NEVADA

U. S. Expert Finds It Easier With Small Flock Unit.

Nevada is building up a solid turkey producing industry in a logical way, in the opinion of H. L. Shrader, extension poultry specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, who recently paid a visit to this state.

The growing of the holiday bird in Nevada is on a farm flock basis, the expert stated, with from 150 to 300 birds, as a rule, being raised along with other crops. It is easier with the small flock unit produced in co-operation with other crops, according to the federal man, to raise the type of high-grade bird for which Nevada is becoming known.

Two of the best feeds for turkeys are milk and alfalfa, and these, Shrader said, being produced on the farm with the turkeys, afford good feed at a low cost. With such small flocks, he said, the farm wife can take care of a good share of the work, thus cutting costs, as otherwise extra labor might have to be hired.

The outlook for expansion in the industry in Nevada is good, the specialist stated. Nevada conditions, he believes, are well suited to turkey production.

"Turkeys and chickens should never be run together," he declared, explaining that parasites, little harmful to chickens, but deadly to the bronze birds, are carried by the chickens. Turkeys should be kept far from the farmhouse, he believes.

Sanitation in another means of keeping turkeys disease-free, he stated.

Buy Tested Cod Liver Oil for Laying Fowls

The use of cod liver oil in feeding laying hens during winter months and in raising young chicks during the early spring is one of the recent developments in poultry production. Practically every one who has used a good quality product has found that it has been helpful in keeping up the vitality of the flock, preventing leg weakness in chicks and securing a better texture of shell with eggs.

The reason for the value of this product is largely due to the vitamine D which it contains. Vitamine D is the substitute for sunshine. It helps fowls to properly absorb the minerals which they consume. Without vitamine D or sunshine, fowls will fall properly to absorb minerals, even though they may be abundantly supplied.

The popularity of cod liver oil has encouraged the use of many substitutes. The fishy odor which is characteristic of many of these products is not a guarantee that they are of any particular value from the standpoint of being a substitute for sunshine. There is even a good deal of difference in the efficiency of cod liver oil, so it is well to buy a product that is either tested for vitamine content or guaranteed to give satisfaction.

Turkeys Thrive While Roosting in the Open

It is unnecessary to provide a house for turkeys though it is the part of wisdom to have a shed handy into which they may be driven on extremely stormy nights.

As a usual thing they will do better roosting out in the open even in quite severe weather.

Where only a small flock is kept 15 females may be mated with one male if he is unquestionably vigorous. If a flock of about 25 or 30 is kept, two males will be needed but they should not be allowed to run with the flock at one time.

One should be allowed to run with the flock one day and the other the next.

The reason for this is that where both are allowed to mingle with the flock at the same time, they will fight until one of them becomes boss, after which he will do most of the mating and the flock will be very little better off so far as the fertility is concerned than if it had a single male.

Eliminate Bedbugs

The best method of eliminating bedbugs from a hen house is to first thoroughly clean the entire house, getting out every little speck of both dust and straw. After this thoroughly cleaning, the walls and perches should be painted with carbolineum, and the rest of the house sprayed with a 20 per cent solution of soluble stock dip. If this application is done thoroughly, it will eliminate all of the live bugs, but probably will not affect the eggs. The second application is necessary.

Yellow Corn Best

Yellow corn is especially valuable for winter feeding on account of its fattening qualities and vitamine content. If possible, at least half of the grain feed should be yellow corn. If white corn, wheat, kafir, or other farm grains are fed instead of yellow corn, alfalfa should be added to the rations to help supply vitamines. Alfalfa leaves or alfalfa meal will replace the vitamines of yellow corn if the latter is not available. The winter ration must contain protein.

Lesson for February 23

THE TWELVE SENT FORTH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 9:35-11:1.

GOLDEN TEXT—The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore, the Lord of the harvest that He send forth laborers into His harvest.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Helpers at Work.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Helpers at Work.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Helping to Win the World for Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Recruiting Christian workers.

I. The Plenteous Harvest (9:35-38).

1. Christ's compassion (v. 36).

As He went on His rounds preaching the gospel of the kingdom, He saw the multitude as sheep having no shepherd.

2. A plenteous harvest and the few laborers (v. 37).

He saw the whole needy world as a ripened field of grain ready to be harvested, with but few who were willing to labor in the harvest field.

3. Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that He will send forth laborers into His harvest (v. 38).

II. The Twelve Sent Forth (ch. 10).

The sending forth of the twelve shows the methods adopted by Jesus Christ in the propagation of the kingdom. It should be clearly borne in mind that this chapter does not outline the policy of the missionary endeavor in this age. In order to show the dispensational aspects of the lesson, the following divisions of the chapter are suggested:

1. Instructions bearing immediately upon the Apostles' work to the death of Christ (vv. 1-15).

In strictness of interpretation these teachings cannot be applied to any later period.

(1) The ministers chosen (vv. 1-4). These twelve humble men were chosen and commissioned to carry on the work of the propagation of the kingdom. These twelve stood in a peculiar relation to Israel. (2) The sphere of their mission (vv. 5, 6). They were only to go to Jews. They had no message for Gentiles, or even Samaritans. After Pentecost this sphere was widened (Luke 24:46-49; Acts 1:8). No such restriction obtains with reference to ministers today. The middle wall of partition was broken down by the death of Christ. (3) Their message (v. 7). By "the kingdom of heaven is at hand" is meant the promised kingdom of Israel was at hand; that Jesus Christ, the promised king, was present and ready to set up His kingdom. After the church is translated, the same message will be taken up for a brief time by the believing remnant (See Acts 15:13-18; Rom. 11 and Rev. 7). (4) The supernatural authentication of their mission (v. 8). They were clothed with power to work miracles. These wonderful works were really done by the twelve. (5) Their maintenance (vv. 9, 10). They were to make no provision for their support, but to depend wholly upon the Lord who sent them. Since they had received the message and power gratuitously, they were to give it out in the same way. (6) Responsibilities of those to whom the message was delivered (vv. 11-15). If the people would not receive them or hear their message, they were to turn from them and pronounce judgment upon them.

2. Instructions concerning testimony from Pentecost onward (vv. 16-23).

After Pentecost, testimony for Christ would be fraught with great danger. Both Jews and Gentiles would assail the messengers with the most bitter persecutions. They were scourged in the synagogues before heathen magistrates. Instead of bringing peace to the homes, they brought divisions of the fiercest kind among families. In their defense they were to rely upon the Holy Spirit to aid them. These conditions were literally fulfilled in the period from Pentecost to the destruction of Jerusalem. Since the fall of Jerusalem, no one has ever been scourged in a synagogue. Verse 23 seems to carry the work forward to the time of the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom in the tribulation time. The Lord's coming then is so speedy, that their testimony is cut short.

3. The teaching applicable in all ages (vv. 24-42).

The disciple has the position of oneness with the master. He is courageously to declare the whole counsel of God, though most violently opposed. Though the testimony result in the most bitter opposition, the messenger should not be surprised or discouraged, for so completely is the Lord identified with His disciples that He accepts treatment of them as treatment of Himself.

Drugs Excite the Kidneys, Drink Water

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Makers of Historic Phrases

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IS HERBERT HOOVER about to take his place among the Presidents who have been makers of historic phrases or coiners of epigrams which have caught the fancy of the people and have been inextricably associated with their names? Although it is never safe to predict what is likely to survive and what will soon be forgotten, it would seem that some of Mr. Hoover's apt expressions which are now a part of our current speech have better than an even chance of being permanently enrolled in the list of "sayings of the great."

Recently in a letter to Dr. W. O. Thompson, president emeritus of Ohio State university, President Hoover referred to critics of the administration as "those whose daily toil is to mix mud pies." Almost immediately newspaper writers gave that phrase wide currency and placed "mud pie mixers" in the same class with Roosevelt's "undesirable citizens" and Wilson's "little band of willful men." But this was not the first of the Hooverisms which drop easily from the lips of Americans and have a familiar ring to their ears. "A noble experiment" has become a synonym for prohibition since Mr. Hoover called it that during the President campaign of 1928. And it has become the fashion to assure ourselves and our friends that almost anything under discussion is "basically sound" since the President reassured the country that "business

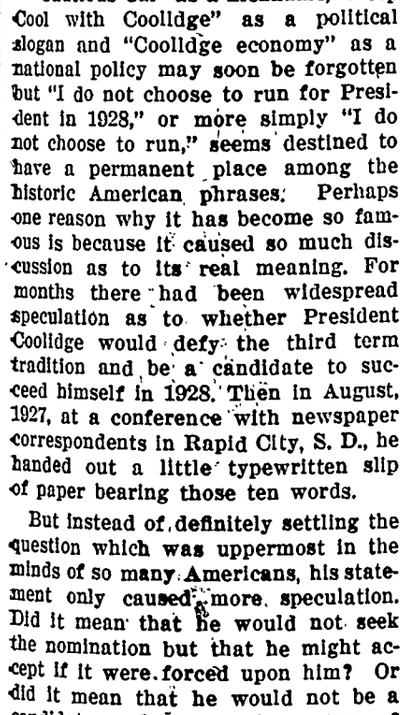
"Those whose daily toil is to mix mud pies."
"Business is basically sound."
"A noble experiment."

"I do not choose to run for President in 1928."

is basically sound" after the stock market flurry last year.

"Cautious Cal" as a nickname, "Keep Cool with Coolidge" as a political slogan and "Coolidge economy" as a national policy may soon be forgotten but "I do not choose to run for President in 1928," or more simply "I do not choose to run," seems destined to have a permanent place among the historic American phrases. Perhaps one reason why it has become so famous is because it caused so much discussion as to its real meaning. For months there had been widespread speculation as to whether President Coolidge would defy the third term tradition and be a candidate to succeed himself in 1928. Then in August, 1927, at a conference with newspaper correspondents in Rapid City, S. D., he handed out a little typewritten slip of paper bearing those ten words.

But instead of definitely settling the question which was uppermost in the minds of so many Americans, his statement only caused more speculation. Did it mean that he would not seek the nomination but that he might accept if it were forced upon him? Or did it mean that he would not be a candidate under any circumstances? Opinion was divided. Some declared that this was his canny way of declining to make the race but leaving the way open for his being "drafted" for a third term. Others declared that



"Back to normalcy."

"choose" was a distinctively New England term and that when a Yankee says "I do not choose" it meant positively and irrevocably "No! I will not!" Later events proved that their interpretation was the correct one, but it is doubtful if any single word in our language has ever before caused such widespread discussion and debate.

As a matter of fact that very word has been used by other noted Americans in the same sense as President Coolidge used it, but if the Americans of 1927 knew that, they had forgotten it. One of the first recorded instances was its use by our first President, George Washington, and that during a political campaign! As a candidate for membership in the House of Burgesses of Virginia in 1761, he wrote a letter to Captain Van Swearingen, commenting upon the electioneering methods of his opponent, Col. Adam Stephen as follows: "Colo. Stephens proceedings is a matter of ye greatest amazement to me. . . . His conduct throughout the whole is very obvious to all who will be convinced, but I find there are some that do not choose to have their eyes opened. . . ."

The campaign of Coolidge's predecessor in office, Warren G. Harding,

"Honor lies in honest toil."
"Innocuous desuetude."
"Public office is a public trust."
"Party honesty is party expediency."

gave currency to at least two expressions which enjoyed considerable vogue at the time but which have already been nearly forgotten. One was his "front porch campaign" at his home in Marion, Ohio, and the other his declaration that he was summoning to his assistance the "best minds" in his party. But the Harding expression which apparently has the best chance for survival is one closely akin to the Hoover "basically sound." If Harding did not coin the word "normalcy," at least he made it familiar to many Americans, who did not suspect that such a word existed, in characterizing the period after the upheaval of the World war as "back to normalcy."

Next to Roosevelt, perhaps, the most prolific maker of unforgettable phrases was Woodrow Wilson. He began as president of Princeton university and his reference to the "main tent" in college education in distinction to the "sideshows" is still frequently quoted. "America first" has become the property of the whole nation since Wilson first used it in a speech in New York early in 1915, but its misuse as a slogan by demagogic politicians has detracted sadly from its significance as a patriotic plea.

However, it was in his speeches and state papers as President that Wilson gave to the nation his most memorable expressions. His Mexican policy was one of "watchful waiting." For a time he refused to lead America into the World war because "There is such a thing as being too proud to fight." When we did go in, it was because "The world must be made safe for democracy." At the peace conference he demanded "open covenants, openly arrived at" and a synonym for the League of Nations which he sponsored was "disentangling alliances." When the senate refused to ratify America's membership in that league, it was due to what Wilson called a "little band of willful men."

A more picturesque figure than Wilson, Roosevelt was also a coiner of more picturesque phrases. A "Rough Rider" and an exponent of "the strenuous life," he had an aversion for "mollycoddles." As a careful student of natural history he disliked "nature fakers." Other pet aversions were "hyphenated Americans," "rose water reformers," "muck-rakers," "predatory rich," and "malefactors of great wealth." He could tell his fellow Americans, while advocating a strong navy, to "speak softly and carry a big stick," but he himself couldn't speak so softly when placing his enemies in "the Ananias club," when "waging peace" or "busting the trusts" or advocating "the square deal."

There were innumerable times when he was "Delighted!" or feeling "Bully!" So in Chicago in 1912, when reporters sought him out to inquire about the rumored breakdown of his health after his bolt from the Republican ranks and the formation of the Progressive party, he declared that he felt "like a bull moose." Thus was a new party symbol created and that animal joined our national political zoo, along with the elephant, the donkey and the camel. Earlier in 1912, while passing through Cleveland, Ohio, he was asked whether he would be a candidate for President. He replied "My hat is in the ring. You will have my answer on Monday." The "hat in the ring" was not original with Roosevelt. It was the frontier formula for entering a fight and T. R., familiar with the vernacular of the frontier, made apt use of it and added it to our political lexicon.

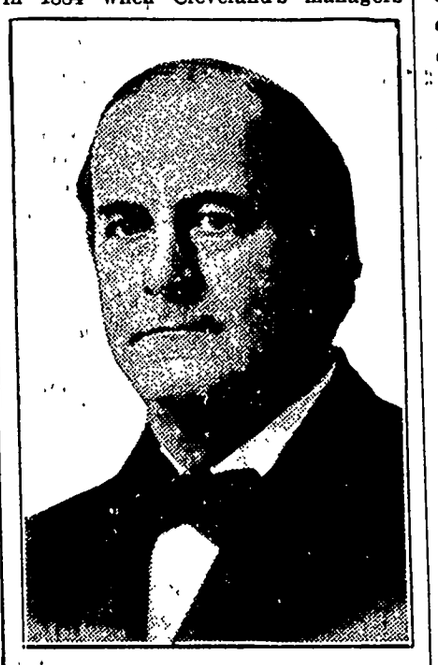
History credits to Grover Cleveland at least six historic phrases and the record as to five of them is clear. In a letter accepting the nomination for President on August 18, 1884, he declared that "Honor lies in honest toil." In his annual message to congress on March 1, 1886, he said "After an existence of nearly twenty years of almost innocuous desuetude these laws are brought forth." That expression, "innocuous desuetude," is often said to have been original with Cleveland but it has been traced back to David Hunter Strather ("Porte Crayon"), a popular writer in 1849. However it did not become familiar to most Americans until the President used it in his message.

In Cleveland's annual message to congress in 1887 he wrote "It is a condition which confronts us—not a theory" in reference to the tariff, which may have been an original idea with him. Or he may have read the declaration of Benjamin Disraeli, prime minister of England, that "Free trade is not a principle, it is an expedient," and got his idea from that. In his veto of the dependent pension bill on July 5, 1888, Cleveland declared "I have considered the pension list of the republic a roll of honor" and in an interview in the New York Commercial Advertiser on September 19, 1889, he declared "Party honesty is party expediency."

But the most famous of all quotations ascribed to Cleveland is the phrase "Public office is a public trust." He never said that in so many words. The nearest he ever came to that was variations on the statement that "Public officials are the trustees of the people," made at different times while he was serving as mayor of New York city and governor of New York. The idea was an old one. Edmund Burke had stated it in a slightly different form as had Thomas Jefferson and John C. Calhoun. And on May 31, 1872, Charles Sumner declared "The phrase 'Public office is a public trust' has of late become common property."

It was common property, too, at the opening of the campaign for President in 1884 when Cleveland's managers



"You shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."
"Sixteen to one."

compiled a campaign document giving his official achievements. Desiring a short, striking title for the outside cover of the document, they hit upon "Public office is a public trust," placed it in quotation marks and printed it over his signature on the cover. Two men—William C. Hudson, a reporter on the Brooklyn Daily Eagle who helped compile the campaign document, and Daniel S. Lamont—are credited with having selected the title. Be that as it may, the public accepted the phrase as a verbatim saying of Cleveland's, it became an effective campaign slogan and has come down to us as his own coinage.

Most picturesque of all the Democratic leaders and a great orator, William Jennings Bryan, although he could not be elected President in three attempts, could and did enrich our language with some unforgetable phrases. One of them occurred in the speech with which he stampeded a convention and electrified the country in 1896 when he declared "You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns; you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold." This was in answer to the demand for a gold standard by the "Gold Democrats," for the question of coinage was the principal issue in this campaign. "After this wonderful outburst of oratory," says one writer, "he took as his slogan 'sixteen to one.' Was there ever such an anticlimax? One might as well have for a slogan the rule of three, the multiplication table or the fourteenth theorem of Euclid! No wonder the people repudiated him!" But even though "16 to 1" was a poor political slogan, it will forever be associated with the name of William Jennings Bryan.

Soviet Will Institute Search for Treasures

Excavations the results of which may eclipse even the wonderful discoveries which were made in the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen are about to be undertaken in Moscow. The Russian archeologist, Professor Steletsky, has obtained permission from the Soviet government to begin investigations at the world-famed Kremlin, once the palace of the old czars of Russia in Moscow, and now the seat of the present government, with the object of finding out what truth is contained in the legendary stories connected with this ancient citadel. For many centuries the belief has persisted in Moscow that beneath the Kremlin there lies hidden a network of underground passages and secret chambers, in which are buried gold and silver treasures of the time of old Novogorod, valuable pictures and historical jewels and relics in extravagant abundance, and—most priceless of all—the secret "Golden Library" of Ivan the Terrible. All these treasures—according to the tradition—were hidden away under the earth by successive czars, and have lain there, inaccessible, since the early Fifteenth century.

Dog Is Cheese Fancier

A cheese hound is abroad in Pittsfield and Police Officer William Dunn has been searching for the animal which has a great fondness for cheese, and endeavors to satisfy its appetite whenever possible. A truck loaded with groceries was standing in front of a store while its owner was inside when this dog appeared on the scene. He jumped on the rear of the truck and, after a hurried search among a number of grocery parcels, he nosed out a large package of Sweltzer cheese and ran.

GRAIN MARKETING TO RECEIVE ATTENTION

Producers in Iowa will have their first opportunity to take part in the activities of the Federal Farm Board thru the Co-operative Grain Marketing field this spring. A national organization has been organized and is now functioning. An Iowa man, S. J. Cottington of Stanhope is President. Neither individual producers nor individual cooperative elevators can acfiliate with this organization but must make their contacts thru branch associations.

A member of the college staff will present data regarding possible savings to both buyers and sellers of grain by more direct movements from surplus to deficit areas. A representative of one of the new grain corporations approved by the Federal Farm Board will tell of the steps needed to take advantage of farm relief plans.

BETTER CARS IN NEED OF ROADS

Greatest Improvement Must Come Through Building Better Highways.

(By E. E. DUFFY.)

Competition is bringing the motoring public, which includes about 125,000,000 citizens of the United States, almost unbelievable values. Eight-cylinder cars are coming within reach of those who because of worldly cares must conserve the contents of their billfolds. Automobiles are being made better and better, and of parallel importance, cheaper and cheaper.

But there is one thing wrong with the motoring picture. More has been done in creating speed and comfort in vehicles than in providing highways over which they may best operate. To say that automobile manufacturers have done all they can in the way of making cars efficient would not be quite true, for mechanical improvements are to continue. But the great betterment that is to come in motoring cannot be accomplished by motor car manufacturers. More well paved highways must be built and by John Public.

Automobile Ownership.

The saturation point of automobile ownership is as elusive as a bootlegger's address. In addition to the replacement of some two million worn out cars each year, the total vehicle registration is being increased by a million and a half. There are now some 26,000,000 cars on the highways and byways and by the end of 1930 the registration will have mounted to 27,500,000.

It is difficult to visualize the importance of such large figures, but they do show that the motoring appetite is far from being appeased.

Most cars are owned in population centers—but they do not stay there. Hence the highway problem is not only statewide but nationwide.

Few states have really made an attempt to serve the motorist but those that have made any commendable headway have done so through the aid of the bond issue plan which enables the state or local community to purchase roads in installments, as homes and cars are purchased by individuals.

Meet Highway Problem.

To meet the highway problem most successfully it is necessary to make use of assured future income. Plans of various states indicate that greater use is to be made of the bond issue plan. In the meantime motorists in those communities evidencing little road building energy will continue to be deprived of true motoring comfort—at a greater motoring cost than their neighbors.

Good Judge of Distance Important for Driver

Are you good at guessing distances? You aren't the best auto driver unless you are a good judge of distances. An interesting little experiment that will show you how accurate your eyes are or how they deceive you when it comes to judging distances can be performed with four nickels or four quarters. Place the four coins in a row with their edges just touching. Now move one coin straight out from the others until you think you have the same space between it and the others as there is across the original row. To see how far wrong you are measure the two distances. To your surprise you will find that you are almost the width of a coin too far away. The illusion is produced by the empty and full spaces.—The Pathfinder.

Automobile Prophet Was Wrong on Congestion

Winthrop Scarritt, writing in Harper's Weekly in 1907, made a forecast for the future of the automobile industry, which, in many particulars, proved his ability as a prophet. He predicted that the automobile would stimulate tremendously a good roads movement; that it would give city dwellers a new Sunday afternoon diversion, and that it would tend to break down class distinction by supplying cars for both rich and poor.

Yet, on one point, Mr. Scarritt guessed wrong. "The horseless carriage," he predicted, "will solve the problem of congestion of traffic in our city streets."

THE MOTOR QUIZ

How Many Can You Answer?

Q. What are the most common causes of skidding?

Ans. Sudden changes in direction; quick and vigorous application of the brakes; sudden application of power; unequal tire or brake pressure.

Q. Why should chains be removed after roads have become dried?

Ans.—Chains wear out rapidly on dry roads and the car is subjected to unnecessary vibration.

Q. How have good roads improved educational facilities in the rural areas?

Ans. More than 42,000 busses now transport 1,250,000 children living in the rural areas, putting their educational facilities on a par with that of children living in the city.

Q. How often should spark plugs and breaker points be examined and why?

Ans. At least twice a year. Too wide gapping of spark plug and breaker points causes an engine to miss, preventing speedy acceleration.

Detroit Police Combat Car Exhaust Nuisance

This business of having to breathe oil and gas-laden fumes every time automobiles pile up at a busy intersection is one that has made Detroit officials, at least, tired.

An official of the police department, viewing the situation with more disgust than alarm, has decided that it is entirely due to the carelessness of the car owner in not keeping the carburetor adjusted properly and the engine reasonably clean. Cars of today, he declares, are so refined that reasonably good adjustments will prevent this nuisance. As a result, police are going to see that offending motorists are disciplined.

COLOR IMPORTANT FACTOR IN FRUIT

Hue May Vary From Faint Stripes to Deep Solid Red.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Color has been found to be the most important single quality factor in the sale of American fruit, according to F. G. Robb of the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture, citing the results of twelve years of farm products inspection service by the federal bureau. Other quality factors include size, maturity, and defects due to insect injury, disease, improper packing and rough handling.

Although there has been a marked improvement in recent years in the quality and condition of American fruits on domestic markets, there is still too large a quantity of poor products which have a depressing effect on the general level of fruit prices, Mr. Robb says. The poor quality and condition of this fruit is the result of inefficiency in growing, harvesting, packing and shipping.

"Color," Mr. Robb declares, "is a difficult factor to judge. In a variety of apples like the Jonathan, for example, the U. S. No. 1 grade calls for 25 per cent of good color. The color on the fruit may vary from faint stripes to deep solid red; it may be scattered all over the surface or be concentrated on one cheek. When the apples are passing rather rapidly in front of the sorters it is likely that an occasional under-colored apple will get by or be misjudged, but there is a grade tolerance to take care of such errors. However, when the inspector finds 20, 25 or 30 per cent of fruit which shows practically no color in some barrels while others show practically no under-colored fruit, it cannot be excused as misjudgment or border line cases. It shows careless packing house management. Under-colored apples cannot be forced on the market at No. 1 prices.

"Inspectors frequently find the same evidence of carelessness in sizing of fruit as in judging color. Sizing can be done satisfactorily only by machinery. The most common condition defects in apples found by our inspectors are over-maturity, decay, scald, and freezing injury. Over-maturity may result from allowing the fruit to remain too long on the trees, or from improper storage, or transportation temperatures.

"Blue mold rot is the most common type of decay. It results from punctures, bruises, or other skin breaks. The great variation in percentages of this decay in different lots in the latter part of the season shows the difference between proper and improper handling methods. At this time of year there is also a wide variation in the extent of damage from scald. Oil wraps in boxes and shredded oil paper in barrels and baskets prevent this condition, but the paper must be scattered through the package if the treatment is to be effective.

"Tightness or slackness of pack are causes of loss, especially in connection with barrels. A slack pack or the crushing of apples just beneath the head of the barrel can be avoided by proper racking or shaking down of the barrel as it is being filled."

Prune Raspberries

Horticulturists at University Farm, St. Paul, have found that the red raspberry needs very little pruning in the spring provided the suckers and deadwood were removed in the fall and too many canes were not left in the hill. If the moisture supply is ample, larger yields of fruit will be obtained if the canes are permitted to grow long. Severe pruning should be avoided, especially if there are supports for the canes, experience having shown that the longer they are the more and better fruit produced by the bushes.

Horticultural Hints

If there is much pruning to be done, it is advisable to start early on apples.

* * *

Where surface drainage in the orchard is poor it would be well to plow deep furrows to carry away the water from melting snows and spring rains.

How good are your orchard practices? From results, did you prune too much or too little? Do the trees show a lack of fertilizer? How about more fruit thinning this year?

Fruit trees may be successfully transplanted during either late fall or early spring. Spring is usually the better season.

Use lime-sulphur and nicotine-sulphate to control the apple aphis. Spray when the buds are in the delayed dormant condition.

* * *

Cleaning up the fence corners and between rows of trees aid in controlling apple scab, plum and apple curculio—three orchard pests of major importance.

Registered Seed Controls Pests

Carelessly Selected Seed Often Produces Unprofitable Crops.

If registered seed had no other value than to stop the spread of noxious weed seeds, all the money and effort ever expended to develop pure seed would be justified, declares T. G. Stewart, extension agronomist at the Colorado Agricultural college.

"Probably more weed seeds are spread through crop seeds than in any other way," Mr. Stewart says. "Registered seeds of the standard Colorado varieties can readily be obtained by any farmer. Such seed, when planted, produces good yields of high quality crops. Carelessly selected seed often produces a mixed crop that is unprofitable for both the grower and the buyer. Mixed wheat, for instance, is severely penalized, especially when red and white wheats are mixed.

Mixture of Grain Types.

"A mixture of different types of grain not only brings a lower price on the market, but prevents harvesting at the right time because of the different ripening periods."

More farmers every year are appreciating the importance of selecting and planting clean seed, whether their crop is to be sold as seed or sold on the market for commercial use. The variety or type of seed selected and planted depends upon the market demands as well as its adaptability to a locality.

Rotation of crops as well as clean seed is a big factor in keeping a field clear of noxious weeds and in preventing grain mixtures. Registered seed planted on a clean field will produce good seed for the next year and, with correct rotation, the crop will produce good seed for at least four years. It is advisable to purchase new seed at any time a mixture of seed or noxious weed seeds appear in the home-grown supply.

Test for Germination.

The Colorado seed laboratory at the college is equipped to handle seed samples for germination and purity tests. No charge is made for the first five samples submitted by farmers, and only small charges are made for additional samples.

The state seed registration service at the college, which is under the supervision of Mr. Stewart, provides for field inspections and grain registration in all parts of the state in order to make good seed available to Colorado farmers. County extension agents are able to furnish names of those who grow registered seed.

Feeding in Troughs Is Satisfactory to Fowls

Test work at several stations as well as practical experience indicate that there is no added virtue in making the laying flock scratch in the litter for the grain fed them in the afternoon or evening. Feeding this grain whether it be straight yellow corn or a mixture of two or three grains in troughs or feeders is to be recommended. Commonly some dirt or filth will stick to grain dropped in litter and make it more or less unpalatable.

As to the exercise that hens get in scratching in the litter: if the hens are healthy, fed a good ration and the house is warm and dry they will scratch whether grain is put in the litter for bait or no.

Agricultural Hints

Lettuce will often volunteer from seed scattered about the year before.

In feeding tests the result from sunflower silage have pretty generally been inferior to corn silage.

The Pennsylvania and Michigan stations report sunflower silage as decidedly less valuable than corn silage for cows.

Destroy quack grass as soon as it appears, is the warning issued recently by A. A. Hansen of Purdue university.

Scattering manure early in the year also prevents the fertilizing elements from leaching out, thereby increasing the value of the manure.

Spring is a good time not only to clean out all manure, but it is good time to clean, disinfect and whitewash the dairy barn.

In working mares avoid jerking, severe pulling, wading through deep mud, manure piles, or snow drifts. Let the work be light, easy and steady.

As a rule muck soils are deficient in potash and frequently in phosphorus. They generally require underdrainage. They are not well suited to the growth of clover or alfalfa.

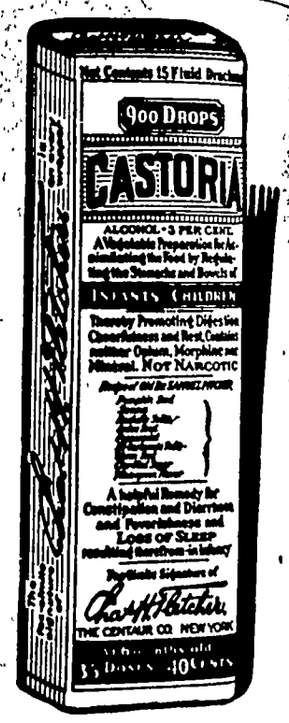
* * *

Anthracnose is a very common disease among beans, especially during a damp season. The fungus shows itself in black spots on the pods and does not add to the quality nor the appearance of the vegetables.

* * *

It is not absolutely necessary to grow lettuce from hothouse plants. It may also be grown from seed sown directly in the field almost any year, but the heads do not get as large and the number of heads which go to seed is much grea

An Ailing CHILD



Are you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish condition, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.

You can tell from the recipe on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

Way to Happiness Simple says California Physician

After 28 Years' Practice Describes Natural Treatment which Keeps People Well

"AFTER over 28 years of the study and practice of medicine, during which time I have treated and supervised the treatment of almost every variety of human illness," writes Dr. Martin J. Dobson of Los Angeles, "I believe I have discovered the greatest blessing that has been bestowed upon the human family. Statistics show that of all classes of persons, physicians and nurses live to a riper old age than any other class of people. I believe this is no doubt due to the fact that they know more about the importance of daily elimination.

Dr. Dobson's Discovery

"The remedy I am speaking of is colorless, tasteless, harmless to the most delicate alimentary tract, from infancy to old age. It is non-habit-forming, and it is essential to the smooth running efficiency of the human body, which needs lubrication just like any other machine.

"This remedy is Nujol.

"Most human ailments can be traced to the alimentary tract for either the main or the contributing cause, and most of these disorders can be prevented or cured through proper cleansing and regulating by the administration of Nujol as per instructions on the bottle and wrapper, or as ordered by the physician or nurse."

Nujol Laboratories considers it a privilege to publish Dr. Dobson's endorsement of Nujol.

Physicians and nurses themselves use and advise you to use Nujol regularly to clean the poisons out of your body (we all have them), because these poisons are what make us feel headachy, depressed, low in our minds.

It is always safe to use Nujol, because it is not a medicine; it contains absolutely no drugs; it cannot hurt even the littlest baby; it forms no habit; it is non-fattening. Nujol is harmless internal lubrication.

What This Should Mean to You

In the last few weeks we have had over 5,000 letters from people all over the world, telling us how Nujol has helped them to happiness and success by keeping their bodies internally clean. You can buy Nujol in sealed packages at any drug store. It costs but a few cents, and it will make you feel like a million dollars.

Start Nujol tonight. Use it regularly for two weeks, and learn the joy and the happiness that comes from buoyant, zestful health!

Design That Will Appeal to the More Conservative Home Builders

There is nothing striking or novel about this home, but it should appeal to many of the more conservative home builders as one which will maintain its appearance through many years because of its lack of passing faddish influence.

By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

While there is nothing striking or novel about this house, it should appeal to many of the more conservative home builders. The picture shows how attractive the exterior of a house may be made by the use of awnings, flower boxes, and flowers and shrubs around the foundation walls. This is not an expensive house to build, and has all the features of a modern up-to-date home including a sun room and a balcony above.

In construction this home reminds one of a New England design, as the lower part has the wide shake shingle, and the upper part the clapboard siding, which have been popular for centuries in New England. The shake shingles are a great deal thicker and considerably wider than the ordinary roof shingle, and when treated by a special process can be made to have the silver grayish tint that marks the older New England houses. This silver tone is the result of action of the salt iodine-laden air from the ocean.

This house is 24 feet wide and 28 feet deep and contains six rooms. It will be noted from the floor plans, which are also reproduced, that the living room is 23 feet wide and 12 feet deep. The sun room which adjoins it at the right is 9 feet 6 inches deep by 13 feet wide. An open fireplace at the other end of the living room is a feature which will make this room attractive and cheery in winter. An unusual feature of this house is the location of the stairs which are between the living room and the dining room, and the stair hall is the connection between these two rooms. The dining room is on a corner and is 11 feet by 13 feet. The kitchen is about 9 feet square and adjoining it is a breakfast room with a pullman dinette set. The stairs lead to a central hall on the second floor. At the head of the stairs is the bathroom, and on the other three corners are bedrooms. One is designated as a play room in the plan, but it is large enough for a bedroom.

This home is one of those designated for a rather large lot, as the house over all is 34½ feet wide. Trees and shrubs are needed to give this home an artistic setting.

Common Brick Field Enlarged by Skintling

Skintled brickwork stands unquestionably as the most radical development in masonry construction in the last 500 years.

Next to it was the face brick, produced by various treatments of its surface, giving it an attractiveness which no other brick had possessed. Then comes the recognition of the clinker brick, that long unnoticed Cinderella of the refuse pile which is now the favored pet of the architects.

No other masonry departures have affected brick use so decisively as have these three.

Up to the time some ingenious brickmaker cleverly tinkered the face brick to make it a thing of new and unusual appeal the common brick had had the exterior brick wall field all to itself. But the American love of change, of something new, speedily shifted popular favor to the new material.

Now skintled brickwork, which is simply an irregular laying of the colorful common bricks to produce a mass textural wall effect of singular allure and charm, is winning back the errant American favor to the common brick.

Aided greatly, it must be admitted, by the clinker brick, whose popularity, developed almost overnight, has been one of the notable triumphs of late year building material history.

The clinker brick is that brick which, in the kilns, form the arches and sides of the passage through which pass the flames and excessive heat that convert the raw mud rectangles into the finished brick.

This excessive heat fuses the clay. It runs in irregular, lavalike furrows or assumes a lacquerlike smoothness like the old Chinese porcelains, taking on at the same time all sorts of odd shapes.

These bricks cleverly intermingled in the skintled brick wall, add to the textural beauty a compelling appeal.

Copper Is Nonrustable

Copper cannot rust. It does not need the protection afforded by paint. On exposure copper assumes a light green color which serves not only as a protection to the metallic copper, but is fine appearing. If an immediate weathered effect is desired, an artificial finish may be used. This is applied at the factory.

Average Wooden House Rots in a Few Years

Although the average American wooden house is attacked by decay within a few years and is usually rotted to worthlessness with two generations, there is no reason why it could not be preserved for two, three or more centuries, says Prof. Emanuel Fritz, wood technologist of the University of California.

Carelessness, and not the perishable quality of wood itself, is to blame for the costly decay of the average frame dwelling, asserts the expert, writing in Good Housekeeping Magazine. Decay is evidence that the wood is holding a moisture content of more than 20 per cent.

Cheap, careless construction proves more expensive in time than the care and added expense necessary to make a house waterproof, he points out. The factors which usually bring about decay and which can easily be eliminated are: Poorly fitted joints, shingles, and door and window sills which permit water to enter and remain in the cracks; failure to insulate all parts of the house from the moisture of the ground with a masonry foundation of at least six inches; failure to ventilate the space between ground and floors where heat and moisture quickly develop the decaying fungi, and failure to see that no mounds of earth or rubbish are left under the house to convey moisture to the parts of the building which they touch.

Cement Plaster Makes Garage Walls Fireproof

Ideal garages are, of course, fireproof. Many useful methods of building garages at moderate cost have been developed. Cement plaster is an excellent material for such use.

One of the best systems for building fireproof where cement plaster is used is by means of expanded metal lathing in which is incorporated, every few inches, a steel rib to act as a stiffener. Such a wall requires but few steel uprights to which metal fabric is fixed, so it is exceedingly economical to use on walls and roof.

In building such a garage, it is only necessary to provide a concrete floor on cinders directly on the ground, sidewalk fashion. At proper intervals steel angle uprights are set into the floor, and the ribbed metal fabric is fastened to these. Cement plaster is afterwards coated inside and out.

MARKETING FARM PRODUCTS EASIER

Co-Operative Principle Seen as Solution of Problem.

Co-operative marketing of farm and ranch products was viewed as the ultimate solution of the chief problems of distribution now facing American agriculture by Cecil W. Creel, director of the Nevada agricultural extension service, in an address before the Western Cattle Marketing association assembled in San Francisco.

"The passage of the agricultural marketing act of last summer, the subsequent creation of the federal farm board, and the setting up by this board of national producer-owned and producer-controlled marketing associations is sufficient evidence, I believe," Creel stated, "that the co-operative marketing principle not only is justified, but now has the support of intelligent public opinion throughout the length and breadth of the land."

Pledging of assistance to the federal farm board in its program of organizing national co-operative agencies, the Nevada director stated, means that the co-operative movement will have the aid of county agents, county farm advisers and other extension workers in the various states.

Creel, who is chairman of the range live stock committee of the extension workers in the 12 western states, told the cattlemen what the extension service is doing to help the stock-raising industry.

Credit, in part, he said, for the study of public lands in the western states about to be inaugurated by the commission recently appointed by President Herbert Hoover is due extension workers in the West. At their meeting in Tucson in 1924, the western men proposed such a survey, with particular reference to the range live stock industry, and have repeatedly called it to the attention of officials in Washington.

Feed Value of Cooked Potatoes Equals Silage

In years like the present one there is considerable interest in the value of potatoes for live stock feeding. When the price of potatoes is low it is often advisable to divert a portion of the crop in order to obtain a reasonable return for the remainder.

Feeding tests have been made at a number of experiment stations, and results indicated that pound for pound corn silage, made from mature corn, and potatoes are approximately equal. In feeding potatoes they more nearly take the place of corn silage than any other feed because of their succulence. If the culls and unmarketable potatoes are used any returns from feeding them would be in the nature of clear gain. When the lower grades of potatoes bring anywhere from 20 to 25 cents per bushel at the loading station it probably is advisable to use them for feed.

Spring Lambs Pay Best, Says Stock Specialist

Early lambs sell highest. Fat spring lambs sold 3 cents higher last June than they did in August. Prices were still higher in May, says E. T. Robbins, live stock specialist at the University of Illinois.

This plan of lamb raising reduces chances of loss due to stomach worms and the lambs also escape the hot weather which slows up their gains. They bring in cash much earlier, too, as well as bringing more of it. Warren Moffett of Macoupin county sold 11 early lambs last spring for $35 a hundred, sending them to the St. Louis market. They averaged 60 pounds each, bringing him $21 a head. Moffett puts his ewes on rich pasture a month before mating them and starts feeding grain two weeks before.

Legumes for Lambs Are Successful at Illinois

A four-year feeding test recently completed at the Illinois College of Agriculture emphasizes the importance of legumes in fattening lambs. An example of the successful use of legumes for this purpose is shown in one report of nine lots which were fed corn and alfalfa hay and gained 100 pounds for every 350 pounds of corn and 458 pounds of alfalfa hay fed. Self-feeding of corn was found to result in considerable losses. However, self feeding of a mixture of ground corn and ground alfalfa hay proved a safe method of feeding and produced faster gains and better finished carcasses than hand-feeding. Corn alone did not prove satisfactory.

Eradicate Lice

A mixture of one-half powdered sabadilla seed and one-half sulphur rubbed into the hair of horses or cattle is a fairly satisfactory means of ridding the animals of lice. When the weather become warm enough so that the horse can be washed without danger of his taking cold, it would be preferable to give him a thorough washing with a stock dip solution. These stock dips, if used according to directions, will not cause the hair to come out.

They'd Be Surprised

The Wife (angrily)—I can't see anything so hilariously funny about me attending a meeting of the Browning Literary club.

Her Hub—It isn't you attending it, my dear, that amuses me. But I was thinking of how the Brownings would turn over in their graves if they could listen to the discussions of bobbed hair, short skirts, beauty treatments and the best places to buy hats you women carry on at the club named after them.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

This Little Girl Got Well Quick

"Just after her third birthday, my little daughter, Connie, had a serious attack of intestinal flu," says Mrs. H. W. Turnage, 217 Cadwalder St., San Antonio, Texas. "It left her very weak and pale. Her bowels wouldn't act right, she had no appetite and nothing agreed with her.

"Our physician told us to give her some California Fig Syrup. It made her pick up right away, and now she is as robust and happy as any child in our neighborhood. I give California Fig Syrup full credit for her wonderful condition. It is a great thing for children."

Children like the rich, fruity taste of California Fig Syrup, and you can give it to them as often as they need it, because it is purely vegetable. For over 50 years leading physicians have recommended it, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows it gives satisfaction. Nothing compares with it as a gentle but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It regulates the stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup, so look for the name "California" on the carton to be sure you get the genuine.

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?

MARCH FIRST FINDS MANY ON MOVING LIST HERE

Its A Ring-a-Round The Rosy List In Many Instances

Each year The Times endeavors to publish an accurate "moving list" for this community. Again this spring we are publishing the list of those moving from one place to another in this community. We try to get a list of all changes, and should we overlook any changes, please notify this office so we may publish it next week.

Look over the list and find who is your new neighbor.

To begin with, Geo. Yoder from Woolstock, Iowa, moved onto the place vacated by W. O. Lassahn. W. O. Lassahn moved on the place vacated by Walter Read. Sometime ago Walter Read moved onto the A. R. White farm just southeast of town. A. R. White had a sale last fall and spent the winter in Colorado, but he and his family have returned to Iowa and will locate in Klemme.

George Alden, who has been working the past year for E. J. Arnold, has rented a farm and has moved to the N. G. Moberly place, vacated by Benj. Mullin, who has moved on one of Mrs. Jennie Buss' farms, vacated by Harry Buss, who moved to town recently and is now living in Mrs. Wm. Straatman's house.

Henry Brandt, from Britt, will work for E. J. Arnold in place of George Alden.

Al. Mayhew from near Ventura, has moved onto the place vacated by Walter Anderson, east of Klemme and Anderson has moved to the place vacated by John Ball, further east.

Irvin Smith has moved onto the Joe Lawhorn farm. M. Hegg from near Kanawha has moved onto the farm occupied by the Hippen Bros., who have moved onto separate farms in the neighborhood of Garner.

Roy Cordes from near Goodell, has moved onto the G. A. Pabst farm. Verner Lewis, who has been living in the house, has moved to the Leonard Sampson farm which was recently bought by Harry E. Trumbell; and Harold Johnson will farm the land.

Alvin Goll has rented his father's farm, and Paul Goll who has been farming it, moves to the Julius Priebe farm. The Julius Priebe family will move to town and will live in their new home purchased from Ing. Lauritsen, where Ed. Jacobs has been living. Ed. Jacobs will move into the house to be vacated by Jim Thomas. For a time the Thomas family will reside in the rooms over Henry Lewis' store until their own home is completed.

Harry Pringnitz has moved to the old Schlei farm which has been farmed by A. J. Schlei who has had a sale and is retiring.

Ned Howard has moved onto one of Mrs. Fred Haupt's farms, vacated by J. H. Lynch.

Chris Back has moved to a farm near Garner, and the place he vacated will be farmed by Ewald Josten, son of Henry A. Josten.

Harlow Helps will live on the old Gintner place.

Jacob Hess has moved to the Mrs. Emma Larsen farm and E. C. Gifford has moved onto a farm near Kanawha.

E. J. Stokesbary has moved to Mrs. Reuber's farm and Walter Bredlow to the Geo. Ulrich farm.

Albert Schlichting has moved on to the A. C. Carpenter farm.

Theodore Albers moves to the old Joe E. Johnson farm vacated by Jacob DeVries, who moves to the place vacated by Harm A. Christians. Harm Christians will live in the house on the farm formerly rented by Art Brouwer, who moves to the place vacated by Frank Patterson, on the Ventura gravel road. Frank Patterson will live on a farm eight miles east of Klemme.

J. H. Lynch will move to the

SAW ROBIN MONDAY—A SURE SIGN OF SPRING

The balmy days of the past week are evidently a fore-runner of nice spring days to come, or else nature is kidding itself along.

The first person to report having seen a robin in this vicinity was Miss Ethel Lemke, who reported to The Times that she saw a robin in their grove Monday morning.

Ole Mathewson, of Crystal Lake reports to The Times that he saw a fresh pocket gopher mound Sunday.

Ye Editor dug up some parsnips out of the garden Monday and the net results were a mess of parsnips and two big fish worms. We have the worms safely stowed away in a tin can for the first day we go fishing—which will be seon if this fine weather keeps up.

But, we wonder if nature is only kidding North Iowa!

DEATH CLAIMED MR. DICK SWALVE

FUNERAL RITES HELD HERE WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

Had Been In Poor Health For Some Time; Died During Operation

This community was greatly saddened and shocked when it was learned that Mr. Dick Swalve had died suddenly Saturday morning, while undergoing a minor operation. Mr. Swalve had been in poor health for some time and last fall had an operation performed to give him relief from severe headaches, and other trouble. Apparently he was making a good recovery and an other operation for the removal of infected tonsils was expected to restore him to his former health. He passed away during the second operation Saturday morning, death being due to the gathering of a small clot on a vital part of the brain, causing instant death.

Obituary

The following obituary was read at the funeral services held at the Reformed Church Wednesday afternoon:

"Dirk Swalve was born on the 31st day of July, in the year of our Lord 1885 at Freeport, Stephenson County, Illinois. When he was 3 years old the parents moved to the Dakota Territory (now South Dakota) and from there to Ackley, Iowa, and in 1890 to the Swalve homestead south of Klemme.

"Here the family became members of the Reformed Church, and Dirk was baptized by Rev. Hy. Treik pastor of the Elltown and Klemme Congregations. He atended the public and church schools, being a member of the first confirmation class of the Klemme congregation. His class mates were: Henry Buseman, Henry Knoke, Herman Priebe, Albert Barz, Wilhelmina Reichardt, Sarah Thiemann, Pauline Reichardt, and Hiskea Swalve. This class was confirmed May 18th, 1902 by Rev. Albert Muehlmeier.

"On the 2nd of March 1910 he was joined in holy wedlock to Miss Frances Behrends of Ackley. The young couple located on a farm near the home of Mr. Swalve's parents. Two daughters and one son brought joy to the parents heart and home. Mr. Swalve was a home loving man, who dlighted in providing and caring for his family. In his community he enjoyed the respect of all who knew him. As a member of the church he and his family were faithful in attending both church and Sunday school services. For years Mr. Swalve suffered severe headaches, until his condition became so serious that an operation became necessary. This operation was performed Nov. 20th at the Mercy hospital at Mason City. The specialist advised him after this operation it would be necessary to remove his tonsils before he coold regain his health. On the 22nd of February this second operation was performed at Klemme. Sudden death claimed him in the midst of the operation. His age at the time of his death was 44 years, 6 months and 22 days.

"Surviving him and mourning his death are: his wife; two daughters, Florence and Carrie; and his son, Clarence; his father and step-mother, Mr. and Mrs. Bern Swalve. (His mother preceded him in death Sept. 14th, 1925.) The following brothers and sisters: Mrs. Herman Pirebe, Mrs. Henry Behrend, Mrs. Charles Schuettpeltz, Mr. John Swalve, Mrs. Gilbert Schaeper, Mrs. Ingverd Lauritzen, Mr. Ben Swalve."

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the home and at 2:00 o'clock at the Reformed Church. Rev. Pannkuk assisted Rev. Grosshuesch at the services. Burial was made in the Klemme Cemetery.

A meeting for the south half of Ell Township Co-operators of the Farm Bureau Ladies was held last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Peter Josten. The atendance was good and the lesson on Diet for the School Child, was greatly enjoyed.

DOINGS AT SCHOOL THE PAST WEEK

BRITT TAKES ALL HONORS IN COUNTY TOURNAMENT

Klemme Will Play Corwith There On This Saturday Evening

The County Tournament last week end ended decidedly in favor of Britt for they won both of the trophies, the one for the champion high school team, and the other for the grade champions. Garner, as runners up, took home the tournament ball as their reward. Our grade team won their first game against Corwith, but lost one to Britt in the finals. Next week our team will be at Goldfield playing in the first round of the state tournament. We hope for better luck.

Play At Corwith Saturday

We have no more games here but will play another at Corwith on Saturday night, one that had to be postponed on account of change of tournament dates. This should be a good game and as it is on a large floor it will give our team good practice preparatory to the sectional tournament next week.

Declam Winners Speak Again

Our first place winners in our local declamatory contest will again speak on Wednesday night of this week at Belmond against Rowan, Dows and Belmond. They have improved since speaking here and we believe they will make a good showing.

P. T. A. Visited Night Classes

Our night classes held last Thursday evening were well attended. Many who could not otherwise visit schools were on hand and there were relatively few absent from the classes. Both pupils and parents displayed considerable interest in the venture which was promoted by the local P. T. A.

Following the class periods all retired to our gymnasium for a business session, refreshments, and games. A charge was made for refreshments which after expenses were deducted is left available for prizes for our local spelling bee. The P. T. A. voted to contribute additional prize money enough to total $13.75 which will be distributed among the best three spellers of each of the grades from 2 to 8 inclusive, and to the best one in the whole school.

Band And Glee Club Work

Our young band is still going strong and should next summer be able to furnish Saturday evening concerts for our community.

Our Girls Glee Club are earnestly hoping they may be invited to sing in the county musical festival to be staged at Garner April 25. They have been doing excellent work.

Report Cards Out Next Week

This week ends our first six-weeks period of our second semester and reports of the progress and standing of each student will go to each home some day next week. We urge they be given the attention they deserve by parents. Often those at home can provide a stimulus that is lacking or impossible at school. It sometimes takes the most earnest co-operation of both the home and school to prevent failure on the part of some students.

Will Move Reformed Church Next Week

Schleusner & Niemeyer, of Garner last week were the successful bidders to move the Reformed Church.

They expect to move the church next week. The building will be moved directly north of its present location to a position at the south side of the parsonage, where it will remain until the new church has been erected, and it will then be torn down.

SOME OF THE THINGS WHICH GRANDMOTHER MADE

She Used Plenty Of Butter In Her Cookies That Were So Good

In the transition from the farm of twenty-five years ago to the modern farm of today, personal health is the important factor which has been overlooked in the agricultural set-up of today. In marketing his dairy products, so necessary for best health and vigor, the farmer has used less butter, milk and cream at his own table. Such is the opinion of the Hancock County Creamery Association.

"One of the things about the "good old days" was the liberal use of common every-day foods—bread, plenty of butter, milk, cheese, and garden vegetables. When Grandmother reigned in the kitchen, melted butter was added to vegetables to make them tasty—just as a matter of course. The big blue pitcher of milk always had its place at the end of the table—and it held a glass for each one of the family. Curds with cream was a popular breakfast dish. Cakes were always made delicious with butter. Cookies, better-made because they were butter-made, filled the cookie jar.

"Dairy products were used abundantly in Grandfather's day, because they cost nothing but the labor. But they are economical today, too. because they are essential to health.

"Today, instead of trying to find a substitute for these home products—milk, cream and butter—Grandmother's example is the best one to follow, both from the standpoint of health and prosperity without mentioning flavor."

AVERY FARM BUREAU MET AT THE CENTER SCHOOL

A Community Dinner Was Feature Of Monthly Meeting In Avery

The Avery Township Farm Bureau held their February meeting at the Avery Center School House on Saturday, February 22, from 11:30 a. m. until 3:30 p. m. A community dinner was served at noon in the basement.

Mrs. Henry Busse and Mrs. E. J. Nelson had arranged the program but due to sickness in the family Mrs. Nelson was unable to be present.

The report of the state Farm Bureau Federation meeting held in Des Moines was given by ou rdirector, Mr. Prelipp. Community singing opened the program. Readings, duet and singing was given by the children of District No. 5. Mr. J. J. Cook played two selections on his violin. Mrs. Kearney read two poems Mr. Cook talked on the products which are sold by the I. F. B. Service. A fertilizer discussion by the men. Mrs. Henry Busse and J. J. Cook whistled the tune of Old Black Joe, which was rendered real well. Mrs. Howard Barger gave a short talk on the 4-H Girls Club for the year. The singing of America concluded the program.

"LOYAL WORKERS" HAD DINNER AT E. J. ARNOLD HOME

Over Sixty Persons Enjoyed Sunday Dinner And Social Time

Sunday the "Loyal Workers" had a class social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Arnold. This class of the Methodist Church ha sa membership of over 40 people and with the exception of three families who were absent on account of sickness, all were present.

The sumptuous dinner was served cafeteria style to some 60 guests. The need of the physical body being supplied, all gathered in the large living room to enjoy the fine program which had been so aptly prepared. After this the afternoon was spent socially and talking over future plans in the service of God's kingdom.

A vote of thanks for the generous hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold, and plans for more socials closed the day which was much enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Ing. Lauritsen and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Swalve, of Sheboygan, Wis., arrived in Klemme Monday evening, being called here by the death of Mr. Dick Swalve.

INSTITUTE WINNERS GIVEN CASH AWARDS

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT THE COUNTY INSTITUTE

Capacity Crowd Hears Mr. Henry Wallace Friday Evening

The county-wide institute held at Garner on Thursday and Friday of last week was very well attended Thursday afternoon found Harry Linn, the colt breaking artist, demonstrating his skill at the Casper Pannhoff farm east of Garner. One hundred fifty people were present and all expressed the opinion that Harry surely "knew his stuff." The same afternoon found C. V. Holsinger, specialist from the Iowa State College discussing Flowers and Gardens with the women at Zeiger's Hall. In the evening, Harry Linn gave a short talk on his experiences in transporting a trainload of mules to India. Following Mr. Linn, Wm. McArthur of Mason City, judge of the exhibits, gave a short talk on Corn Breeding and Selection. Foll-Mr. McArthur, the Liberty Township Farm Bureau presented the three-act play, "What About Betty?" The entire cast proved to be specialist. and every ne expressed their feelings by saying "they didn' tknow that one township possessed such an array of talent."

Friday afternoon at 1:30, Prof. C. V. Holsinger talked to the men on "Trucks." F. D. Butcher gave a very interesting talk on Rodent Control, and Eradication at Zeiger's Hall He addressed the women on Garden Insects and Control and Prof. Holsinger talked to the women at Zeiger's hall.

Henry Wallace, Of Walace's Farmer Gives Talk

The Institute was brought to a close with an address by Mr. Henry Wallace of the Wallace's Farmor & Iowa Homestead. He spoke to a capacity crowd and very ably compared European agriculture with our agriculture.

Award Winners Announced

The following is a list of the awards on the exhibits at the Institute:

Ten Ears Of White Corn
1st—$3.00, C. A. Hartwig
2nd—$2.00, E. Boehnke
3rd—$1.00, Joe Asche
4th—75c, Ed Boehnke
5th—50c, Oscar Hartwig.

Ten Ears Yellow Corn
1st—$3.00, Casper Pannhoff
2nd—$2.00, C. A. Hartwig
3rd—$1.00, Loren Abele
4th—75c, Frank Martinek
5th—50c Mitchell Sprole.

Single Ear White Corn
1st—$1.00, William Boehnke
2nd—75c, Harvey Thorne
3rd—50c, Joe Asche.

Single Ear Yellow Corn
1st—$1.00, Arno Olson
2nd—75c, Perry Larson
3rd—50c, Oscar Hartwig.

Champion Ten Ears Yellow
$3.00—Casper Pannhoff.

Champion Single Ear Yellow
$1.00—Arno Olson.

Oats
1st—$2.00, Harry Anderson

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

President Hoover Tries to Speed Up Senate—French Crisis Delays Parley.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT HOOVER returned to Washington from his Florida trip with the conviction that congress, especially the senate, must be prodded into speedier action if business were not to suffer seriously. So he invited leading Republicans of both houses to breakfast at the White House and asked them what could be done to expedite the work on the tariff bill so that other important measures could be passed. The replies he received were not encouraging. Senator Watson, floor leader of the upper house, was of the opinion that the tariff measure might be passed by March 10, but was far from certain. Representative Tilson and others from the lower house thought the house would get through the remaining appropriation bills within the next three or four weeks and then would take three-day recesses while the senate was catching up. Mr. Tilson hoped congress might adjourn about June 1, but admitted that little legislation would be enacted unless the senate speeded up.

Mr. Hoover was especially concerned about the slowing down of business recovery due to uncertainty regarding the tariff, and also because delay in passing pending appropriation bills might necessitate the laying off of from 10,000 to 20,000 men employed on public works construction. The legislative program of the Wickersham law enforcement commission was not mentioned, indicating that this is not of such pressing concern to the President as the tariff bill and appropriation bills affecting public works. The Republican senate leaders informed the President that the coalition of Democrats and radical Republicans was in complete control of the tariff situation.

THIS breakfast aroused the ire of the Democrats in both houses and they spent hours in attacking Mr. Hoover. Senator Pat Harrison sought to blame the Republicans for delay in disposing of the tariff bill and asked Senator Watson if the President had promised to sign the measure if it reached him in its present form as amended by the coalition; which question, Watson declared, was silly. Representative Byrns of Tennessee, chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee, asserted that the President having claimed responsibility for prosperity for the Republican party, must bear the blame for unsatisfactory conditions. He denied the announcements of administration spokesmen, including Secretary of Labor Davis, that business is on the up grade.

Garner of Texas, minority leader of the house, issued a statement saying: "The titular party leader in the White House is lacking in either courage or capacity to lead, and the consequent bewilderment of congressional leadership is a reflection of the deepening disappointment of the American people in the promised and expected major part the President was to play in shaping national affairs to the better ends of national needs."

MARION DEVRIES, former member of the house and former member of the court of customs appeals, admitted to the senate lobby committee he is a contingent fee lobbyist, and confronted the committee with excerpts from an opinion from the United States Supreme court upholding the right of an attorney to represent clients for or against legislation on such a basis.

Devries declared he already has received a total of approximately $50,000 from clients interested in tariff legislation and expects an additional $25,000 if certain provisions or rates sought by his clients are included in the pending tariff bill when it becomes law.

TWO more days were given to the wets in the hearing on dry law modification measures before the house judiciary committee, and they took full advantage of their opportunity. A recess was then taken until the following week, when the drys were to be heard. Representative Linthicum of Maryland, generalissimo of the foes of prohibition, made the opening statement and then followed an imposing list of witnesses. These included Capt. W. H. Stayton, chairman of the board of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment; Henry B. Joy, Detroit millionaire and former head of the Packard Motor company; Dr. Samuel Harden Church, Pittsburgh, president of Carnegie institute; Dr. Charles Morris, New York health officer; Col. Grayson M. P. Murphy, New York director of Bethlehem Steel company; Benedict Crowell, Cleveland, former assistant secretary of war; Dr. L. W. Williams, New York, head of the New York Academy of Medicine, and Ralph M. Shaw, attorney, of Chicago.

Senator Brookhart of Iowa announced that unless the senate judiciary committee reported favorably one of the two pending resolutions for a sweeping investigation of prohibition enforcement methods, he would carry the fight to the senate floor. "If there is corruption in the prohibition forces," said he, "we've got to know it and to know who is to blame for it."

FRANCE'S cabinet crisis stopped up the proceedings of the naval parley in London for the time being, since the entire French delegation withdrew, announcing it would not take part in further discussions until a new government had been formed. The downfall of Premier Tardieu and his ministry, which was due to its defeat on an important tax measure, might conceivably have a marked effect on the course of the negotiations in the parley. If the French Socialists and radicals, who are committed to reduction of armaments, consented to take part in the new government, the demands of Premier Tardieu for a fleet of 724,000 tons might be greatly scaled down so that the figures could be met by Italy, and would not force the British to repudiate the Hoover-MacDonald bargain of last summer. In this lies really the only hope that the conference can arrive at a pact providing for actual reduction of naval armaments. Otherwise, all it can be expected to evolve will be a treaty for limitation, with possibly the mutual security pact asked by France. It is hardly to be expected that the United States would enter into such a security treaty since that would involve entanglement in European affairs. Indeed, Senator Robinson told the American correspondents the United States wouldn't join in any pact requiring it to employ armed forces to enforce "obligations assumed with other nations." The American delegation had approved this statement in advance.

Dino Grandi gave out the formal statement of Italy's naval policy and requirements on Wednesday. Besides reiterating the demand for parity with any other continental power—meaning France—he upheld the thesis that naval needs are not absolute, as France claims, but are relative, and declared that no level of tonnage is too low providing other countries reduce proportionately.

SOVIET Russia's war on God is causing a lot of excitement in many parts of the world and Christian organizations, and individuals are urging "intervention," though it is difficult to see by what right any other nation could interfere with what so far is wholly a domestic issue in Russia. The campaign is being carried on vigorously by the Militant Godless league with apparently the full support of the Soviet government, and countless churches in many cities and towns have been closed as places of worship and converted to other uses. The league bitterly resents the protests in other countries and defies and villifies Pope Pius who issued an encyclical against "persecutions of Christians in Russia." Sergius, who was set up as the metropolitan of the Orthodox Russian church to succeed the late Patriarch Tikhon, and who says he represents "some tens of millions of faithful," is entirely subservient to the Soviet government, and in an interview given to foreign correspondents he asserted he and his ecclesiastical collaborators were quite satisfied with the position of the church and Christians in Russia. He said the pope was the enemy of the Orthodox church and that his statements against the Soviet Union were unchristian and unjust.

The tone of the Soviet press in commenting on the matter is violent and defiant. The Leningrad branch of the Godless league promises that atheism will be expented to other lands until "the godless workmen of the whole world will convert the Vatican into a museum and a scarecrow of the Roman pope will stand near a scarecrow of the pagan Siberian shaman as monuments to the errors and fictions disseminated by priests during thousands of years. The warfare on religion is a fight for socialism."

MOSCOW Isvestia, the organ of the Soviet Union, asserts that Bolshevism is facing the most critical period in its relations with capitalistic nations and that a new war between Russia and the rest of the world is certainly and inevitably approaching. It says that the Soviet government has decided, in order to protect itself, to increase its propaganda among discontented classes in foreign countries, and that through sabotage, strikes, and terrorism, any attacks against the Red home land will be made ineffective, according to the paper. It also predicts that capitalism will be painfully astonished by events in their countries should they attempt to attack Russia.

FEARS that Commander Byrd and his expedition would be compelled to remain for more months in the Antarctic were dispelled when news came by radio from "Little America," his headquarters, that the relief ship, City of New York, had made its way into the Bay of Whales sheathed in ice and that the expedition a few hours later sailed for home. The City of New York had been 44 days on the way from Dunedin, New Zealand. It was greatly delayed in searching for leads through the vast ice pack and was blown far out of its course.

GEN. UMBERTO NOBILE is no longer to be considered a hero, for the Italian government has made public the record of the investigation into the disastrous flight of the dirigible Italia in the Arctic regions, and it brands Nobile's conduct as utterly indefensible. Captains Mariano and Zappi are given a clean slate by the investigating commission.

THE body of Earl Borland, companion of Carl Ben Eielson, noted Arctic flyer, has been found near the wreckage of their plane which crashed November 9 last, 90 miles southeast of North Cape. A few days later the searchers also found the body of Eielson buried deep under the snowdrifts.

PREPARATIONS for further warfare were reported in China, where the Nationalist government was confronted by another revolutionary movement, largely in Honan province. The Shansi and other forces were said to have mobilized and started southward to attack the armies of President Kai-shek.

Mo Te-hui, president of the Chinese Eastern railway, went to Mukden for the avowed purpose of trying to purchase the Russian interest in the railway in accordance with the terms of the 1924 agreement. He said if he was unable to arrange for the purchase he would try to persuade Soviet Russia to agree on the joint operation of the road on a strictly commercial basis.

ALEXANDER P. MOORE of Pittsburgh, recently appointed ambassador to Poland, succumbed to tuberculosis of the throat and lungs at Los Angeles, never having the chance to serve in his post at Warsaw. Besides being a well-known newspaper publisher, Mr. Moore had gained distinction in the field of diplomacy. President Harding made him ambassador to Spain, and under President Coolidge he was ambassador to Peru, and in both posts he was eminently successful. He was a life-long Republican save that he supported Col. Theodore Roosevelt in the Bull Moose campaign.

Around Orchard

BANDAGES USEFUL TRAPS FOR MOTHS

Paper-Burlap Band Is Favored and Not Expensive.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Bandages on apple trees are not necessarily a sign they are suffering from injuries. The chances are that the orchardist has bandaged the trees to set a trap for an old enemy, the codling moth, an insect which causes a $20,000,000 loss to apple growers annually. When the larve of this insect are ready to make their cocoons they look for a sheltered spot on the tree, and if there is a band around the trunk, that makes an ideal place.

This method of trapping larve of the codling moth was generally used before arsenical sprays were developed, and is still used as a supplementary control measure. Recent work of the United States Department of Agriculture sheds new light on this practice.

With the ordinary paper or burlap bands commonly used it is necessary to send men through the orchard at intervals to destroy the larve collected in the bands. In an effort to eliminate this job, specialists of the department have been experimenting with bands treated with various chemicals which will kill the larve. They report that a combination of betanaphthol and lubricating oil gives satisfactory results and causes no apparent injury to the trees.

Further experiments will be necessary before the department can state conclusively that no injury to the tree will result from the use of these treated bands. For this reason it is recommended that all tests with such bands be made on a small scale and only on trees of full-bearing capacity.

In a test comparing various materials for bands it was found that those made of paper burlap were equal or superior to those of 3-ply cloth burlap, the kind commonly used in commercial orchards. The paper-burlap band is much less expensive than the one made of burlap, which means a substantial saving to fruit growers. Heavy roofing paper and light crepe paper were the least effective materials tried.

Too Much Wood Left in Pruning the Raspberry

When it comes to pruning the black raspberry, most growers leave too much wood—that is, leave too many canes and too long side shoots, or canes, on the upright canes. In the spring, when the young canes are about three feet high, nip their tips off, thus causing them to branch and become sturdy and strong, forming a well-shaped bush. No further nipping or heading back, is necessary until the following spring before any signs of growth takes place. Go through at that time and cut out the weak, slender, unevenly-branched ones, leaving not over six or seven of the strongest sturdiest ones, and the laterals or side branches, on; these should be cut back to four or five inches. Here is where most growers make their mistake in pruning black raspberries—they leave these side branches too long.

Prune Blackberries and Raspberries Properly

To prevent the new shoots of both blackberries and raspberries from making long weak canes which are likely to bend over and break down and damage the fruit coming in contact with the soil, the tips of these canes should be pinched out as soon as they have reached a height of from 18 to 24 inches. The pinching has the effect of causing the canes to thicken and send out side shoots or laterals near the top. On these laterals most of the fruit is likely to be produced. To prevent over-bearing, it is often necessary to shorten the laterals in the spring.

Feed Bees Candy Early in Months of Spring

Every bee owner should open the hives early in the spring and examine the stores to see if the bees have enough food to enhance brood-rearing. If there is not plenty of good honey in the hive and none available, the best policy is to supply bee candy. Frequently, however, one of the swarms will have been winter-killed and a comb or two of honey may be left. This honey is preferable above candy. But in case there is no available honey, a bee candy may be made and fed with every assurance of success.

Poor Grape Pruning

Poor pruning of grapes is only one of the factors that affect ripening, but it is a very important one. The leaving of too little fruiting wood will, on the other hand, induce a rank growth of foliage accompanied by a light crop of fruit. In such cases the crop may be further reduced by the resultant shade which furnishes a greater opportunity for the germination of black rot spores, which is one of the most destructive diseases of grapes.

Mild Winters Not Right for Trees

Definite Amount of Severe Weather Required for Needed Changes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Severe winters in the North usually mean short crops, but with peaches in Georgia and apples southward from Virginia, the rule works just the other way. This is because temperate-zone fruit trees require a definite amount of cold weather during which certain changes are carried on which prepare them for growth in the spring. This period of "rest," which is so definitely required for many trees and plants, is really therefore a period of slight but important changes in the trees.

Growth Delayed in Spring.

Dr. M. B. Waite, of the United States Department of Agriculture, observed many years ago, that our northern fruits, such as the peach, when cultivated too far south in Georgia, frequently exhibit symptoms of delayed growth in the spring, attributable to lack of sufficient resting period. Dr. Lee M. Hutchins, of the same department, has recently observed the same phenomena and points out that as a rule, in about one year in five, the mild winters of Georgia do not give peach trees the required amount of resting period, and the result is what peach growers call "prolonged dormancy." When this happens, peach trees in the lower portion of the state fail to bloom at their regular time. Finally they bloom, from a week to several weeks late.

This disturbance may interfere with the setting of the fruit, and the ripening of the fruit may also be thrown off schedule and come in with the crop in other parts of the state farther north, which tends to make an overcrowded market.

Albany Is Limit.

Albany is given by Doctor Hutchins as about the southern limit for the commercial production of our standard varieties of peaches. South of this limit the trees during most winters do not get enough cold weather for maximum production. The same principle applies to apples in a zone much farther north.

Corn and Peas Favored as Home Garden Staples

High quality sweet corn can be grown in most any garden the season through, say horticulturists of the University of Minnesota. Starting with Early Dow, which is about ten days ahead of Golden Bantam, or with Pickaninny, a rather low growing, bushy type, with ears near the ground, the gardener can follow with successive plantings of the standard Bantam and have highly flavored toothsome ears for his table until early fall.

Peas, a good second for corn in the garden, should be planted as soon as the ground can be worked. Alaska and Thomas Laxton are good early varieties. Those recommended for later use are Little Marvel, a dwarf which is fairly early; Gradus and Telephone, both of which are late, and Alderman, a tall, large podded plant which also produces rather late in the season.

New Zealand spinach and chard will furnish minerals, vitamines and bulk to the diet in the form of greens all through the season, and one or the other, or both, if there is room in the garden, should be grown.

Agricultural Hints

Kill the early weeds.

* * *

A good crop cannot be grown on an impoverished soil.

Get a wheel hoe, so the boys can take care of the garden.

Make the change gradually from dry hay to green grass.

* * *

Clover hay is two-and-a-half and alfalfa three-and-a-half times as rich in digestible protein as is timothy.

* * *

Sacked limestone can be piled in the field and covered with building paper or straw. Haul it this winter.

* * *

The use of high-grade seed potatoes would increase the returns from the potato crop of the country by many millions of dollars.

* * *

Probably the largest single item in tractor cost is depreciation, followed closely by fuel cost. An idle tractor is a poor investment.

* * *

Superphosphate is equally well adapted for use on the dropping boards of the poultry house as in the gutters of the dairy barn.

Fence posts, unless they are of cedar and oak, and cheap, should be given a preservative treatment before they are set in the ground.

Any silage remaining in the silo can be kept over for next winter with little loss by covering with roofing paper and weighting down to expel and keep out air.

* * *

Tests at the various experiment stations indicate that both wire and cloth base glass substitutes lose at least one-fourth of their efficiency in transmitting the ultra violet rays when they become dusty or dirty.

John's Mother Praises Doct

There isn't a mother living who won't agree that no half-sick child should be the subject for an experiment with medicines of uncertain merit. When your child is bilious, headachy, half-sick, feverish, restless, coated tongue, bad breath, no a tite or energy, you know that times out of ten it's a sign his stomach and bowels need pur And when you know that for fifty years leading physicians endorsed one preparation for this dition, there doesn't seem to be reason for "trying" things.

Rich, fruity California Fig S clears the little stomach and bo gently, harmlessly and in a hurry regulates the bowels, gives tone strength to them and to the stom and helps to give your child strength, energy and vitality. The Story of a Forgotten Battle

THE BATTLE OF ROGERS' ROCK
(Painting by Ferris; courtesy Glens Falls Insurance Co.)

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THIS is the story of a forgotten battle in American history and of a forgotten leader. It took place 172 years ago and was only a minor incident in the long series of wars which decided definitely the question of French or English supremacy on the continent of North America. So that may be why it is forgotten. He made an enviable record during those wars but when there came the war from which we date the history of the United States as a nation, he "guessed wrong" as to where his allegiance should be. And that may be the reason why he is forgotten.

But in the military annals of America the Battle of Rogers' Rock, fought on March 13, 1758, near Lake George in New York holds a place that is almost unique. Attacked by a force of 100 French and 600 Indians, Maj. Robert Rogers and 180 of his Rogers' Rangers, fought from three o'clock in the afternoon until nightfall before retreating. In that battle the Rangers killed 150 of the enemy but they suffered a loss of 100 killed—one of the largest casualty lists, in proportion to the number of men engaged, it is believed, in American warfare.

Yet this was only one of a number of desperate enterprises which made the name Rogers' Rangers a synonym for a daring and resourceful type of fighting man and which caused his enemies to regard him as a "dreaded partisan." Rogers was born in Dunbarton, N. H., in 1727, the son of James Rogers, an early settler of that place. His youth was spent as a hunter and trapper in the forests of New England and Canada and his familiarity with the Indians and Indian methods of warfare were to make him invaluable to the British generals in the French and Indian war.

At the opening of that conflict in 1755 Rogers led a force of hardy woodsmen from New Hampshire to Albany, N. Y., where the British and Colonial forces were being assembled for an attack on the French forts at Crown Point and Ticonderoga. He is described at that time as "over six feet high and physically the most powerful man in the army." Sir William Johnson, the great Colonial leader, knowing of Rogers' reputation, used him and his men as scouts. Making his headquarters at Fort William Henry, a new post erected by the British at the south end of Lake George, Rogers began a series of forays against the French and their Indian allies.

So valuable did Rogers and his New Hampshire woodsmen prove to be as scouts and fighters that at the opening of the spring campaign in 1756, he was given a special commission by the Earl of Loudon, commander in chief of the British forces in America, to raise a picked corps of bush fighters who were to receive the same pay as the regulars but who were to carry on their operations in their own way. Thus came into existence that splendid body of military irregulars, known as Rogers' Rangers, whose prowess won the respect of both the British and the French. One of Rogers' lieutenants was another New Hampshireman, John Stark, later the victor at the battle of Bennington. Another who was closely associated with Rogers in some of his most daring exploits was from Connecticut—Israel Putnam, "Old Put" of Bunker Hill and Long Island. Both Stark and Putnam received from Rogers training in military leadership which stood them in good stead during the Revolution. But the fame which it brought them passed by their old commander and comrade-in-arms.

From time to time during the war the Rangers were gradually increased from their original strength of 62 men to more than a thousand. Their official instructions were "to use their best endeavors to distress the French and their allies, by sacking, burning and destroying their houses, barns, barracks, canoes, bateaux, etc., and by killing their cattle of every kind; and at all times to endeavor to destroy their convoys of provision, by land and water, in every part of the country." And no body of troops ever carried out their orders more thoroughly than did these partisans. At that time the French were offering the Indians sixty francs for every English scalp taken but they would willingly have paid a hundred times that amount for the scalp of Robert Rogers. All during 1756 the Rangers harassed the enemy.

But the French were soon to have an opportunity to pay off some old scores against the daring Ranger. On March 10, 1758, Rogers was ordered to lead an expedition of 180 Rangers against Ticonderoga. Since the capture of Fort William Henry, the enemy had been very active and strong forces of the Indians were scouting the country in every direction. Knowing this, Rogers protested that the force given him was too large for a scouting party and too small to hold its own in a pitched battle. He asked for 400 men but his request was refused. With 15 Rangers on skates as an advance guard, Rogers' little army advanced by night over the frozen surface of Lake George to within eight miles of Ticonderoga. There his advance guard saw what they believed to be the glow of a campfire. But when Rogers marched forward swiftly to attack, no sign of an enemy could be found and the commander concluded that his scouts had been mistaken.

As a matter of fact, they had not been. For the enemy had hastily extinguished their camp fire when the approach of the Rangers was discovered and had sent word to the fort of the coming of the English. Early the next morning Rogers and his men resumed their march on snowshoes through snow four feet deep. Early in the afternoon the Rangers discovered a party of about 100 hostile Indians near at hand and immediately attacked, killing nearly half of them. Believing this was the entire force of the enemy, Rogers pushed on, only to find himself facing over 600 well-armed Indians and Canadians who had been sent from Ticonderoga to meet him.

The Ranger captain, seeing that his little force would soon be wiped out, ordered them to retreat to their former position near what is now known as Rogers' Rock. But before they had reached there more than a third of their number had been slain. With cool desperation, Rogers and his men made a stand there and tried to beat off the angry horde which surged around them. On the left of his line, where he had posted a detachment to prevent his being flanked, Lieutenant Phillips and ten men were taken prisoners by the enemy, tied to trees in sight of their friends and hacked to pieces by the Indians.

Seeing that his command was doomed if he tried to hold his ground, Rogers, with 20 men, rushed to an icy precipice over a hundred feet high which sloped abruptly down to the lake, jumped over the brink and slid down to the lake with terrific force. This place, on the shores of Lake George, known as "Rogers' Slide" or "Rogers' Leap," is pointed out to the tourist of today who is told how the Ranger leader escaped there from the Indians who, believing he had slid down the precipice under the protection of the Great Spirit, made not attempt at further pursuit. However, Windsor, the historian, says, "The legend of Rogers' slide near the lower end of Lake George has no stable foundation."

There was great rejoicing among the French that this "dreaded partisan" had been killed and his followers annihilated. But they were mistaken in regard to Rogers. During the fray Rogers had cast aside his coat, in the pocket of which the French found his commission. This gave rise to the belief that he was dead. But he was very much alive and early in 1759 he was again at the head of a party of Rangers, acting as advance guard for the magnificent English army which General Abercrombie was preparing to hurl against Ticonderoga. He served valiantly in that campaign which ended in such a dismal failure, due to the stupidity of the English general, and distinguished himself by cutting to pieces the advance party of 300 French under Langy. In this fight Rogers captured 150, killed 100, leaving only 50 to escape to Montcalm's party.

Later that year Sir Jeffrey Amherst sent Rogers and his Rangers to destroy the Indian village of St. Francis near the St. Lawrence river, which he did successfully, killing 200 Indians, taking many prisoners and laying the village utterly to waste. "Then, to elude parties endeavoring to cut him off, he retreated to Lake Memphremagog to Charlestown, on the Connecticut, enduring as he went the excruciating horrors of famine and exhaustion." The next year he was ordered by Amherst to take possession of Detroit and other western posts that were ceded by the French after the fall of Quebec. Ascending the St. Lawrence with 200 Rangers, he visited Fort Pitt, had an interview with the great chief Pontiac at a place which is believed to have been the present site of Cleveland, Ohio, and successfully took possession of Detroit.

After the war he visited England and suffered from poverty until he borrowed money with which to print his Journal, which is the principal source of information about his famous corps. He presented this to the king and in 1765 was appointed commandant at Michillimackinac. While holding this office he was accused of plotting to plunder his own fort and hand it over to the French. He was sent to Montreal in irons and court-martialed. In 1769 he revisited England but was soon imprisoned for debt. Later he returned to this country and as the Revolutionary struggle drew near, it became apparent that he was doubtful whether to cast his lot with the Patriots or the Tories.

In 1775 it was rumored that he had been in Canada and had accepted a commission under the king. He was also accused of dressing as an Indian and acting as a spy on the Patriots. Washington was so suspicious of him that he ordered him arrested, although Stark and others who had served with him in the Rangers do not seem to have shared the distrust of him. Eventually he was placed upon parole, but, embittered, it is said, by his treatment, broke his parole and openly joined the British forces. He accepted a commission of colonel and raised a command called the Queen's Rangers.

In 1776 he narrowly escaped capture by the Continentals and soon after this returned to England. In 1778 he was proscribed and formally banished. In England his later career was described as "wild, improvident and extravagant." He was divorced by his wife and is said to have died some time after 1800, "a victim to his evil habits."

Prejudice against the Tories among the early American historians, no doubt, is largely responsible for the fact that Maj. Robert Rogers is a "forgotten leader." Had fate intervened differently when he was wavering between his king and his native land, he might have shared with Gen. Daniel Morgan that intrepid leader's fame as a commander of a "partisan corps" during the Revolutionary struggle. For certainly Morgan's Riflemen served no more brilliantly during the struggle for American independence than did Rogers' Rangers during the struggle to establish English supremacy over the French a decade earlier.

JESUS TEACHING ABOUT HIMSELF

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 11:2-12:50.
GOLDEN TEXT—Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Friend of All.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus, the Great Helper.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Who Jesus Was.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Lord's Testimony Concerning Himself.

I. How the Kingdom Was Received (ch. 11).

In showing the attitude of heart of the people, four classes of hearers are described.

1. The perplexed hearers, like John the Baptist (vv. 2-11).

John believed that Jesus was the Christ (v. 2), but was somewhat perplexed as to the manner of the establishment of the kingdom. The Baptist had in his preaching mainly emphasized the line of prophecy which made the King to be a mighty conqueror (Matt. 3:10-12). He said that the ax is laid unto the root of the tree and that there was to be a separation of the chaff from the wheat and a burning of the chaff. John saw Christ as the one who would remove the sins of the people by the shedding of His blood (John 1:29), but he failed to see the interval between the time of His suffering and the time of His triumph.

2. Violent hearers (vv. 12-19).

These were willing to receive the kingdom according to their own way, but were unwilling to conform to its laws. They seized it with violent hands. They would not repent when called upon to do so by John, nor rejoice to do so when called upon by Christ (vv. 17-19).

3. The stout-hearted unbelievers (vv. 20-24).

In Chorazin, Bethsaida and Capernaum, Christ had done most of His mighty works, but the people deliberately set their hearts against Him and His message. Tyre and Sidon were filled with immoral profligates and idolators, but they will be more tolerably dealt with in the Day of Judgment than will those who willfully reject Jesus Christ.

4. Hearers who are babes in spirit (vv. 25-30).

There were some among the people who heard Jesus with childlike faith. They believed that Jesus was the Messiah and opened their hearts to receive Him.

II. The Antagonism to Jesus (ch. 12).

In chapter eleven we saw the shameful indifference of the Jews to their King. In this chapter we see the positive and bitter antagonism manifesting itself against Him. The immediate occasion of their wicked determination was Christ's relation to the Sabbath.

1. The Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath (vv. 1-8).

The hungry disciples were plucking corn on the Sabbath. With this the Pharisees found fault. To their cavils Christ replied, and showed that God's purpose in instituting the Sabbath was to serve man's highest interests and to contribute to his happiness.

(1) He is greater than their greatest King, David (vv. 3, 4). (2) He is greater than their sacrifice and priesthood (v. 5). (3.) He is greater than the temple (v. 6). The temple, with its gorgeous rites and ceremonies, was but typical of Himself. (4) He is greater than the Sabbath (v. 9), for He is the very Lord of the Sabbath.

2. Healing the withered hand (vv. 9-14).

In order that they might accuse Him, they asked, "Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath days?" Jesus' reply was both a question and a declaration.

3. The unpardonable sin (vv. 22-32).

The occasion of their blasphemy against the Holy Ghost was the casting out of the demon. In this act, Christ displayed His power to cast out demons. The effect of this miracle was twofold: (1) Upon the multitude. They were amazed, and cried out, "Is not this the son of David?" (2) Upon the Pharisees. When they heard what the people were saying, their anger and satanic malice were aroused. They said He was casting out demons by the prince of the demons. With unanswerable logic, He met their accusations and demanded decision. He charged home upon them their awful guilt. They had attributed the work of the Holy Spirit to the devil. This Christ calls the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, for which there is no pardon.

The Last Step Wins

It is the last step that wins, and there is no place in the pilgrim's progress where so many dangers lurk as the region that lies hard by the portals of the celestial city. It is when heaven's heights are full in view that hell's gate is most persistent and full of deadly peril.—A. B. Simpson.

Italy Awakes to Value of Traveling Library

The Italy America society reports that, through big motor trucks, small traveling libraries have started to circulate in Italy, particularly in the rural districts of the country. They introduce the best Italian literature where it would not be so easily accessible, thus allowing the inhabitants of the smallest centers to share in the intellectual life of the country.

Italy is the first country in Europe, which, following the admirable example of America, has instituted the traveling libraries. Book circulation is now very active and the work is done with the co-operation of the circulating libraries already established. In Italy are to be found the so-called Biblioteche Popolari, or libraries for the people, which are supported by the municipalities, citizens' associations and religious bodies.

Valuable Discovery in Tuning Church Bells

A church bell made from the finest bell metal may give forth a harsh, unpleasant sound, due to the fact that it is out of tune with itself. The stroke of a single bell sounds to us like one note, and until very recently even the most expert bell makers have not realized that the sound is really made up of five separate notes. The five notes must be in tune with one another in order that the bell may give forth a harmonious sound. What we then hear is a combination of what is known as the strike note; the nominal, which is an octave above the strike note; the hum, which is an octave below, and the third and fifth.

This recent discovery regarding the harmonics of bells has made possible the new art of bell tuning, a revival of what for two centuries was considered a lost art. The large bells are inverted on a huge turntable and revolved while the metal is pared away from the inside until it is correctly shaped to produce the harmonious tones.—Kansas City Star's Science Service.

Power of Calculation in Infants Instinct?

Andre Lenoir, a Belgian boy, is stated to be able, at the age of two years, to multiply any two five-figure numbers accurately and without hesitation. Whether this is an exaggeration or not I am unable to say, but every now and then the phenomenon of the "calculating boy" crops up and astonishes the world. The feats of these wonder children appear to be done by a sort of instinct, and sometimes the apparently magical power is lost as soon as a real knowledge of mathematics is gained.

A well-known calculating boy was George Parker Bidder, who was born in 1806, and was exhibited in his childhood as an arithmetical marvel. He became an engineer and was associated with Robert Stephenson in the London and Birmingham—afterward the London and North-Western railway—and was a founder of the Electric Telegraph company and president of the Institution of Civil Engineers. Among his best-known works are the Victoria docks.

STRANGER DROPS DEAD ON HIGHWAY NEAR BELMOND

Unidentified Man Had Over $500 In Pockets When Found Last Night

Wallace Darrah, fieldman for the Belmond Sugar Co. reported a story of interest to The Times this morning.

When the man who spoke at the beet meeting in Klemme last night, left Belmond to come to Klemme he saw a man walking on the highway at the north edge of Belmond, but gave the incident no further thot.

As this speaker returned to Belmond again after the meeting he saw a large crowd of people on the road a little further north of the place he had seen the man walk. The pedestrian had died, perhaps of heart trouble and the crowd was awaiting the arrival of the coroner. The man could not be identified. He had over 500 on his person.

IOWA—BOUNTIFUL LAND

By George Gallarno

IOWA, with an area of one-fifth of that of Texas, ranks second to that state in cash incomes from farm lands. Iowa leads all states with the exception of Texas. California follows Iowa, as third in the list.

IOWA has a total wealth that averages $4,646 per capita of its population. Total wealth of the state is declared to be $11,242,000,000.

IOWA has bank deposits representing an average of $360.11 per capita of its population.

IOWA has a state capitol that cost $3,296,256. The capitol building was under construction for 15 years. Its corner stone was laid November 23, 1871, and it was completed July 4, 1886.

IOWA owns 93.25 acres of parked and landscaped ground surrounding its state capitol building.

IOWA native stone and Iowa native black walnut, cherry, butternut, oak and catalpa wood, were used chiefly in the construction of the capitol building.

Those present were: Elmer Weisbrod and family, of Fenton; Carl Suckow and family, of Garner; Elmer Ludeke and family of Garner; Art Schoenwetter and family, George Schoenwetter and family, Henry Ludeke and family, Fred Schlichting and family, and Mrs. C. A. Arnold, all of this community, and Will Ax and family of Swaledale. All report a fine time.

The Scout Leaders Training Course for District IV met in Klemme Tuesday evening at the school gym and was well attended. At the close of the meeting hot coffee and doughnuts proved a popular feature and an unexpected part of the program. Walt Maves, of the Mason City Baking Co., brought over the doughnuts and "Fat" Kluckhohn furnished the coffee and John Day made it. The next meeting will be at Corwith next Tuesday night and the Corwith Scouters reported they would also have a lunch. Any one interested are welcome to atend the training course.

RELATIVES SPENT AN ENJOYABLE DAY AT R. C. LUDEKE'S

A most enjoyable time was had at the Ralph Ludeke home Sunday when all his sisters and brothers and their families gathered there at noon with well filled baskets of good things to eat and partook of a two course dinner in honor of their sister, Mrs. Elmer Weisbrod, husband and two younger children of Fenton, who came to spend Saturday and Sunday with relatives here. The occasion was also to celebrate the many birthdays and wedding anniversaries which ocur in the family during the month of February. Nearly every member of the family was present. A special guest was Mrs. C. A. Arnold, a schoolmate, near neighbor and dear friend of the family in childhood days. The afternoon was spent in a social way visiting and singing the good old Gospel hymns. Everyone went home declaring it a very happy day.

HORACE DUDLEY MERRILL

Horace Dudley Merrill, eldest son of Dudley and Matilda Edwards Merrill was born June 21, 1856 at Waukon, Iowa. He came to Garnre to make his home in the year 1874, when only 18 years old, and has for all these years, about 56 years, resided in this community. On Nov. 30, 1895 he was united in marriage to Mrs. Ann Barbara Gates. His wife preceded him in death over 33 years ago.

Horace Merrill spent the yeasr of his residence here farming aud in the cement block business. About six years ago he disposed of the latter business. For the past 12 years he has lived with the Harry Quintus family as one of them.

There is left to mourn the loss of Mr. Merrill: three sisters, Mrs. A. F. Lackore of Forest City, Mrs. Hattie Chase of Waseca, Minn., and Mrs. Eliza Ganley of Enid, Oklahoma; one brother, Mr. Harry Merrill of Forest City; three stepdaughters, and four step-sons, all of whom live some distance from Garner, with the exception of Mr. Fred Gates, of Klemme, and a host of friends in the community.

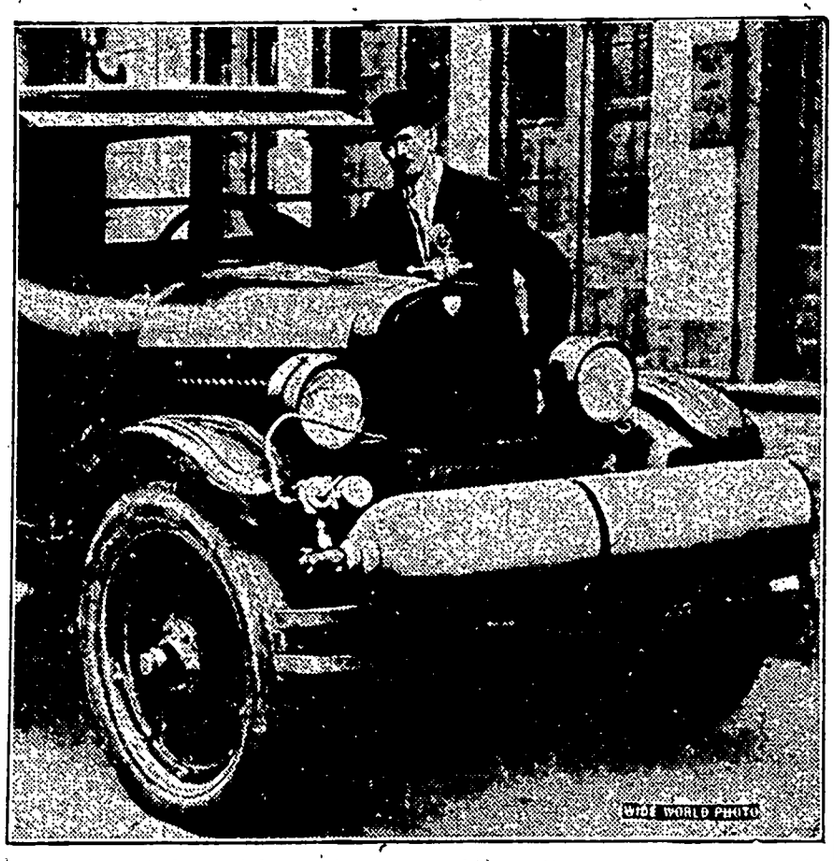
ACETYLENE DRIVEN AUTOMOBILE IS NEW



A view of the acetylene driven automobile as it appeared on the streets of Pittsburgh during a recent test. Water, air and acetylene were used in the motor during the trials. The many advantages of the new fuel include lightness, power, quick starting in any weather and the absence of poisonous monoxide gas in the exhaust.

POULTRY

BEST LITTER TO USE IN BROODER

Shavings, Cut Straw and Cut Hay Meet With Favor.

One of the commonest questions asked of the poultry department of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station during the spring is, "What is the best litter to use in the brooder house?" For the benefit of all poultrymen who are troubled with this problem the station issues the following statement:

There is no best litter, but there are certain requirements that litter must meet in order to be satisfactory for use in brooding chicks. These requirements are that it should be: Light in weight, thus allowing the droppings and dirt to work to the floor so the chicks are not likely to pick up contaminated material; absorbent, and therefore capable of keeping the brooder house floor dry; cheap, so one can afford to replace it every five days after the first four weeks; and clean, which means freedom from mold, mustiness, and dust.

Shavings, cut straw, and cut hay meet these requirements. They are not the only materials that one can use, but they are among the best. Straw or hay used for litter should always be cut. If the straw or hay is not cut it becomes matted and covered with droppings, and is therefore of no value for litter.

Bacillary white diarrhea, coccidiosis, and intestinal worms are spread to a large extent by the use of dirty litter, the experiment station warns. One rule in brooding chicks that should be followed, if all others are forgotten, is: "Clean the brooder house every five days." This means removing the litter, sweeping the floor of the brooder house, and putting in clean litter.

Produce Good Pullets at Reasonable Expense

At the Pennsylvania state college 926 pullets were raised to maturity at a cost of $1.26 per bird after deducting the returns from 924 cockerels. Most of the chicks were leghorns valued at twenty cents each. The cost of production included feed and coal, labor at thirty-five cents per hour, and interest at 6 per cent on the investment in equipment, feed, and chicks.

The pullets were also charged with depreciation on the houses at 5 per cent and the depreciation on the equipment at 10 per cent. Undoubtedly the results in brooding and the mortality rate were very satisfactory to produce good pullets at the laying age at a cost of $1.26 per bird.

Many poultrymen sell leghorn pullets at eight weeks of age at about $1 each. At three months of age they are worth about $1.25 to $1.50 each. Pullets that are ready to lay are seldom sold by poultrymen for less than $2 to $2.50 each unless they have a surplus.

Poultry Facts

It is also generally considered better to feed all rations dry rather than wet for turkeys.

* * *

Watch the old hens in your poultry flock. They are dangerous spreaders of poultry tuberculosis.

* * *

Milk, sour or sweet, is excellent for breeding stock. Beef scrap or other animal meal may be left out if a plentiful supply of milk is available.

Feed and protection aid in keeping turkeys fit. Vitamine A supplied in yellow corn, cabbage, alfalfa, clover, and most greens, increases resistance to colds. Cod liver oil also is beneficial.

* * *

As a sanitary measure place a disinfectant mat at the entrance to the brooder house. This mat can be made by filling a square box with gunny sacks soaked in some reliable disinfectant.

Isolate all birds from the poultry flock as soon as they show symptoms of disease. Then decide what method of treatment to follow.

* * *

Many turkeys are graded as number two or thrown out entirely because of failure to starve them out properly before dressing.

* * *

Small eggs produce small chicks, and these should not be incubated. Eggs uneven in shape are not suitable, nor are extremely long and very short round eggs.

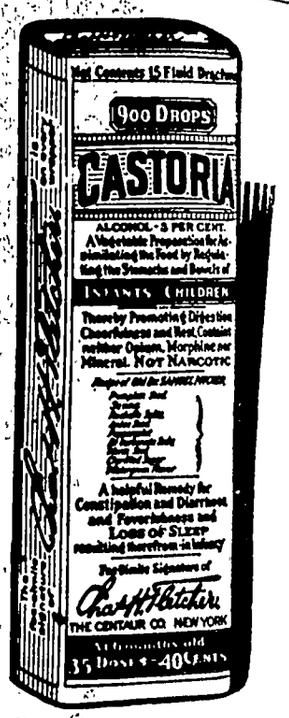
The practice of reproducing the flock with eggs laid by hens insures a better quality chick than breeding from pullets.

* * *

Red mites may cause a drop in egg production. A satisfactory treatment for the pests is to paint the roosts and roosting cabinet with carbolineum.

* * *

In commercial poultry plants where fowls are kept in quite large numbers, the artificial lighting of the houses, morning and evening, proves profitable during the winter.



If Baby has COLIC

A cry in the night may be the first warning that Baby has colic. No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy! This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never do the slightest harm. Always keep a bottle in the house. It is the safe and sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. Whenever there's need of gentle regulation. Children love the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it suitable for the tiniest infant, and for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is always better for growing children than some needlessly strong medicine meant only for adult use. Genuine Castoria always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Prescribed by doctors!

The city manager form of government in 1929 had been adopted in 39 cities.

If a bachelor has sisters he gets pretty well trained, after all.

FATALITIES ARE NOW ON DECLINE

Decrease in Death of Children Ascribed to Safety Education.

Chicago police department statistics just made public show that 166 children under fifteen years of age were killed in motor accidents last year in Chicago, as compared with 207 in 1928, according to a statement issued by the accident prevention department of the Chicago Motor club.

Adult fatalities, likewise, were sharply reduced in 1929. The total deaths were 637, as compared with 710 in 1928.

Child Fatalities.

Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, ascribed the decrease in child fatalities to the safety education which is now a part of the regular curriculum in most public, parochial and Lutheran schools, and to the efficient operation of the school boys' safety patrols.

"This form of instruction has been in progress for several years, and its benefits are now being reflected in the accident statistics," declared Mr. Hayes. "Early impressions last, in a large degree, through life, and when the fundamentals of safety are stressed to little children we may expect them to walk more carefully during childhood and even to be more careful drivers when they have grown up than the present generation.

Boys' Patrol.

"Great credit is due the members of the school boys' patrol. Those boys, standing at intersections near schools in rain, snow and cold, are selected for their qualities of leadership, and assist their younger classmates across streets during lulls in the traffic. They have made it possible for hundreds of policemen to be relieved of such assignments and thus available for the more serious but no less important task of preventing crime and catching criminals."

Oil Filter Saves Wear on Engine Piston Rings

An interesting test, conducted by the California agricultural experiment station with a view to determining the work done by oil filters used on motor car engines, is described in the S. A. E. Journal by Prof. A. H. Hoffman. Two cars, a roadster with delivery body and a coach, were used, the filter being bypassed on the roadster but left to function on the coach. The principal wearing engine parts of both cars were measured and, where feasible, weighed before the test.

After each car had been run about 10,000 miles of approximately equivalent use, the machines were sent in and remeasured. The average wear on the piston rings as determined by loss of weight was approximately twice as much on the machine without the filter. The wear on pistons, cylinders, wristpins, crankpins and crankpin bearings was too slight to justify the drawing of any conclusions.

Wet Leaves on Streets Are Menace to Motorist

Wet leaves on asphalt streets and hoar frost on the boulevard spell disacter to the unwary motorist.

"Streets and highways were not always as smooth as they are today," W. J. Cahill, president of the General Tire company of Philadelphia, said recently. "Consequently, smooth-surfaced or worn tires, were not always the menace they are today.

"More automobile accidents are caused in cities by unreliable, smooth-tread tires than by bad brakes.

"With winter hurrying along, careful motorists everywhere are now discarding their dangerous, worn tires, with smooth treads and are replacing them with safe new tires, with deep non-skid treads that grip and hold to the road."

THE MOTOR QUIZ

How Many Can You Answer?

Q. What is believed to be the world's speed record for motor cycles and by whom and where was it established?

Ans. Ernest Henne drove a motor cycle over a one kilometer course at Munich recently at an average speed of 134.4 miles an hour.

Q. What devices prolong engine life and how?

Ans. The air cleaner by removing dust and dirt before it reaches the carburetor; the oil filter by removing sludge, dirt and other foreign matter from the oil.

Q. What is meant by gear ratio?

Ans. The ratio between the speed of the engine and that of the rear wheels. Thus if the gear ratio is described as 5 to 1 it indicates that for one revolution of the rear wheels the engine turns five, and so on.

Q. When was the first arrest made for reckless driving in a self-propelled vehicle?

Ans. In 1769, more than 150 years ago, Nicholas Cugnot, a Frenchman, appeared in a racy affair of his own construction and was arrested for speeding at three miles an hour. He was able to attain this speed when the wind was in his favor.

Clearing Windshield Is Easily Done in Winter

A constant stream of warm air can be directed against the windshield to prevent fogging and frosting. Raise the rear edge of the engine hood on each side enough to insert a small block of wood. This will produce an opening along the top rear edge of the hood through which heated air from the engine flows and strikes the glass. If trouble is experienced with rattling, an extra block of wood of the right size should be placed directly under the edge of the hood near the hinge. Experience will show what size block to use for best results.—Popular Science Monthly.

AUTOMOBILE ITEMS

America has more miles of highways than the rest of the world.

Dora says she isn't at all surprised that England has a motor fatality each year for every 118 motor cars, with everybody driving on the left that way.

* * *

Because there is more vibration in light cars, there will also be found more loose nuts, bolts, etc. To overcome this condition, it is wise to consider lock washers, split pins, and other trouble preventers.

* * *

The director of the Harvard bureau of traffic research says a good motorist is one who is as courteous on the road as in his home. We should like to know more, though, about the bus driver's home life.

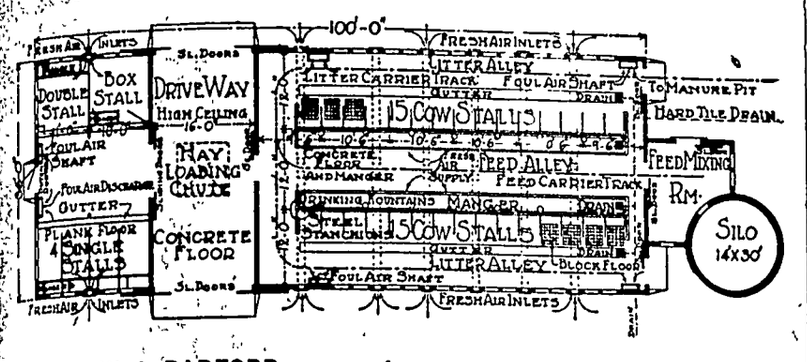
BARTON'S DYANSHINE SHOE POLISH

Combination Horse and Dairy Barn Will Pay Dividends for Many Years



By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all problems pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

While state health laws are rather strict about housing dairy cows and horses in the same barn, the one shown in the accompanying illustration is designed in such a way that it is a dual purpose building. It will be noted that the double doors near one end lead into a driveway through the building. At the right is the dairy stable and at the left is the horse stable. But these two stables are separated in such a way that they are really two under the same roof. Tight partition walls with sliding doors shut off both stables from the driveway. At the same time it enables the owner to store roughage for both the cattle and the horses in the same mow and the hay chute over the driveway facilitates the storing of hay and throwing it down as needed.

This barn has a modern gambrel roof and it is 36 feet wide, which has been found to be the right width for economy of space and labor in caring for the animals to be kept in the barn. The length is 100 feet over all.

Space is allotted for thirty cows in the cow stable and six horses in the horse stable. It will be noted by the floor plan that modern barn equipment, including sanitary steel stall partitions, stanchions, drinking cups, an overhead carrier, and a system of ventilation, are specified. Also wood blocks for the floors of the stalls.

Beside the floor plan there is a cross-section of the building and many of the details of construction, particularly those of the concrete floor in the dairy stable, are given. There is also a section through the driveway which gives some details of construction. The cross-section of the barn itself shows the dimensions of the material used in construction and how the barn is constructed.

Dairymen have come to realize that the modern building to house their cows will pay dividends throughout the year it stands. Modern equipment not only lessens the labor of caring for a dairy herd but also increases the health and production of the cows. Only a small increase in the daily flow of milk is necessary to pay for a building of this kind over a term of years.

Don't Skimp on Stairs, Home Builders Warned

In building a house, don't economize on stairway space, warns George E. Eichenlaub, an authority on the subject, in the American Architect. Of all falls occurring in American homes, more than 40 per cent are tumbles downstairs, and many of these result fatally.

Although the average owner gives it little thought, a well-proportioned stairway is probably the most important detail of any building from the standpoint of safety and for comfort, Mr. Eichenlaub says.

The pitch of the stairway, the height of each step above the lower one, and the width of the tread, or top surface of each step, are factors which not only will determine the possible number of accidents over a course of years, but also will fix—if only sub-consciously—in the minds of residents and visitors an opinion of the comfort or inadequacy of the house as a whole.

Mr. Eichenlaub reports he found the ideal stairway in an old hotel, built in 1802, on which an accident had never been recorded. The height of each step was 7¼ inches and the tread 12¼ inches.

"Moreover," he observes, "one ascending the long stairway finds he has mounted without conscious effort, and that he can turn and walk down without wishing to put a hand to the rail."

Year-Round Comfort Insured by Insulation

Though insulation is an actual dollars-and-cents economy, the first home owners who employed it were the wealthy, who didn't have to economize. They regarded insulation as worth its cost in comfort alone.

For a home that can't be kept warm in winter is undesirable because of its discomfort and unhealthiness as well as because of its costly upkeep. Also, just as heat is conducted out of a house through ordinary building materials, so it is conducted in during intensely hot summer weather. Insulation stops this. It insures comfort the year round.

Modernize Old Homes by Installing Tile

Old homes as well as new homes may enjoy the advantages afforded by tiles.

In remodeling all that is necessary for the tile installation is a strong, rigid foundation such as is provided in floors, walls and ceilings of practically every home. Tiling can be set upon wood, brick, concrete, steel, hollow tile, gypsum and other materials.

Tiled floors are frequently placed directly on top of existing floors. On the other hand, when the surface of the tiled floor is to be on the same plane as that of the old floor, the old floor can be removed, a subfloor built between the joints and the tile work set upon the new base. A concrete bed is applied and the tiles are then neatly set in a mortar bed.

Many tiled baths are being installed in old homes during remodeling operations. There is hardly anything that will make a house more modern than installation of a tile bathroom.

Floors of Oak Offer Unusual Advantages

Safeguard the family health. Why wear yourself out sweeping and cleaning a carpeted floor? Such a floor is never sanitary, and, of course, you are never satisfied, though you sweep as much as time and health will permit. The thing to do is to lay oak flooring right over the old softwood floor. Then dirt tracked in by playing children is easily removed. There are no cracks to collect dust and disease germs. Your rooms will always look fresh and neat with the least possible attention.

Edge Grain Shingles Make Good Siding

Edge grain shingles of fine quality, completely impregnated with preservative, make a highly satisfactory siding. The appearance is fine. The relative expense of clapboards and shingles depends upon the quality and width of each. Both wide shingles and clapboards are expensive. Breadth for breadth, the shingles run a little less as to first cost. If stained, there is reduced expense for upkeep.

FARM STOCK

TUBERCULOSIS IS CAUSE OF LOSSES

Task of Cattle Raisers to Kill Ailing Cows.

(By J. W. LUMB, Extension Veterinarian, Kansas State Agricultural College.)

As producers and consumers of cattle and their products, it is the task of live stock raisers to treat herds and locate the tuberculous cow and give her a free ride to the rending tank.

Tuberculosis of man and animals is so intimately interwoven that it is almost impossible to view them independently.

Three discoveries—that tuberculosis was infectious, that it was caused by a definite germ that could be isolated, and that tuberculin could be made and used as a test substance to determine the presence or absence of tuberculosis—were of very great importance and laid the foundation for our present methods of control and eradication. With this knowledge more exact methods were used in combatting the development of the disease in man and animals. Tuberculosis was proven to be a preventable disease.

These investigations definitely proved that man may become infected with bovine tuberculosis. It is true that such infections are, as a rule, limited to children or take place during the early periods of life. It has been found that very few people having tuberculosis of the lungs have the bovine type of infection. The form of tuberculosis that attacks the brain or spinal chord is seldom of the bovine type. General tuberculosis is likely to be of the bovine type in about 16 per cent of the cases. Taking the cases of abdominal tuberculosis in humans, the percentage showing infection of the bovine type may run well over 50, especially if infants and children are examined.

Production of Pork in Most Economical Manner

The man who provides automatic waterers, so arranged that the water in them can be kept above freezing throughout the coldest part of the winter season, and has his fattening yards provided with a self-feeder, is in position to produce pork in the most economical manner. A self-feeder is recommended only for fattening hogs and for growing pigs. It should not be used for brood sows. A brood sow should be fed a limited grain ration and not all she wants to eat. That is why a self-feeder cannot be used to advantage for her. Movable houses are essential for the rearing of the pigs till they are at least four months of age.

Leading Farm Crops Now Marketed Through Stock

It has been conservatively estimated that three-fourths of the product of improved land and all the product of unimproved lands is used by live stock. Of the ten leading crops in the United States 85 per cent of the corn, 98 per cent of the hay, 35 per cent of the wheat, 80 per cent of the oats, 60 per cent of the cottonseed (in the form of cottonseed cake or meal and cottonseed hulls) and 90 per cent of the barley is marketed through live stock. These ten crops represent 87 per cent of the value of all farm crops produced in 1927, and 55 per cent of the value of the ten leading crops represents the value of the portion of these crops that are marketed through live stock.

Live Stock Hints

A foal that is born strong, fully developed, and robust is in the best state to resist disease.

* * *

Do not allow sheep to take the cold rainy weather which may cause pneumonia. Provide some shelter for them.

* * *

Undocked thin lambs that are sold either directly or indirectly for feeders are very severely discriminated against.

* * *

Intelligent management and feeding of the brood mare during pregnancy will do much to insure a good start for the foal at birth.

* * *

The mare goes 48 weeks, or about 340 days with foal. As foaling time approaches decrease the grain ration and increase laxative foods to keep the bowels acting freely. Constipation is dangerous.

* * *

The first ten weeks are the hardest in the life of the pig and likewise the most costly for the hog raiser, it is shown by cost of hog production studies made over the state by the University of Illinois.

* * *

Recent tests have shown that many unthrifty pigs are anemic and the direct rays of Old Sol are so far the best means known for combating this condition. Possibly at some future date a source of iron supply in the ration that will overcome this condition will be found.

ONE PRESCRIPTION MADE FAMILY DOCTOR FAMOUS

Seldom has any single act been of greater benefit to mankind than that of Dr. Caldwell in 1885, when he wrote the prescription which has carried his fame to the four corners of the earth.

Over and over, Dr. Caldwell wrote the prescription as he found men, women and children suffering from those common symptoms of constipation, such as coated tongue, bad breath, headaches, gas, nausea, biliousness, no energy, lack of appetite, and similar things.

Demand for this prescription grew so fast, because of the pleasant, quick way it relieved such symptoms of constipation, that by 1888 Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it put up ready for use. Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is always ready at any drugstore.

Wins 14 First and 5 Second Prizes Out of 20 Entries in Miami County Fair Baking Contest

Credits Success To New-Type Flour

Mrs. J. H. Hartman
Troy, Ohio

"I want to thank you for your splendid Gold Medal 'Kitchen-tested' Flour. At my last appearance at the Miami County Fair I made twenty entries in the baked goods department, out of which I won fourteen first and five second prizes. I have not entered anything since—thought it best to give others a chance."—Mrs. J. H. Hartman.

This New-Type Flour Brings Baking Success to Thousands of Women

THOUSANDS of women now know how to get baking success every time—prize cakes and pastries, bread and biscuits—there's no "guess work" about perfect results.

They use a new-type flour for all baking purposes—GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour—that simplifies baking remarkably and banishes the cause of most baking failures.

Failures, experts found, were mostly due to the fact that 2 sacks of the same flour often acted differently, even with the same recipe... it was not uniform in oven action.

So now all GOLD MEDAL Flour is "Kitchen-tested" before it comes to you. As each batch comes through the mill it is tested by actual baking—bread, cakes, biscuits, pastries—in an oven just like yours. Only flour which acts the same perfect way every time is allowed to go out to you. Thus you know in advance exactly what your results will be.

Special "Kitchen-tested" Recipes in Every Sack

(Changed Every 3 Months)

Please accept, free of charge, simplified recipes for 12 of Betty Crocker's most delicious baking creations. Recipes for the daintiest cakes, the finest cookies, the most popular pastries known. Each one is "simplified" until it is remarkably easy, too.

All 12 of these simplified "Kitchen-tested" recipes are inside every sack of GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour. You can get a full set today—simply ask your grocer for GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour.

lace vacated by E. J. Stokesbary.

Ralph Stokesbary from near Goodell will move onto the C. C. Schaefer farm, and Floyd Franklin will move to a farm near Garner.

Andrew Brown from near Ventura, will move onto the H. L. Suckow farm vacated by Wm. Suckow, who has rented the Tom Blank house and has moved to town. The Blank house was formerly occupied by the Baker family.

Andrew Nelson from near Clear Lake will move back and live on the Hans Hansen farm, and the land will be farmed by neighbors.

Ben Merkel, who has been farming the Hans Hansen place moves to the farm formerly owned by John W. Johnson, who has bought a piece of land south of his old place and put up a new set of buildings on it.

Hilary Greiman will live on the old Chas. L. Griffen farm, north of Klemme. The Griffen family have moved to Minnesota.

There will not be so much moving in town, however. J. C. Thomas recently purchased the Methodist parsonage, where the Fred Bell family now live. Jim purchased a lot south of Rev. Whyte's residence and will move his house to that location. Fred Bell has rented the Joe Schuldt house where Philip Bock and family now reside.

Julius Priebe moves in from the country to where Ed. Jacobs now lives and Ed. Jacobs has rented the house where Thomas lives. Thomas will have temporary quarters over Henry Lewis' store until his house is finished.

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes and family of Ruthven will move into the Joe Johnson house, formerly occupied by the Palmby family, who moved to Iowa Falls sometime ago.

Will Bock moves in from the country to Mr. Yahnke's house, and Mr. Yahnke will go to live with a son.

A. R. White and family, who are for the present living at Goodell are looking for a house and expect to move to Klemme.

The Times will appreciate any report of moving which we may have over-looked.

Anniversary Surprise Party Held For Mr. and Mrs. Art Schoenwetter

A number of friends and neighbors of Art Schoenwetter and wife planned a surprise on them Friday evening, the event being their 25th wedding anniversary. The evening was spent in visiting and the young people enjoyed playing games. A fine time was had by all. Refreshments were served by the self-invited guests at a late hour.

NOTICE TO VOTERS

I am a candidate for re-election as Director of the Klemme Schools. I will appreciate your support Monday, March 10, and shall if elected, endeavor to serve the tax payers as in the past, in an economical as well as efficient manner for the best of the school.—R. C. Ludeke.

Mrs. George Griggs went to Illinois to attend the funeral of a cousin who was killed by a train. She was accompanied by her brother, Henry, who came from Illinois to attend the funeral of Mrs. Will Bachman. They both left Sunday morning.

KLEMME MERCHANTS JOIN STATE-WIDE MOVEMENT

We, the undersigned merchants of Klemme, Iowa, in view of the depressed dairy markets at the present time and deeming it an advantage to again stablize the prices of dairy products, are joining a state-wide movement to discontinue the sale of butter substitutes until such a time as the dairy industry is again on a firm basis, or all of us as a group agree on any other action which will be a benefit to the farmer and dairyman.

RITES HELD FOR MRS. BACHMAN

SERVICES WERE CONDUCTED AT METHODIST CHURCH HERE

Interment Was Made In Cemetery Near Goodell, Iowa

Funeral services for Mrs. William Bachman were conducted Saturday afternoon at the Methodist Church, with Rev. H. E. Whyte in charge. Interment was made in the cemetery at Goodell.

Following is the obituary as read at the funeral services:

"Alvina Louise Knoke Bachman was born at Husum, Hanover state, Germany, on December 22, 1880. At the age of twelve years she came with her parents to America, and the family settled at Postville, Ia. Two years later they moved to Klemme, Iowa and she has made her home in the vicinity ever since.

On August the 26th, 1899, she was united in marriage to William Bachman of this place. The early years of their married life were spent on a farm, but in 1915 they moved to Klemme, where they have made their home until this time.

"Mrs. Bachman was confirmed in the Ell Town Reformed Church, in 1897, but has been an attendant of the M. E. Church for many years. She was a woman of sterling character, and kindly disposition, which qualified her as a true home maker, both from the standpoint of mother and wife.

"Mrs. Bachman had been in poor health for several weeks, but her condition was not thought to be serious until Sunday evening. From that time on until the end which came about mid-night Wednesday, February 26th, 1930, she grew steadily worse in spite of all that medical science and loving hands could do. Her age at the time of her decease was 49 years, 2 months and 4 days.

"She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, William Bachman; her son, Clarence; her daughter, Lela; her step-son, Edd Bachman; and also two brothers and two sisters: Mrs. Fred Haupt, Glendive, Montanna; Fred Knoke, Elkader, Iowa; Mrs. Charley Smith, Mason City, Iowa; and Art Knoke, of Klemme, Iowa; likewise five grand children and many other relatives and friends."

Card Of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our neighbors and friends for their help during the illness of our wife and mother, and for the flowers and other expressions of sympathy offered.

William Bachman and Lela,
Ed. Bachman and family,
Clarence Bachman and family.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES
H. E. Whyte, Pastor

More and more the Lenten Sesaon is coming to occupy an important place in our church program. It is easy to become careless in our religious life and become spiritually indifferent. The lenten season calls us to a new sense of our responsibility to God and His Church. The program of our church is planned to help you in this respect. Why not start Sunday?

Morning worship in Klemme at 10:00 o'clock.
Sunday school, Klemme at 11:00
Sunday school, Liberty, 10:15.
Morning worship, Liberty, 11:15
Evening worship, Klemme, 8:00.
6:30 p. m. Intermediate League.
Epworth League, 7:15.
Catechism Classes meet on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 at the church.

TO THE VOTERS

At The School Election Independent Dist. Of Klemme, March 10th

I wish to ask for your support for Director, and assure you I will appreciate your vote for me. Thanking you in advance, A. D. GIMER.

DOINGS AT SCHOOL THE PAST WEEK

SPELLING BEE TO BE HELD IN GRADE SCHOOL SOON

Our Grade youngsters are busy getting ready for the local spelling bee which must be set on some date within the next three weeks as the County Bee has been set on March 29th. Parents can well afford to give them encouragement along this line, not only for the prizes offered but that they may improve in their spelling. We have this year some very good spellers in our seventh grade and this year or next we should be able to bring to Klemme the honor of having another county spelling champion. There are also some good spellers in our eighth grade.

Basket Ball Game Called Off By Corwith

Due to the ineligibility of some of Corwith's players we were unable to secure the game last Saturday night with them as we had previously been promised. We find no fault with those managing the team at Corwith for demanding that certain standards of scholarship be maintained as a requisite for athletic participation. We have been quite fortunate here in having on our squad a sufficient number of obys who can and are anxious to make good grades. They realize, we believe, that scholarship in the end, will count for much more toward their future success in life than mere athletic skill acquired to the neglect of regular school work.

Shamrocks Enter District Tourny Today At Goldfield

On Thursday evening of this week our team goes to Goldfield to the Sectional State Tournament. It seems they must play their first game at 8:30 o'clock with Livermore Livermore is said to have won 16 games this season and our boys know they must play their very best brand of ball to win, but they will be in better shape than at Britt and we believe they have a chance. It will be the last game for four of our boys as they are now completing their fourth year in school and will graduate next May. They are Wayne Pavey, Allan Klotzbach, Otho Keraus and Raymond Barz.

Lemke Named On All County Squad

Clarence Lemke who at Britt was selected as a member of the All County Basket Ball Team has one more year left to represent Klemme High. Marion Carson who has been playing fine ball at guard position is only a sophomore, which means he has left two more years at the game on high school floors.

New Member In High School

We are glad to welcome a new member to our school this week in the person of Paul Hughes, recently of Ruthven. His credits received from there show him to be a splendid student and such are always welcome, for they serve to inspire others to greater endeavor. He becomes a member of perhaps the largest class ever enrolled in Klemme High School, it now numbers 28. They should all try their best to reach graduation day, a little more than two years hence. Our Freshman Class is the next largest class now enrolled, numbering 22. Next years Freshman class also promises to be large.

We are proud of the interest both parents and youth are showing in our school here. It indicates the community is keeping step with the onward march of our nation. Everywhere in the United States there is shown an increased interest in education. Parents everywhere are urging their children to attend high school that they may keep up with others of their own age and start life with an even break. Competition for well paid jobs and for the better salaried positions is becoming keener each year and the boy or girl of today who does not become well trained and informed must later give way to those who are.

Only a part of the membership of our P. T. A. can be circularized at one time, we are informed and those not reached the first time need not feel they have been purposely ignored. An effort will be made to reach all in due time.

A few rather low grades were made the last six weeks. We hope there may be enough improvement shown by additional effort made in the next twelve weeks to prevent failure and repetition of a grade or subject. Parents may aid toward success by confering with their children's instructor. Such a conference may aid everyone concerned, pupil, parent, teacher. All are bent on avoiding, if possible, school failures.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS TO PRESENT THREE ONE-ACT PLAYS

Money Thus Raised Will Be Divided And Presented To Churches

The Camp Fire Girls, under the direction of Miss Marie Blank their leader, are to be commended for the interest they are showing in the future welfare of Klemme.

On Thursday evening, March 13, they will present three one-act plays at the school auditorium. The money which they net from the play will be divided and each church will be presented a fund from the Camp Fire Girls for the building of the new churches, the Reformed and the Methodist churches, to be built this summer.

The Girls are showing mighty fine community spirit and their play should be witnessed by a capacity crowd.

The titles of the three plays are: "Honest Peggy," "The Flapper and Her Friends," and "Parlor Tricks."

THREE MEN IN RACE MONDAY FOR SCHOOL DIRECTOR

Two Men Are To Be Elected For A Three Year Term Each

Klemme's school election Monday, March 10th, should attract a bit more than a passing interest for there are 3 fine men running and but two can be elected, each for a three year term.

The three men running for the two offices of three years each as a school director are: Albert Barz, A. D. Gimer and R. C. Ludeke. It is up to the voters to make their choice of two directors from the list of three in the race.

Mr. Gimer, president of the board at the present time says that should he be elected this time he will not again run for the office of school director. Mr. Ludeke at the present time is a director and has given us good service. Mr. Albert Barz has never before sought a public office, at least in our recollection. He has been urged by his friends to make a run, and no doubt if he is elected he will give the best of service to the best interests of all.

As the Times sees it, this is going to be a close race, as the candidates are all good men. We won't even venture a guess as to the outcome.

We presume, as usual the polls are to be open at 1:00 p. m. and the balloting will be done at the Town Hall.

Let's get out a 100 per cent vote this year!

HENRY SUCKOW, JR. SPECIAL CENSUS ENUMERATOR HERE

Henry Suckow, Jr. has been appointed as a special Census Enumerator for the east half of Hancock County, and Miss Christina Calkison has been appointed for the west half of the county.

These enumerators will call on all retailers and wholesalers and manufacturers in the county to procure special data for the government.

In most instances blanks will be left for the firm to fill out during spare time, and later the blanks will be collected.

Card Of Thanks

We desire to express our sincere appreciation of your kindness and sympathy, to all our neighbors and friends, who have helped us so much both in words and in deeds; also for the beautiful flowers, the choir and all who helped in any way. May God bless you all. Sincerely, —Mrs. Dick Swalve and Children.

KLEMME BUTTER AGAIN A WINNER

KLEMME CREAMERY BUTTER IS SCORED FOR SECOND PLACE

Creamery Men Of North Iowa Held Meeting At Mason City

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Gimer drove to Mason City last Thursday to attend a meeting of creamery men and their wives from all over North Iowa.

This was one of the most enjoyable meetings ever held and business was combined with pleasure.

The men's wives brought with them well filled baskets of good things to eat and a fine supper was served at the Chamber of Commerce where the meeting was held. After supper the evening was enjoyed in playing games and having a general good time.

All of the creamery men brought butter samples with them and these samples were then scored. A. D. Gimer's sample of Klemme Creamery Butter scored 93.33 and won the second place, being but a few points under the fisrt place sample which scored 93.50.

And that's just another reason why The Times advocates the slogan "Eat More Klemme Creamery Butter."

STATE INSPECTOR GIVES RULE ON ROOMS FOR RENT

Mr. Guy Thomas, state inspector was in town Friday and called on various Klemme business places that come under his jurisdiction.

While here he called at The Times office to ask this paper to give out some information to the public.

Regarding those homes which take transient roomers or boarders Mr. Thomas stated that they must take out a license, which costs $4.00 a year. He pointed out that this does not apply to homes which keep steady roomers or boarders. In that case no license is required.

Homes which have been in the habit of taking transient roomers and boarders must procure a license or they are liable to fine.

HARRY TRUMBELL HOUSE BURNER TO GROUND IN NIGHT

Fire Thought To Have Started From Defective Chimney

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Trumbell, who live on the old Trumbell farm about six miles southeast of Klemme, was burned to the ground Sunday night.

The fire which started about ten o'clock, was thought to have originated in a defective chimney. The house was a mass of flames before neighbors arrived and the household goods upstairs was lost. We understand that most of the furniture on the ground floor was saved.

AUXILIARY NOTES

Mesdames Paul Grange, W. F. Pavey, E. J. Arnold, Henry Griffen, Ben Coobs, David Schwichtenberg, P. W. Johnson and the Misses Leona Lau and Berdice Schwichtenberg and Colleen Gram and Barbara Lou Johnson attended a convention of the County Auxiliary Units in Garner on Tuesday afternoon.

The Klemme Unit entertains the same group in May.

Meeting Postponed To Mar. 20

The next regular meeting is postponed to Thursday, Machr 20th. Auxiliary members note the change and plan to atend. Mrs. P. W. Johnson, Secretary.

1—Former President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge surrounded by a throng of movie actors on their visit to Hollywood studios. 2—Scene at opening session in the school at Dark Hollow, Virginia, which was built by President and Mrs. Hoover for Blue Ridge mountain folk. 3—Russian Soviet workman ripping an icon from a church that was transformed into a workers' club.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Hoover Asks More Economy in Expenditures—Revolt in Santo Domingo.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT HOOVER started off the week with a plea to the people of the nation to be moderate in their requests to congress for appropriations for projects in various parts of the country. His aim is to keep governmental expenditures down to a figure so reasonable that an increase in taxes will be obviated. Though this should seem a worthy aim, and in stating it the President carefully made it plain that he was not reflecting on the wisdom of congress, he brought upon himself the wrath of some of the senators, notably Mr. Glass of Virginia.

The appropriations situation was the subject of a White House breakfast conference attended by Republican leaders of both houses of congress, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Undersecretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, Col. J. C. Roop, director of the budget, and Walter H. Newton, one of the President's secretaries.

Mr. Newton issued a statement in which he enumerated proposals for increased expenditures totaling $1,735,000,000, which he said if approved would imply an increase in taxes of 40 per cent. The list, however, included many projects that the congressional leaders had either never heard of or knew would not be given serious consideration. Consequently the imposing list did not appear to frighten them.

Senator Glass, reading Newton's statement in the senate, declared that "nothing more shameless has ever emanated from the White House within my thirty years of service in congress." The President, he said, was setting up a straw man merely for the purpose of knocking him down, since, as every one knew, many bills were introduced at every session of congress only for home consumption and with no idea that they would be enacted into law.

Mr. Hoover, meanwhile, had given out a statement obviously intended to pacify congress. In it he said: "It should be understood that the unprecedented drive now in progress for new legislation and for expansion of established services which increase expenditure beyond the budget, only in a small per cent originates with members of congress or heads of government departments. It originates from different sections of the country itself and from various groups and organizations, each vigorously supporting their own projects. Many of these projects are worthy and no doubt can and should be undertaken some time over future years, especially when funds are free by completion of legislation already adopted." And he urged "the people at home" to realize that the government cannot undertake immediately every worthy project.

IMMEDIATELY after the issuance of the President's economy plea the house adopted a senate resolution appropriating $7,000,000 for loans to farmers in the flood stricken areas of fifteen Southern and Western states, though opponents declared the measure was "pork" and "political pie."

Under the resolution, as adopted, the secretary of agriculture may make advances for the purchase of seed, feed and fertilizer, which banks refuse. Loans in only six states, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia were authorized under the original senate resolution. The house agriculture committee, however, added Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and New Mexico and the house itself tacked on Missouri and Oklahoma.

Representative O'Connor of Oklahoma said: "Everybody knows the purpose of this bill is to get congressional votes, but so long as you are cutting the pie, Oklahoma wants its piece."

THE Dominican republic was in the throes of a revolution last week. Insurgent forces, determined to keep President Vasquez from running for re-election and to assure the free choice of his successor in May, assembled in various parts of the island and marched on the capital city, Santo Domingo. They entered the city firing volleys in the air and were enthusiastically greeted by the populace. There was no bloodshed as the rebels took possession of all the public buildings. President Vasquez took refuge in the American legation and other administration leaders sought the protection of various foreign consulates. Vice President Alfonseca resigned. Charles B. Curtis, the American minister, was acting as intermediary between the insurgents and the government and was trying to bring about an agreement whereby the situation could be solved without bloodshed or damage to property. The insurgent leaders had promised to respect all lives and property and made no changes except in the police force of the city.

John M. Cabot of Massachusetts, a young member of the American embassy staff, was most active as the emissary of Minister Curtis and after a swift trip to Santiago to confer with Rafael Urena, chief of the insurgents, he was hopeful that a peaceable settlement of the whole controversy could be arranged.

In Washington it was said by officials that it probably would not be necessary to send marines to the Dominican republic to protect American lives and property. If they are needed, however, there are plenty within easy reach, and the scouting fleet is now in Caribbean waters.

CAMILLE CHAUTEMPS, Radical Socialist, and his government of France lasted only five days. Then they were denied a vote of confidence by the chamber of deputies and were forced to resign. Chautemps told parliament he had no intention of following the radical policies of the left wing, except that taxes would be reduced, but would maintain the lines of action which Andre Tardieu, his predecessor, had outlined, including his policy in the naval conference at London. The center refused to believe him, and the left wing was displeased. The vote, which was 202 to 277 against Chautemps, showed there is no real majority in the chamber of deputies and that any government can survive only through a coalition of center and left groups.

Raymond Poincare was called by President Doumergue but declined to undertake the formation of a ministry on the ground of ill health. So Tardieu was given the job again and Poincare said he would help him, though he could not accept a place in the cabinet. The expectation was that Tardieu would be able to make up his government in time to resume work in the naval conference by March 5.

IN THE absence of the French delegation the chief delegates of the other nations in the London naval conference resumed their negotiations, and it was reported the Americans, English and Japanese were making notable progress in adjusting their differences. The British official spokesman gave out a communique laying stress on the fact that "the five-power pact is still holding the center of the picture" and adding that "any sort of an agreement reached will be purely tentative, will be dependent on French and Italian acceptance and will also depend upon its inclusion in a five-power treaty."

WHEAT raisers and wheat speculators had a lively time last week. Europe had the idea that the United States and Canada were going to boost the price of wheat, so it obtained its supplies in other markets and cut down its consumption. Then Chairman Legge of the federal farm board made the statement that the board would not support the wheat market so as to stabilize the price somewhere near the price its purchasing agency was paying and that it would buy only from co-operatives. This was somewhat distorted and misunderstood in parts of the country and the result was that non-co-operative wheat was dumped on the market and prices fell alarmingly. The farm board's funds were then used to purchase large amounts of May and March wheat, this led other buyers into the market and prices rallied considerably.

Mr. Legge, after conferring with President Hoover, issued a statement designed to co-ordinate the farm board's program with the government's efforts to stabilize business generally, and asking the co-operation of the grain trade in restoration of the grain markets. Mr. Legge added significantly that the board will stand firmly on its wheat loan policy and that he is confident its co-operative agencies "will get the loan figure out of their wheat," namely, $1.18 a bushel at Chicago.

PIERRE S. DUPONT, chairman of the board of the E. I. Dupont de Nemours company of Wilmington, N. J., was the star witness of the wets before the house judiciary committee and he and others almost as well known argued strongly for modification of the dry laws. The day before the committee heard W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, who urged that the Volstead act be repealed and authority be delegated to the states to determine for themselves what is intoxicating liquor and whether they should enact legislation to enforce the Eighteenth amendment. He expressed the opinion that "a great advance in the real cause of temperance" would be made by properly regulated manufacture and sale of liquor under state and national supervision, similar to the Canadian and Swedish systems, with these modified to suit conditions peculiar to America.

POLITICS in Wisconsin have reached the pot and kettle stage. Members of the La Follette faction of the Republican party are trying to oust Gov. Walter J. Kohler from office because of alleged violations of the election law, and now the Kohler faction has retaliated. A petition asking for the naming of special counsel to start removal proceedings against Lieut. Gov. Henry A. Huber, Attorney General John W. Reynolds and Secretary of State Theodore Dammann was filed with the governor just before he left for a two weeks' vacation in Florida.

These three men, who are La Folletteites, are accused of pooling their funds in the late campaign and thus conspiring to bring their filings under the limit of $1,500 each, and of otherwise circumventing the election law. The only constitutional state officer not now under charges is State Treasurer Solomon Levitan.

ROMAN Catholicism lost one of its most eminent churchmen in the death of Raphael Cardinal Merry del Val, arch-priest of the basilica of St. Peter's and secretary of the congregation of the holy office, and former papal secretary of state under Pope Pius X. The cardinal, who was a member of a noble Spanish family, passed away after an emergency operation for appendicitis. He was sixty-four years of age. In 1903 and again in 1914 he was urged as a candidate for the papal throne but failed to get the necessary two-thirds vote of the college of cardinals. He was prominently identified with the intransigeant party that upheld the church's right for temporal power, and was an opponent of modernism.

Only a few days before the death of Cardinal Merry del Val came that of Carlo Cardinal Perosi. The college of cardinals is thus reduced to 28 Italian and 30 foreigners, there being twelve vacancies.

Other deaths of the week included those of Mabel Normand, screen star; Ahmed Mirza, former shah of Persia; Maj. George H. Putnam, New York publisher, and Eugene Byfield, Chicago hotel man and sportsman.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES was sworn in as chief justice of the Supreme court on Monday, the oath being administered by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, the Nestor of the bench.

Among the decisions handed down by the Supreme court was one declaring constitutional the provisions of the packers and stock yards act authorizing the secretary of agriculture to prescribe maximum rates for the services of commission dealers at public stock yards.

SPRAY EARLY TO KILL PLANT LICE

Aphids May Be Controlled by Application of Nicotine.

Aphids, or plant lice, which feed by sucking the juices of plants, may be controlled best by applications of liquid nicotine sulphate spray when the pests first attack the plants.

Such plant lice often feed on the undersides of the leaves, causing them to curl. After the leaves begin to curl it is difficult to apply control measures properly, according to Sam C. McCampbell, deputy state entomologist for the Colorado Agricultural college.

The presence of plant lice is often indicated by an unusual abundance of ants on plants. Many common aphids have a protective coloring similar to the foliage they feed upon. Consequently the casual observer may not notice their presence until the plant begins to show injury.

Because of their piercing-sucking method of feeding, plant lice cannot be controlled by arsenicals or other insecticides classed as stomach poisons, but they may be readily controlled by contact sprays and dusts. Although nicotine dusts are practical under certain conditions, liquid nicotine sulphate is generally advised because it can be obtained in practically every town in the state.

A standard spray may be prepared by dissolving one cubic inch of soap in one gallon of water, and adding one teaspoonful of 40 per cent nicotine sulphate.

The spray should be applied thoroughly to all parts of the plant, especially under the leaves. A fine spray, with good pressure obtains best results.

Only those insects wet by the spray will be killed. The soap increases the wetting or spreading properties of the solution.

Spray Rig Should Be in Good Working Condition

It is now high time that the spray rig should be in good working condition and advantage taken of the few remaining days to apply the spray for peach leaf curl. The symptoms of this disease are well known to most peach growers. The leathery, sickly-yellow, curled and distorted leaves followed by defoliation in the early summer are always alarming, but it is then too late to apply a remedy. The application can be made any time during the dormant period except in freezing weather, but do not put it off until the buds have started as it is then too late to be effective.

Use liquid lime-sulphate at the rate of 6½ gallons in water sufficient to make 100 gallons of dilute spray. If San Jose scale is present increase the strength to 11 gallons in 100.

The most important factor in controlling the curl is thoroughness of application. Select a bright quiet day and be sure to coat all parts of the tree. The fungus spores that you are after are on the buds and twigs and a fine spray under high pressure is necessary to hit them.

Horticultural Notes

Beekeeping and fruit growing go hand in hand.

Debudding has developed greater terminal growth in young apple trees than pruning.

* * *

The honey bee is our chief fruit pollinizer and much of the production of fruit which we have we owe to the bees.

* * *

Grape arbors can be used advantageously in making the home grounds attractive. Carefuly plan the location so that they will appear to good advantage.

* * *

Bordeaux mixture should be used the same day it is made, that is, soon after the solutions of copper sulphate and of lime are brought together. It deteriorates rapidly with the passage of hours.

* * *

Ordering a sufficient supply of spray materials early is a money-saving practice. As the demand increases in the spring the price goes up. Both lime and blue stone keep well if properly stored.

* * *

Timeliness in spraying begins in winter. Prompt ordering of parts and attention to repair work mean added insurance of timeliness next spring and summer—when hours lost may be dollars wasted.

* * *

Lime which has become air-slaked cannot be used for bordeaux mixture without danger of injury to the sprayed plants.

* * *

Bordeaux mixture and other copper fungicides should not be made or kept in metal vessels. Wooden barrels or tubs should be used.

* * *

The leaf roller is one of our most difficult pests to control and oil sprays with a high oil content are recommended to be used as ovicides on the unhatched eggs.

Testing Seed Is Important Task

Ordinary Unglazed Newspaper Cut Into Strips Is Found Useful.

Recent experiments at University farm with newspaper testers have developed speedy and cheap methods of testing seed, particularly seed corn.

Use Wet Paper.

"Ordinary unglazed newspaper may be torn or cut into strips about 8 inches wide and 12 to 14 inches long," says H. K. Wilson, assistant agronomist of the Minnesota experiment station. "About six sheets of paper should be thoroughly soaked in water by kneading it into a wet roll. It is important that all sheets be wet. The strip of soaked paper is spread on a flat surface and kernels of corn to be tested distributed in the same manner employed in making a rag doll. About 50 kernels can be placed in each doll. Next, another strip of several thicknesses of soaked newspaper is placed on top of the corn, the edges of the paper are crimped together and then rolled into a compact doll. The ends should be tied loosely and the roll placed in a two-quart fruit jar.

"This jar does not require a lid but should be turned upside down and set in a warm place. A small nail placed under one edge will permit air circulation. It is unnecessary to give any further attention to the test until the results are taken one week later.

Carefully Tested Plan.

"This plan was carefully compared with the plan of placing a lid on the jar and punching a hole in it for air, which has been recommended in some quarters, and gave 9 per cent higher germination and much more vigorous seedlings."

Manure and Flies Are Big Menace to Health

It is a well-known fact that flies breed in manure and that they are not only a nuisance but also a menace to the health of both man and beast. It is equally well known that if manure is left lying in the barnyard till the corn is laid by a very large percentage of its fertility will be lost through fermentation and leaching, says the Iowa Homestead. If the bulk of the manure accumulated during the winter months can be hauled out before spring work begins there will be a chance of killing two birds with one shot—of reducing the fly nuisance and of saving valuable elements of fertility that are so much needed by our soils.

Let us get busy with the manure spreaders as soon as possible. If there is no better place for the manure than the pasture it may be used to advantage to increase its live stock carrying capacity.

Immature Grasses High in Much Needed Protein

Some tests which have been run on the feeding value of immature grasses by the Wisconsin department of agriculture indicate that many people have failed to appreciate the relatively high percentage of protein which they contained. Some samples of the first clippings of timothy and clover which were analyzed showed as high as 20 per cent of protein on the basis of dry weight. Samples of immature June grass ran equally as high, while a sample of immature rye was found to have 24 per cent of protein. Mature timothy hay has only about 6 per cent of protein and rye straw would have but little protein when mature.

Such figures as these would indicate that when grain is fed to cows on pasture during the spring and early summer, such feed would not need to be as high in protein as is sometimes considered necessary.

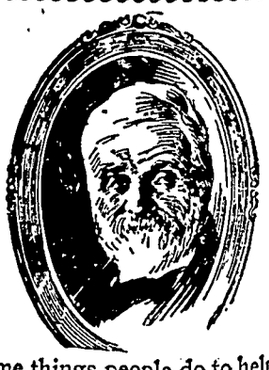
HAS THE LAXATIVE IN YOUR HOME A DOCTOR'S APPROVAL?



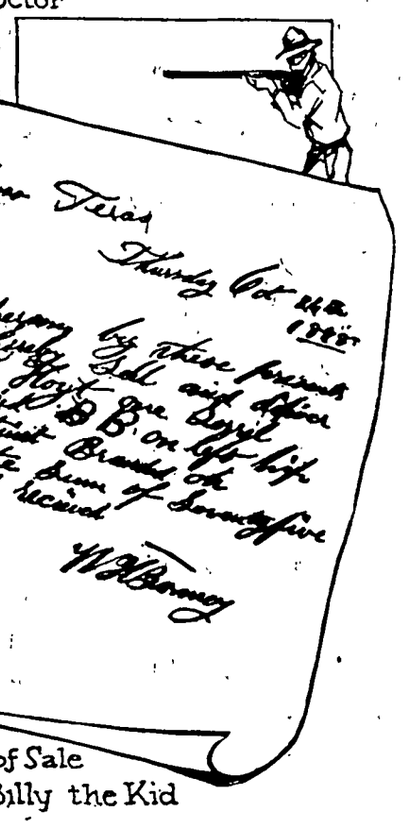
Some things people do to help the bowels whenever any bad breath, feverishness, biliousness, or lack of appetite warn of constipation, really weaken these organs. Only a doctor knows what will cleanse the system without harm. That is why the laxative in your home should have the approval of a family doctor.

The wonderful product, known to millions as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a family doctor's prescription for sluggish bowels. It never varies from the original prescription which Dr. Caldwell wrote thousands of times in many years of practice, and proved safe and reliable for men, women and children. It is made from herbs and other pure ingredients, so it is pleasant-tasting, and can form no habit. You can buy this popular laxative from all drugstores.

He Dined With Jesse James and Billy the Kid!

Henry F. Hoyt

The Frontier Doctor



A Bill of Sale from Billy the Kid

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

PRESS dispatches recently chronicled the death in Japan of Dr. Henry F. Hoyt who was on his way home from the Philippines where he had been revisiting the scenes of his career as chief surgeon of the United States army there during the Filipino insurrection. The brief mention which these dispatches made of his earlier career in the West gave only a slight intimation of the thrilling stories which he could tell of the old days when there was a frontier in America. Fortunately, however, for a posterity of Americans who seemingly can never learn enough of those epic days, he left behind him a record of his part in "the winning of the West," and in the book, "A Frontier Doctor," published recently by the Houghton Mifflin company, there is additional proof of the fact that frontier history was made quite as much by less picturesque but more important personages than the long-haired, buckskin-clad Bills and Dicks and Sams of dime novel fame.

Before his death Doctor Hoyt claimed the unique distinction of being the only man alive who had had dinner simultaneously with two characters who come nearest being the "American Robin Hood"—Jesse James and Billy the Kid. But his claim to fame does not rest alone on this distinction, which to some might be a doubtful one, indeed. That was but a minor incident in the career of this "frontier doctor" but it is indicative of the wealth of experience that was his. For he was a pioneer in more senses than one. He was the son of a pioneer and spent a pioneer boyhood on a farm near what is now the city of St. Paul, Minn. He served as a rodman in one of the pioneer surveying parties along the northern frontier. He was the first doctor to locate and practice his profession in the Texas Panhandle. He was a passenger on the first stage coach to run from Bismarck, N. D. to Deadwood, S. D. He opened the first drug store in Bernalillo, N. M., a typical southwestern frontier town. He was the only chief surgeon wounded on the battlefield in the Spanish-American war and he was the first person to utilize Chinese coolies as litter bearers in the United States army.

Around that framework of pioneering achievements can be built a life story which symbolizes pretty well the history of America during the last sixty years. Few passages in the writing of today, either fact or fiction, have summed up more adequately or more dramatically the amazing transformation of a country from a raw wilderness to a modern, highly civilized community than the opening paragraphs of "A Frontier Doctor" which read as follows:

During State Fair Week in September, 1927, I visited a flying-field at the southeast corner of Snelling and Larpenteur Avenues, St. Paul, Minnesota. Planes were humming through the air in every direction, when suddenly a young woman dropped from one as it passed over, a parachute unfolded, and she made a graceful landing but a few paces from the spot where I first appeared on the screen of life.

In 1854, this flying field was a typical Minnesota farm, owned by my father, Lorenzo Hoyt, who had arrived in Minnesota, as a pioneer in 1848. Our farm then was practically a self-sufficing unit. Not only did we raise all our own food, including coffee substitute composed of several varieties of parched cereals, but we even provided our own clothing by raising and shearing our own sheep, carding the wool and spinning it, and on our own loom making our own cloth.

There were no railroads in St. Paul in those early days. All our transportation was by stage or steamboat. Two of my uncles were rivermen and one of my pleasures was driving down to the levee at the foot of Jackson Street to meet the boats coming up-river from New Orleans. Sometimes as my father and I sat in the buggy watching the unloading of the boat, very often a fine looking, strongly featured young man would come over and chat with us. This was James J. Hill, then working as a freight clerk at forty-five dollars a month. Many years later, when, by his remarkable foresight and acumen, he had risen to be one of the great railway magnates of the country, the head of the Great Northern Railway lines, I became chief surgeon of all his properties.

Young Hoyt's father was not able to provide funds for a college education, so the boy set out to win one for himself. His first inclination was to become a civil engineer and his first job was with a surveying party sent out by the St. Paul and Pacific railroad. In 1873 he secured a place with the government expedition which was sent out to survey the boundary line between the United States and Canada from the Lake of the Woods west to the foothills of the Rockies. The military escort for this party was a company of the Twentieth infantry and two troops of the Seventh cavalry, commanded by Captains Weir and Keogh. Three years later Doctor Hoyt was to learn of the death of Captain Keogh at the battle of the Little Big Horn and to hear that his horse, "Comanche," which young Hoyt admired so much during this surveying expedition, was the sole survivor of Custer's command which rode into the "Valley of Death."

After a series of exciting adventures with this surveying party, including several attacks by Indians and narrow escapes from death in both prairie fires and blizzards, young Hoyt returned to his home and decided to become a doctor. After completing his course of study in that profession he began looking around for some "live town" in which to start his practice. His selection was Deadwood in the Black Hills which was at that time (1877) at its heyday as a gold camp. But in Deadwood men did not die of lingering illnesses. They usually died quickly—and with their boots on. So it did not take the young doctor long to decide that prospecting offered more opportunities than doctoring. Accordingly he tried his hand at that but after a short time tired of it and drifted south into New Mexico.

Arriving at Fort Sumner, the young doctor's first patient was William Maxwell, son of Lucien B. Maxwell of the Maxwell Land Grant fame, who was suffering from a case of malignant smallpox and whom he was unable to save. Further down the Pecos valley he made the acquaintance of John Chisum, "the Cattle King of New Mexico," famous for his part in the Lincoln County war which started Billy the Kid on the road to notoriety. To young Hoyt the cattle king said: "Doc, over yonder is the Panhandle of Texas, a big country, full of people, an epidemic of smallpox and no doctor. There's the place you're looking for." So to the Panhandle the young doctor went and began practicing in Tascosa, one of the wildest of the wild cow towns in the old days.

But he soon found that Chisum's prophecy was too optimistic. The smallpox epidemic was soon over, the Panhandle was not "full of people" and there was little for him to do. So the next incident in his career was securing work as a cowboy under W. C. (Bill) Moore, former outlaw but now the superintendent of the LX ranch. The senior foreman of the LX was an even more famous character—Charles A. Siringo, later noted as a peace officer, detective and author.

After a short career as a cowboy, Hoyt returned to the practice of his profession in Tascosa and in the fall of 1878 he made the acquaintance of Billy the Kid, who was just then assuming the leadership of the gang which was so soon to spread a trail of red across the Southwest. Of this Doctor Hoyt writes:

Billy Bonney was then eighteen years old, a handsome youth with smooth face, wavy brown hair, an athletic and symmetrical figure, and clear blue eyes that could look one through and through. Unless angry he always seemed to have a pleasant expression with a ready smile. His head was well shaped, his features regular, his nose aquiline, his most noticeable characteristic a slight projection of his two upper front teeth. . . .

Billy was an expert at most western sports and dissipations with the exception of drinking. Much has been published of his exploits during drinking bouts, but it is my opinion they are mostly fiction. I never knew of his taking a drink of liquor all the time he was in the Panhandle. To tell the truth, this fact helped to make me friendly with the outlaw, for I was a teetotaler myself. Reared in strict Christian principles, I had never touched liquor.

Redoubtable as was this notorious outlaw, there was one accomplishment in which the young frontier doctor excelled him. He tells of it as follows:

On a beautiful moonlight night a baile (dance) was in progress at the home of Don Pedro Romero. Bonney and I stepped out to enjoy it and incidentally strolled across the plaza, about one hundred yards in width, to Rinehart's store opposite. Returning I challenged the Kid to a footrace to the dance hall. I found he could run much faster than "the Sailor" (a local sprinter whom Hoyt had defeated in a race some time previously) but I led him all the way. As we neared the door I slacked up, while Billy kept on at full speed through the door.

Mexican adobe houses, for some reason, have a threshold about a foot high, and as the Kid flew through, the heel of one of his cowboy boots caught on it, landing him at full length on the floor in the middle of the ballroom. Quicker than a flash his prostrate body was surrounded by his four pals, back to back, with a Colt's forty-five in each hand, cocked and ready for business. The Kid's unconventional entrance was to them an indication of something wrong, and their lightning exhibition of preparedness showed wonderful efficiency of its kind. How or where guns were concealed was never quite understood, but their owners all registered chagrin when they learned they were barred at all future Romero balles.

The acquaintance between the young outlaw and the young doctor ripened into friendship of a sort and Hoyt won the regard of the Kid by presenting to him a ladies' gold watch which he had won in a poker game and which the outlaw wished to give to his Mexican sweetheart. Attached to this watch was a long chain of braided hair and in the only known photograph of Billy the Kid, two strands of this chain can be plainly seen crossing his shirt front. The result of this gift was a somewhat surprising one. When Hoyt decided to leave the Panhandle and go to Las Vegas, N. M., Billy the Kid presented him with his favorite horse, "Dandy Dick," and in order to protect Hoyt in case his ownership was ever questioned, also wrote out and gave to him a formal bill of sale. This bill of sale, which Doctor Hoyt preserved to the day of his death, is one of the few known specimens of Billy the Kid's handwriting in existence.

At that time, the origin of "Dandy Dick," a fine Arabian and well-known locally as a race horse, was a mystery. The Kid never would tell where he got him although he did admit that "there's a story connected with him." Years later, Doctor Hoyt, through correspondence with Charles A. Siringo and James Brady, court interpreter at Carrizozo, N. M., learned that the horse had once been owned by Major Murphy, one of the leading figures in the Lincoln County war, who had presented it to Sheriff William Brady of Lincoln county. Brady was riding "Dandy Dick" when he was killed by the Kid!

When Hoyt arrived in Las Vegas, he found that boom town at the "end of steel" on the Santa Fe railroad, which was then building through New Mexico, was "full of doctors." Anxious to secure money to continue his medical studies he put aside his scruples against gambling and "threw in" with two men in opening a faro game. But at the end of a month all three were broke and Hoyt next took a job as a bartender in a hotel. While engaged in this occupation he had a part in the historic dinner with Billy the Kid and Jesse James.

Near Las Vegas was a famous hot springs and a hotel, noted throughout the country for its dinners. Sundays always drew a big crowd there. Writes Hoyt:

I rode out one Sunday and found at a corner table the only vacant seat in the room. Glancing at the three guests already there, I was perfectly amazed to recognize the one on my left as Billy the Kid, urbane and smiling as ever. We shook hands, but neither mentioned a name.

We were chatting away of old times in Texas as if we were a couple of cowboy friends, when the man on Bonney's left made a comment on something he said. Whereupon Bonney said "Hoyt, meet my friend Mr. Howard from Tennessee."

The fourth man had nearly finished his meal when I sat down, and soon retired. Mr. Howard had noticeable characteristics. He had piercing steely blue eyes with a peculiar blink, and the tip of a finger on his left hand was missing. I mentally classed him as a railroad man. He proved to be congenial, was a good talker, had evidently traveled quite a bit, and the meal passed pleasantly. After dinner we separated and Billy, taking me to his room, gave me, after pledging me to secrecy, one of the surprises of my life. Mr. Howard was no other man than the bandit and train robber, Jesse James. I was skeptical but Billy soon convinced me it was true.

Some other unwritten history which Doctor Hoyt reveals for the first time in his book in recording this incident is the fact that Jesse James made Billy the Kid an offer to join forces. But Billy had no desire to engage in bank or train robbery—cattle rustling and horse stealing being his favorite diversion. More than that, joining forces with the Missouri outlaw would take him away from "the magnet at Fort Sumner" (his Mexican sweetheart) and for these two reasons he turned down Jesse James' offer. It requires a vivid imagination indeed to visualize the possible results if these two redoubtable outlaws had joined forces!

HORSE BUSINESS IS COMING BACK

Breeders Have Been Timid to Resume Operations.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Whether the horse continues to decline in numbers by reason of displacement by the motor car and tractor, or not, the horse business is due for better times in the opinion of J. O. Williams of the United States Department of Agriculture. The number of horses on the farms of the country declined in 1928 to the lowest point yet recorded, but the market stiffened or advanced. Mr. Williams points out that for several years farmers have been breeding and raising only about half as many colts as are required for replacement of the diminished number of work animals in use.

"Inferior horses of all types are a drag on the market, and undoubtedly will continue to be so," says Mr. Williams. "But the difficulty with the horse and mule situation in recent years has been largely psychological. Breeders of horses and mules have wondered whether there would ever be a recurrence in demand for work stock and have been timid about resuming breeding operations. This has resulted in the present shortage of good work and pleasure animals, a situation which promises to become much more acute within the next few years. We believe that farmers should now study their farm power situation; those who will continue to use horses and mules can now replace aging animals with young stock before an acute shortage occurs.

That farmers are beginning to realize this situation is reflected by a study the Department of Agriculture recently made of the number of stallions and jacks in service in 24 states. The number of these has declined sharply in recent years, but owners in some localities reported that last year witnessed a considerable increase in the number of mares bred.

Cross-Breeding Tests at University of California

At the University of California cross-breeding with sheep tests throw light on the best rams to use.

On pure-bred Rambouillet ewes Southdown, Shropshire, Suffolk, Romney Marsh, Hampshire and Rambouillet rams were used, one ram to 20 ewes. When between four and five months old the lambs were graded.

The Southdown lambs—16 raised—weighed an average of 78.5 pounds, grading 43.75 per cent choice, with average value of $10.03 for all. Shropshires—24 lambs—weighed 76.7 pounds, grading 41.7 per cent choice, with average value of $10.07. Hampshires—22 lambs—weighed 76.3, grading 3 per cent choice, with average value of $9.13. Suffolks—13 lambs—weighed 81.6 pounds, with average value of $9.95. Romneys—19 lambs—weighed 77.5 pounds, grading 36.8 per cent choice, with average value of $9.25. Rambouillets — 21 lambs—weighed average 70.1 pounds, grading 19 per cent choice, valued at $8.83.

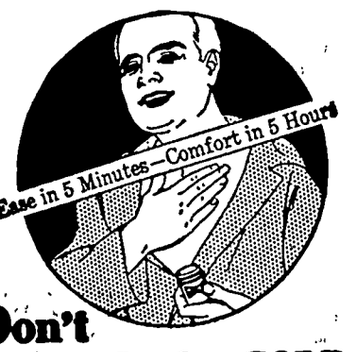
The Suffolks bred the smallest number of lambs, 13, which, however, made the greatest weights, but graded only 3 per cent choice. The Southdowns also bred only 16 lambs, but made 78.5 pounds weight and the high percentage of choice grade, which put them at the top in value.

Liver Flukes in Sheep Difficult of Treatment

In most all flocks of sheep there is now and then one or perhaps several head that do not seem to thrive even though you have given them good care and feed. Most likely stomach worms is the cause combined with the ills that are common in infested sheep. But if you have treated them with approved remedies and they do not respond favorably it is just possible that you have an entirely different parasite. Namely, what is called liver flukes. Liver flukes are entirely different from a stomach worm. They are a flat, brownish gray worm and inhabit the gall bladder and liver of sheep and sometimes there are a few in the intestines. The only known remedy for flukes is carbon tetrachloride. It is a violent poison, but properly administered seldom does any harm. The usual treatment for stomach worms does not apply for flukes, they require special dosing. Like the stomach worms, flukes came into corn belt flocks unawares, like a thief in the night. They are here and must be reckoned with in the future.

Calves on Roughage

The tendency on many farms is to winter calves on cornstalks and straw and perhaps some timothy prairie hay, sudan grass or some other nonleguminous roughage. All such roughages are deficient in protein and mineral matter as is required for normal growth and for keeping it in a thrifty condition. Quite often there is a considerable amount of cheap nonleguminous roughage on the farm and it has to be or should be used for some purpose.



Don't neglect a COLD

DISTRESSING cold in chest or throat—that so often leads to something serious—generally responds to good old Musterole with the first application. Should be more effective if used once every hour for five hours.

Working like the trained hands of a masseur, this famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other helpful ingredients brings relief naturally. It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by doctors and nurses.

Shameful Charge

The late Thomas F. Ryan said one day at a luncheon in the Metropolitan club:

"The suspicion that once existed between capital and labor has practically died out. Most of this suspicion was based on error, anyway. Yes, the recriminations on both sides were often as erroneous as the shameful attack on widows that was contained in the schoolboy's examination paper.

"In answer to the question, 'Tell what you know about the Black Hole of Calcutta,' this schoolboy wrote:

"'A lot of Englishmen were shut up in the Black Hole of Calcutta with one small widow, and only four got out alive.'"

Henry Suckow Jr. and the Misses Bremer and Siemsen had a rather thrilling experience Saturday when they were returning home in Mr. Suckow's car. At a point about a mile east of Clear Lake, near the old Miner farm a man, boy and dog were walking on the road. Henry slowed down for the corner when the dog suddenly decided to run across the road into Henry's car, and the impact of the car hitting the dog had enough force to throw the car into the ditch and over-urn it two times. Luckily no one was injured, even slightly. The dog was killed and the car suffered a broken wheel, top, windshield and radiator.

Wm. Stille suffered a rather severe injury yesterday (Wednesday) about noon. Mr. Stille and his brother, John E. Stille were cutting and splitting some logs. Both mes were working on the same log opposite each other, when John accidently swung his axe down on Bill's left wrist, cutting down to the bone It required four stitches to close up the gap left by the axe blade.

This Mother Had Problem

As a rule, milk is about the best food for children, but there are times when they are much better off without it. It should always be left off when children show by feverish, fretful or cross spells, by bad breath, coated tongue, sallow skin, indigestion, biliousness, etc., that their stomach and bowels are out of order.

In cases like this, California Fig Syrup never fails to work wonders, by the quick and gentle way it removes all the souring waste which is causing the trouble, regulates the stomach and bowels and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act normally of their own accord. Children love its rich, fruity flavor and it's purely vegetable and harmless, even for babies.

Millions of mothers have proved its merit and reliability in over 50 years of steadily increasing use. A Western mother, Mrs. May Snavely, Montrose, California, says: "My little girl, Edna's, tendency to constipation was a problem to me until I began giving her California Fig Syrup. It helped her right away and soon her stomach and bowels were acting perfectly. Since then I've never had to have any advice about her bowels. I have also used California Fig Syrup with my little boy, with equal success."

To be sure of getting the genuine, which physicians endorse, always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name.

Picture Came in Handy But Not as Work of Art

Robert Henri, the New York painter, was talking about a man who had paid $800,000 for an old master.

"He isn't a patron of the arts," said Mr. Henri. "He's a patron of the art dealers. He buys as an investment and advertisement, and his love of pictures is on a par with the farmer's.

"The farmer, you know, said to an artist:

"'You left a fine paintin' here last summer—paintin' of a cow and some trees. It come in mighty handy.'

"'Ah, you framed it and hung it in your parlor?' said the artist.

"'No, oh, no,' said the farmer. 'I scraped the paint off'n the canvas and took it around to old George, the shoemaker, and he made me a jim-dandy pair of canvas shoes out of it, by heck.'"

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

Fliers Say Courage Varies with the Way they Feel

AEROPLANE pilots tell us that their courage, their whole attitude toward flying, varies from day to day, with the way they feel. If they feel full of pep, healthy, they can try anything—nothing frightens them. Their nerve is unshaken; their skill keen; their flying is machine-like in its perfection.

It is an entirely different story, however, if they wake up in the morning feeling sick, down in the mouth. Then flying becomes a real danger.

What is the matter with these brave people when they are not up to par? The natural poisons in their bodies have not been swept away. They are allowing their brains to be clouded and dulled by poisons which should not be permitted to remain in the body.

This is the lesson we can learn from airmen. It is the lesson that points to Nujol—the simple, natural, normal way—without the use of drugs or medicines to keep the body internally clean of the poisons that slow it up. Nujol is pure, tasteless, colorless as clear water. It forms no habit; it cannot hurt even a baby.

See how the sunshine floods into your life when you are really well. Get a bottle of Nujol in its sealed package at any drug store. It costs only a few cents and it makes you feel like a million dollars. Find out for yourself what Nujol will do for you this very night. You can be at top-notch efficiency and happy all the time. Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

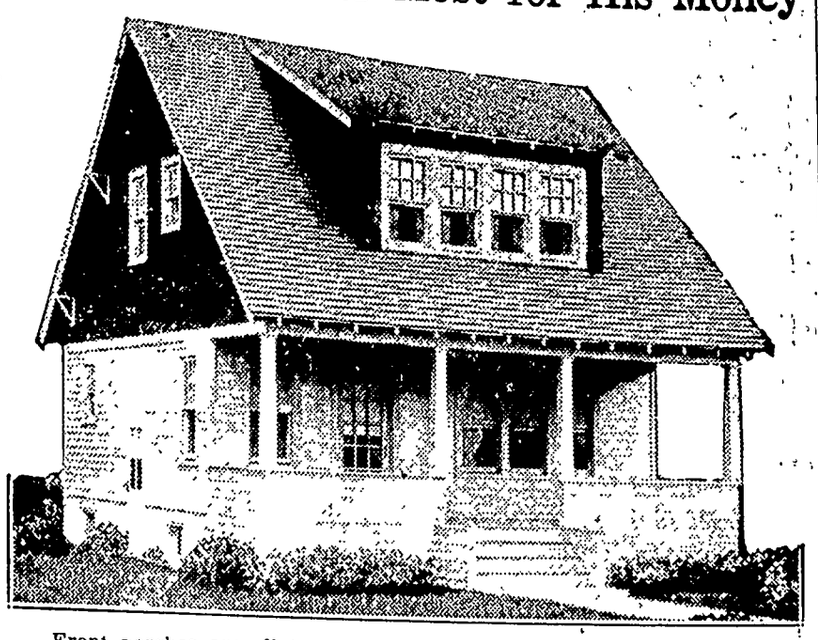
If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Attractive Small Frame Home That Gives Owner Most for His Money



Front porches are all too rare in the houses of today but here, though the house is small, we find a porch which will be a highly attractive place to rest on warm summer evenings.

By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

After all, there are few homes more attractive than those which have been designed to meet the needs of the home builder of moderate means. Contractors in small towns have evolved designs for their customers. Most of these are of frame and are planned so that the owner will get the most for his money.

In this class comes the home shown in the accompanying illustration. This is a five-room story-and-a-half house. It is 22 feet wide and 26 feet deep, exclusive of the wide semi-inclosed front porch. This porch is one of the good features of this house. Front porches are all too rare in houses of today, but we have here, though the house is small, a porch which will be a highly attractive place to rest on warm summer evenings.

The house contains three rooms on the first floor and two bedrooms and bathroom on the second floor. How these rooms are arranged and the size of each are shown on the floor plans reproduced here.

It will be noted that the living room extends the width of the house, it being 11 feet 6 inches deep and 21 feet wide. This is a larger living room than is ordinarily found in houses of this size. The dining room is connected with the living room with a cased opening and is 11 feet by 13 feet. The wide opening between the living room and the dining room gives an effect of spaciousness and practically combines the two rooms. At one end of the living room is an open fireplace, and at the other is an open stair to the second floor. The kitchen is also a corner room and is 9 feet 6 inches square.

Two large bedrooms on the second floor are made possible by a wide dormer window set in the steep pitched roof at either side. These dormers also take away the plain appearance of the room and add to the appearance of the house.

The house is of frame construction and has a concrete foundation; the basement is of the same size as the dimensions of the house. The lower half of the house to the eaves has clap-board siding, and the gables at either end are shingled, as are the walls of the dormer projections.

This is an unusually good design for the home builder who needs a house of this size, as it is attractive in exterior appearance, its rooms are large and well arranged with the idea of giving the most in light and ventilation, and it can erected at a comparably low cost.

Wood Material Used to Make Kitchen Modern

Pronounced opportunities are offered the building industry to promote interior home modernizing during the colder months, the National Lumber Dealers' association believes. Many firms are finding this source of business well worth cultivating, and there is a trend in the building industry toward stimulating the interest of home owners in this form of home improvement, according to various journals serving the building field.

A great deal of interest is centering on kitchens and breakfast nooks. This is particularly fortunate for lumber interests, the association believes, because in improving the kitchen, lumber almost invariably plays an important part. Wood also is featured in making breakfast alcoves more comfortable, convenient and attractive.

There is hardly anything which adds so much to the attractiveness and convenience of a kitchen as plenty of built-in features. These may be installed easily at little cost in practically any kitchen, old or new.

The various cupboards, cabinets, shelves and bins can be constructed readily by the carpenter or contractor or built up at the millwork house and installed by the carpenter. Some housewives will be interested in suggesting installations that will meet their particular needs.

Cupboards, containing shelves, drawers and bins come first. The four west coast woods—douglas fir, west coast hemlock, western red cedar and sitka spruce, as well as many others—are excellent materials for these uses. They are easy to machine to give true, square corners and tight-fitting joints.

Modernizing is receiving strong support from building and loan associations. A Topeka (Kan.) concern has adopted a policy of completely modernizing every house that comes into its hands before it is rented or sold. The result has been a 50 per cent decrease in rentals on hand and an increase of 100 per cent in sales. Through modernization, this concern believes, many foreclosures have been avoided and many discouraged home owners have been developed into contented owners.

This building and loan organization found that one of its borrowers who had become delinquent in payments had no reason for getting behind, except that they had become dissatisfied with their home. Investigation revealed that the house was satisfactory in every respect, except for the kitchen which was so poorly arranged that the owners despaired of ever doing anything with it.

The company suggested a modernizing plan, which was accepted. At a cost of about $275 the kitchen was completely transformed. The long, narrow window was removed and two short twin windows were installed just high enough to allow a fine sink to be installed. The old cabinet was removed and replaced with a complete unit of drawers and cabinets finished on the outside with stain and enamel.

A variety of appeals have been used by concerns interested in developing kitchen modernizing business. These include:

Cost is less than would be expected.

Small investment results in material increase in value.

Make the kitchen a place friends can be shown with pride.

An antiquated kitchen does more to lower the value of a home than any other room in it.

A properly arranged and equipped kitchen enables a given amount of work to be done in less time, leaving more time free for other things.

A modern kitchen makes easy work out of what would otherwise be drudgery.

Money value of a home is based directly on its convenience to a prospective buyer.

Plan Fixes the Style of Home, Not Exterior

Sometimes the present-day custom of insisting on stylistic labels to describe different types of houses is a source of great embarrassment to the architects who design them.

The public insists on calling one house colonial, another Spanish, another English and so forth, according to more or less superficial qualities of the houses in question. Generally these names mean only that in the matter of exterior silhouette and detail precedents derived from the architecture of these countries have been drawn upon.

It is a fact, however, that the essential character of a house can remain unchanged regardless of the exterior silhouette and detail. And since this essential character is determined almost entirely by the plan, and since the plan of our houses can only be as our mode of life in present-day America dictates, that essential character is fundamentally American.

POULTRY FACTS

FRESH AIR CURES CHICKEN'S COLDS

Ventilation and Dry Litter Will Prevent Troubles.

Chickens are unlucky in the structure of their heads, for it makes them susceptible to colds. Poultrymen should try to avoid conditions that will bring on colds, says Dr. E. L. Brunett, of the New York State College of Veterinary Medicine at Cornell university.

In the head, in front of the brain cavity, are thin cones of bones located in chambers. The use of these chambers is to provide a space in which the inhaled air is warmed before it is taken into the lungs. When a chicken develops a simple cold, an excessive amount of secretion forms in these cavities. As this increases, the poor drainage of the cavities allows it to accumulate. This accumulation is an ideal place for bacteria to multiply and the resulting bacterial growth makes the foul odor which is often present with roup.

A simple cold may be avoided or corrected by increasing the warmth with plenty of fresh air and providing plenty of dry litter. If the first stage is not checked the cold may end in roup with its characteristic head swelling and foul odors.

The opinion that roup is a contagious disease is not well founded, according to Doctor Brunett, for there is usually some underlying condition that is indirectly responsible. This may be tuberculosis, or worms, but whatever the cause it should be removed before a cure can be expected.

A third type of cold is more of a distinct disease, commonly known as bronchitis. This condition is acute and the birds die quickly. The cause of the disease is not known. The best treatment is to increase the temperature of the house, either by controlling the ventilation or by using brooder stoves. In the early part of the outbreak it is well to remove all sick birds and put them in heated brooder houses. Most of them will recover when placed in heated houses. Some disinfectants will give relief, but quack remedies should not be used.

Investigate Cod Liver Oil for Laying Fowls

The summary of experiments in England with cod liver oil for laying hens, says:

(1) Fowls not confined or in open-fronted houses do not require cod liver oil to prevent adult rickets.

(2) Fowls confined behind ordinary glass require some adequate source of vitamine D.

(3) The cod liver oil mixed to the extent of 2 per cent of the grain feed supplied the vitamine D requirements of the fowls under experiment.

(4) One per cent of medical cod liver oil in the scratch feed may not be sufficient to meet the requirements of layers confined behind window glass. The source of oil used may be a factor.

(5) It is not possible to state if cod liver oil is beneficial to fowls not confined or in open-fronted pens getting a normal ration that includes green food.

Healthy Chick Program Brings Higher Returns

Health sticks to clean chicks! By following four simple points in brooding poultrymen can save 90 per cent of their chicks. Not only more chicks will be saved but they will be more profitable birds to keep as layers and breeders. Grow them clean, and health and vigor will go with them through life.

The four points in the Kansas "healthy chick" program calls for clean houses, clean ground, and clean feed.

By following these four simple rules egg production has been increased 30 eggs per bird in farm flocks. This increase at 25 cents per dozen means an additional return of 60 cents per hen.

Move Brooder Houses

Brooder houses are commonly made movable in order to change their location and keep the chicks on clean ground.

But much of the convenience of a brooder house is lost when it is moved to a point distant from other farm buildings.

The problem of finding clean ground and keeping it free from disease germs is a difficult one under average farm conditions, but it is a sure road to success.

Prevent Cannibalism

Cannibalism may develop in a large bunch of chicks, no matter how completely fed or how free from parasites. The liberal use of tar is about as effective as anything in checking it. Watch many times a day for those that have been picked enough to draw blood and daub the tar on the wounds. If you can find something that the chicks dislike the taste of more than tar, use it. If that fails try paring off the point of the upper mandible, using care not to get too deep.

Irish Youth Movement Grows

The youth movement, which was started in Germany, is also making rapid strides in Ireland. In the last few weeks there has been an intensive effort to forward the health drive by establishing boy camps and boy scout centers. The idea has taken so well that it promises to become one of the largest educational campaigns ever held in that country.

Is a city housekeeper to be forever resigned to a fresh layer of soot on her window sills every day?

Better to ignore the children than to scold them all the time. They, at least, are happier.

Fight Salt Marsh Mosquito

The greedy salt marsh mosquito, big brother of the malarial insect, carries no disease, but his size and number make him such a pest that a new organization, the Gulf and South Atlantic Anti-Mosquito congress, will attack him in a correlated campaign all along the south Atlantic and gulf coasts. Airplanes and land machines will be used to spread larval poisons over the marshes.

You have got to be interested in something or somebody besides yourself to keep from being bored.

Even a man may be emotional—if he isn't married.

Children hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and harmless as the recipe reads. (The wrapper tells you just what Castoria contains.)

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, use it to keep the system from clogging. Your doctor will tell you Castoria deserves a place in the family medicine cabinet until your child is grown. He knows it is safe for the tiniest baby; effective for a boy in his teens. With this special children's remedy handy, you need never risk giving a boy or girl medicine meant for grown-ups.

Castoria is sold in every drug store; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

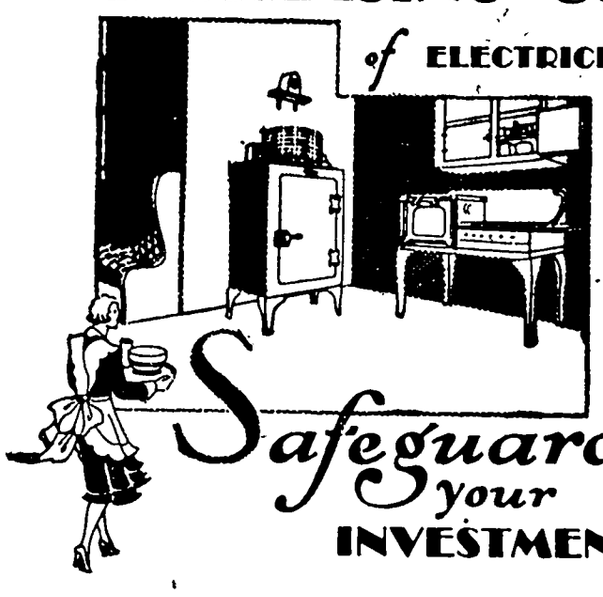
The INCREASING USE of ELECTRICITY



Safeguards your INVESTMENT

ONE of the factors which determines the value of an investment in public utility securities is "Continued Growth."

Our Company has made a notable record in its growth—each year has shown a substantial increase over the preceding year.

The growth of a utility is best shown by the increase in the use of the service it furnishes.

The amount of electricity distributed by our Company in 1929 was 13% greater than the amount distributed in 1928. As no new property was added, this increase resulted entirely from increased use of our property.

Such growth assures an investor of a continuance of the safety and stability of an investment in our Company.

We recommend our 6% Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock as a most desirable form of investment as it pays dividends quarterly.

Ask any manager or employee about it.

LONE BANDIT ROBS BANK AT GOODELL

TO DES MOINES POLICE

EAGLE GROVE BOY CONFESSED

Lloyd Musselman, 18, Lone Bandit Was In Klemme Last Wednesday

Lloyd Musselman, 18 year old Eagle Grove, Iowa youth who was captured in Des Moines early Friday morning after robbing the Goodell Savings Bank, confessed to police at Des Moines after a grilling and was turned over to the Sheriff of Hancock County and lodged in the Mason City within less than twenty four hours after he had committed the crime at Goodell.

Musselman, who entered the bank at Goodell about 1:00 o'clock last Thursday afternoon, forced Owen Conwell, vice president, and the only bank official in the building, to lie down on the floor, after he had forced him at the point of a gun to open the vault and hand over the bank's money. Musselman then casually walked out the door and drove north in his Chevrolet sedan, the back seat of the car being occupied only by a large police dog.

He Wanted To "Buy Horses"

Entering the bank, the blond bandit casually asked Mr. Conwell, who was seated in a small office adjoining the lobby, if he could "spare a few minutes to give him some information."

Mr. Conwell then came into the lobby to ask the stranger what he desired to know.

"Are you acquainted with a man in this neigborhood by the name of Miller?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Conwell, "do you mean Dan Miller?"

"How old is this Dan Miller?" the bandit again asked.

"About 50, I imagine," replied Mr. Conwell. "Why, do you want to get some horses?"

Miller is a farmer liivng near Goodell who deals in horses.

"Yeh, I sure do," replied the bandit, "Stick 'em up!". Mr. Conwell was surprised at this turn of affairs and complied with the demand.

Ordered Conwell To Hand Over Money In Vault

The bandit then ordered Conwell to open the vault and bring him the money and stood outside the vault and took the currency and coins as it was handed out by Mr. Conwell.

Mr. Conwell later stated that the gun used by the bandit was capped over the muzzle with what appeared to be a silencer of some kind.

Bandit "Kidded" Conwell

When the youthful bandit saw that his victim was rather nervous he started "kidding" him in a very pleasant tone of voice and assured Mr. Conwell he would not be harmed in the least. But this assurance Mr. Conwell took but little stock in.

As the last of the notes were being brought out from the vault and handed to the bandit the gunman commanded Mr. Conwell to lie flat on the floor and stay there, and Mr. Conwell complied with the order as the youth left the bank. Throughout the entire process, according to Mr. Conwell, the bandit was suave and gentle and almost apologetic for the trouble he was causing his victim.

Several Saw Bandit Leave

His work finished, the bandit left the building with the same careless attitude that he had entered it. In striding to his car he met Warner Butts, cashier of the bank, who was returning from dinner. His appearance was so ordinary that Mr. Butts did not pay any special attention but went on into the bank.

Car Roars Out Of Town North

In the meantime the bandit, with the spoils of a few minutes work, clambered into his car, experienced a little difficulty starting it, and finally pulled out of town with a roar. Mr. Butts saw Conwell on the floor and as soon as he saw what had happened rushed to the window and saw the car disappear down the street. At the end of the street the bandit turned north, the car, with a cut-out, roaring by the Christenson filling station, and was seen by Mrs. Christensen who noticed the noise and noted it was a Chevrolet car and a police dog was in the rear seat. The telephone operator immediately sent out calls to nearby towns and over rural lines.

After driving one mile north the bandit followed a winding road west and north and several persons along this road saw the car because of its noisy cut-out.

About 3 miles west on the country road the bandit had to slow up for a herd of pigs being driven by John Rust. Mr. Rust had opportunity to get a good description of the man.

From this point on the bandit took a cross country route through Kanawha, thence south and west through Fort Dodge and on to Des Moines where police picked him up in a rooming house.

At Goodell Gus O'Krueg started in pursuit, but had to stop and fill his car with gas. Mr. Conwell and L. W. Wesenberg took after him in another car.

Several Saw Him Enter Bank

When the bandit arrived in Goodell he leisurely alighted from his car in front of the bank, and glanced up and down the street. He then en-

ELL CLUB GIRLS STUDY ART OF BAKING BREAD

Someone said that cookery is not an art, but a "master art." If this is true of cookery, how equally true it is of one of the arts in the realm of cookery—that of bread making.

A Club Girl would be narrow indeed if she knew nothing about the kinds of bread eaten by folks in foreign lands, for the best bread in the world is made in Central Europe and Scandinavia; and the only bread that is typically American is the unlevened beaten biscuits of the south, and corn bread. All of our yeast bread originated in other lands.

The Club Girls of Ell Township increased their knowledge of bread making very much Saturday afternoon at the home of Reva Elder, where a whole-wheat bread demonstration was given by Mesdames R. W. Elder and C. J. Wille. The demonstration consisted of mixing the bread and placing it into pans. The bread was ready for the oven just as the girls were departing for home, which shows that bread can be baked quick and with very good results.

"Bread of Foreign Countries" was reported on by Marjorie Stewart. A talk on "Health" was given by Ruby Wille, and Lydia Pearson talked about "Tho Value of Health Contests."

After adjournment delightful refreshments were served by the hostess.

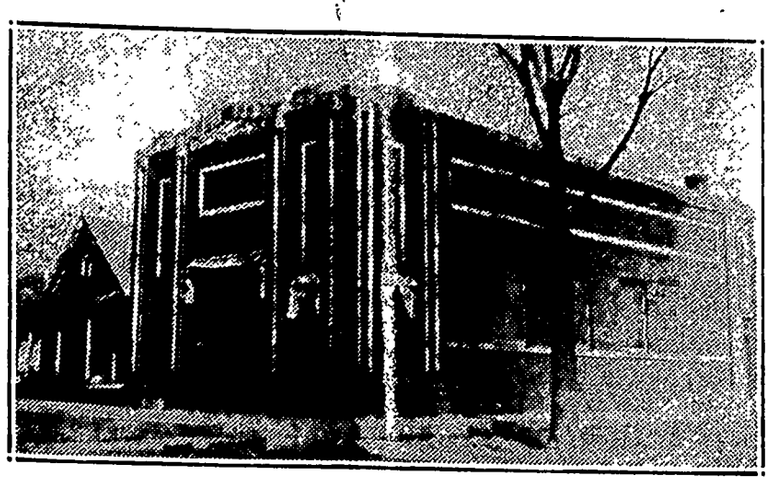
The next meeting will be held at the home of Lydia Pearson when bread will be scored, which will be baked by two of the club members.

HERE'S GOOD NEWS FOR LOCAL BULL HEAD FISHERS

The Times has been informed by a deputy game warden that the Attorney General of Iowa has ruled that as a bullhead is not a game fish, they can be taken at any time, but not to exceed 25 in number.

This means that the local fishermen can catch bullheads before the open season on other fish. But 25 is the limit on bullheads.

FACED HOLD-UP MAN



Owen F. Conwell, right, the vice president of the Goodell State Savings Bank, shown above, was assured by Lloyd Musselman, 18, Eagle Grove, confessed bank robber, that he "would not be hurt." Musselman forced Conwell at the point of a gun to bring money out of the vault and then drove calmly away while at least six unsuspecting people saw him leave town. In less than four days after Musselman held up the Goodell Bank he was behind prison bars at the Anamosa Reformatory beginning a 20 year sentence.

Walter Weiss Makes Notes As He Visits Our Farmers

One cannot realize the activity of our Hancock County farmers until he has occasion to visit and talk with some of them at this season of the year.

Oscar Gorman of Woden has scrubbed his hog house with hot lye water and has also washed his eight old sows that are to farrow pigs within the next few days. Oscar has entered the State Pig Crop Contest so let's wish him good luck and many pigs!

Oscar Swanson of Klemme believes in starting the spring work with his horses in good shape. His seven work horses including a stallion well broke for field work are in excellent shape and with the help of a tractor should handle the 240 acre farm very nicely.

H R. Gibbs of Klemme has a large herd of grade Jersey cows and we are hoping that the next few days finds him out among his livestock as he has been confined to his house because of illness.

Wm. Schlawin of Klemme is spending part of his time dragging the highways and states that the roads are in better shape this year at this time than in many years.

Ralph Elder of Klemme is getting ready for the coming months by having his water system overhauled.

E. J. Schneider, Goodell, has some very good Poland China sows that should reap him a large pig crop.

Louis Griffen, northwest of Klemme, admires the weather but states that if it is this good a month from now he will consider sowing his small grain.

Carl Jacobson, of Woden is hauling corn to a nice bunch of fall shoats so let's hope the prices hold or go up.

Hiram Boecholt is kept busy these nice days constructing a 12'x 12' brooder house and this one along with his old one is to be used in helping his wife, or better, his wife and him raise 1500 Leghorn chicks they are going to buy. Mrs. Boecholt had 90 hens setting at the same time last year.

Peter L. Helland is keeping himself busy fanning his small grain to be sown this spring, a practice no farm should omit.

Rudolf Bienert of Madison township claims a record for their threshing ring. Their 1929 model McCormick-Deering 15-30 tractor and separator threshed the first job of the year on March 6 when it was put into action in threshing out 75 bushels of soybeans on the Estel Tannahill farm.

BUTTER IS RICH IN THE NEEDED VITAMIN "A"

The Eating Of Butter Helps Build Up Resistance Against Disease

That the amount of butterfat eaten is directly related to the occurrence of respiratory diseases, such as colds, was found in researches conducted by Amy Daniels of the State University of Iowa. Dr. Daniels studied the eating habits of children suffering from respiratory infections and discovered that their diets were low in vitamin A. Butter is the richest food fat source of this vitamin.

Similar investigations in Denmark by Blegvad show that the eye infection, xerophthalmia, is inversely proportional to the consumption of butter. During the World War, the Nordic races exported large amounts of butterfat, their chief source of vitamin A. The cases of eye infection increased. A few years later when the exportation of butter was forbidden, the cases of eye infections completely disappeared. In Sweden, where even the poorer families consume approximately two ounces of butterfat daily, there are no cases of this vitamin A deficiency diseases.

"To build a health reserve which protects you from disease, eat at least the 'protective' amount of butterfat every day," say nutrition authorities of the National Dairy Council. "Vitamin A may be stored in the body. This storage, according to Dr. H. C. Sherman, nutrition authority, acts not only as a reserve but increases the vigor and ability of the body to resist disease."

LONE BANK BANDIT ATE MEAL IN KLEMME

From descriptions and pictures of the Goodell bank bandit, Mr. Conrad Quandt has identified him as the well dressed man who ate dinner at the Crystal Cafe last Wednesday noon. Mr. Quandt said he particularly noticed the man because of his hard boiled manner. Given the bill of fare, which consisted that day of roast pork or roast beef, the man replied, "Don't give me any of that, I can get that 365 days a year. I want ham aud eggs and can pay for 'em." Whereupon Mr. Quandt gave him what he wanted. The fellow peeled a twenty dollar bill off a big roll to pay for his dinner.

BARZ AND GIMER ELECTED IN MONDAY'S RACE

One Hundred Eighty Five People Cast Their Ballot

At the annual school election held Monday afternoon Albert Barz and A. D. Gimer were elected to serve as directors for a three year term.

There were 182 ballots cast, and 3 were listed as "spoiled."

Of the above number 123 voted for Albert Barz; 115 for A. D. Gimer, and 90 for R. C. Ludeke.

The new school board will now consist of, besides the above men mentioned, J. N. Day, H. R. Gibbs, and Conrad Quandt.

EUGENE KLUCKHOHN IS GIVEN BIRTHDAY PARTY

Children Had Fine Time At Party Saturday Afternoon

Mrs. Clarence Kluckhohn very cleverly surprised her son, Eugene, Saturday afternoon by inviting about a dozen boys and girls from 2:00 until 5:00 o'clock to help him celebrate his birthday.

Games of all kinds were played and all had a big time. At 5:00 o'clock a birthday dinner was served, to which the youngsters did real justice. The table was prettily decorated with streamers reaching from the lights to each place card, and a birthday cake was used for the center.

Eugene received many fine gifts, and the others say they wish Gene had more birthdays as they sure had a real time.

ROBERT GREIMAN GETS ARM FRACTURED IN SPILL

Robert Greiman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Greiman, Jr., of Twin Lake township, was visiting at the Edwin Josten farm last Wednesday evening and had made the trip on his motorcycle. In driving out from the yard to the highway his machine hit a rut and threw him off with enough force to fracture a bone in his arm. Edwin Josten brought him to Klemme where physcians X-Rayed the arm and reduced the fracture.

DOINGS AT SCHOOL THE PAST WEEK

SENIORS TO BEGIN WORK ON THEIR CLASS PLAY

Eighteen High School Boys Sign Up For Spring Baseball

Our Senior have decided on their class play and as soon as the books come they will begin work on it. It promises to be different from any yet given here and we have no doubt it will please. They are fortunate in having for their coach, Miss Wilma Trumbell, who has unexcelled interest in this form of school activity and who has devoted not a little time to play production in both college and at her high school work as instructor of English and Public Speaking.

With basket ball now over for the season our boys are looking forward to the national game of base ball. Eighteen boys have indicated an interest in the big out of door game and are only awaiting continued warm weather and good condition of the field. Two of our farm boys who served us so well on the basket ball team seem unable to go out for baseball. They are Raymond Barz and Clarence Lemke. Allan Klotzbach will be our mainstay on the mound, and Otho Keraus another Senior will play short stop.

Klemme Lost To Livermore

Klemme was defeated by Livermore in the Goldfield sectional last Thursday night. Livermore later went down before Ottosen, who in turn yielded to Bode who won the tournament in Class B. Belmond came through victorious for Class A championship.

More Enrolled In Orchestra

Our high school orchestra has been made two larger by the addition of two new members, Richard and Paul Hughes, lately of Ruthven. Richard plays violin and Paul the 'cello. Others from the grade are being advanced into the orchestra.

Jap Talks To Klemme School

Our high school and grammar grades were permited to listen for thirty minutes on Monday to a man from Japan. He proved to be a most interesting speaker, and told of the rise of Japan since they came in contact with the United States, but emphasized the opportunity in America which cannot be enjoyed by boys and girls who live in Japan. He cited the wonderful rise of President Hoover, an orphan boy who rose to the highest position in the nation because of his ability.

Local Spelling Contest Next Week

In order that some additional time may be spent with our local champion speller, our local spelling contest must be conducted on Wednesday afternoon of next week. Pupils in all of the grades will spell beginning in grade 2. Prizes will be awarded to first, second and the third best speller in each grade and to the best in all of the grades. The first prize in each grade will be one dollar; second, fifty cents and third, twenty-five cents. To the pupil winning over all in the grades a prize of $1.50 will be awarded. We hope our grade pupils are making an honest effort to get some of this prize money. Parents need to give encouragement where it is needed. There wil be other prizes given in the county spelling bee March 29th.

Short Vacation Next Week

In lieu of a week of spring vacaton as was declared last year by our Board, it has been decided this year to give pupils a rest of two days next week on Thursday and Friday and permit our teachers to attend the District Teachers' meeting at Fort Dodge. We shall drive down and hear some splendid addresses and get both inspiration and some very practical information to be used by us in our own class rooms.

Signs

"Would you mind getting up a moment, miss; I want to hang up this sign where you are sitting."

"Sign? What sign?"

"This 'wet paint' sign!"

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Musfelt moved from Clarion last week end and are now again nicely settled in their own home in Klemme just across the street west of the school house.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiliary Greiman, who were recently married, held a reception at their new home on the former Chas. Griffen farm, north of Klemme last Thursday evening. All present report a fine time.

Allie White and family, who have been living at Goodell since they returned from Colorado a few weeks ago, Tuesday moved into the rooms over the old State Savings Bank Building. We are glad to welcome them to Klemme again.

Lloyd Wistey says he got early enough Monday morning to hear the robins chirping and saw several on the lawn. But we raise the question that it might have been the roosters crowing when Lloyd was coming home.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Blair, Des Moines, are the parents of a baby son born a couple of weeks ago. Mrs. Blair will be remembered as formerly Miss Florence Stokesbary, of Klemme.

Elmer Smith, of Mason City is now working in the J. C. Thomas Barber Shop. Mr. Smith's nickname is "Slim," and J. C. Thomas' nickname is "Jim." Hereafter we will refer to the shop as "Slim Jim's" place.

Conrad Quandt is still improving his Crystal Cafe. The latest device to be added to his equipment is a root beer dispenser made by the Hires Co For a nickel you can get an ice cold root beer, either heavy or with lots of fizzzzzzzzz!

Mrs. Thorman, mother of Miss Bertha Thorman, who is well known in Klemme as a piano teacher,, passed away at her home in Belmond Sunday. Funeral services for Mrs. Thorman will be held at Belmond today.

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Wilson drove to Clarion Sunday afternoon to attend a birthday surprise party given in honor of Mrs. Wilson's father. The party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry. Mrs. Henry is a sister of Mrs. Wilson.

Mrs. P. M. Wilson, Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson and Buster, Mrs. C. G. Waterman and Marian, and Lena Schroeder drove to Belmond Thursday evening to take in the vitaphone show. Belmond's new sound outfit is very satisfactory.

The old Methodist Church or Parish house is being rapidly dismantled and torn down and the lumber hauled to the Albert Kraus farm. Chas. Kraus and Albert have most of the building torn down at this writing.

Herman Schleusner and George Neimeyer of Garner, who have the contract for moving the Reformed Church, are already on the job doing some preliminary work, such as placing timbers and jack screws in position. They intend to have the building ready to start moving it back Monday.

E. F. Jacobs has further improved the appearance of his hardware store by installing four more new display doors. He had six display doors before, and these he had remounted with hardware samples. The display doors are hung over the shelving and creates a nice appearance.

Monday was certainly a typical March day. First sunshine, then clouds, wind, rain and snow for a few minutes and then the sun would come out and the whole process of weather was repeated. Tuesday was a little bit tamer. However, the weather has certainly been fine this winter and spring.

This week the G. W. Kluckhohn store is beginning an advertising campaign of Sherwin-Williams paint and other products. A feature of the adv will be a space devoted each week to Friday and Saturday specials. It will pay you to read the series of ads and watch for the big specials each week.

Mrs. R. C. Ludeke royally entertained the Methodist Missionary Society at her home last Thursday afternoon. A delicious lunch, including chicken sandwiches, homemade ice cream and cake, was served after the business session. She invited a number of ladies as gusts for the meeting. All report a fine time was enjoyed.

Rev. Grosshuesch drove to Yankton, South Dakota Sunday to visit his wife and children, and to visit his brother and family, with whom Mrs. Grosshuesch and children had been staying with. Mrs. Grosshuesch's mother is still in the hospital at Yankton and her daughter, Adella is staying with her. Rev. and Mrs. Grosshuesch and children returned to Klemme Tuesday.

Miss Edith Haupt's school was closed last Thursday as Irwin Haupt who has been teaching for Edith, and Edith attended the funeral of their uncle at Rowan. Irwin Haupt conducted school Saturday morning and Miss Edith took charge of the afternoon session. We understand she expects to begin teaching again Monday. She was forced ta take a vacation following a fall in which she broke a bone in her ankle.

Eric Josten and nephew, Edmond Josten drove to Iowa City Saturday morning to spend several days at the University city visiting friends. On their return to Klemme they will again leave Thursday morning for Spencer to take in the musical contest there for high schools. Earl Josten, another nephew of Eric's has pupils from three schools entered in the contests.

Carl Suckow, of Garner, has put up a couple of oil tanks at the H. L. Suckow place in northwest Klemme When Carl is trucking gasoline or kerosene in this vicinity and has part of a load left over, he will dump the surplus in his tanks here, and so on until he has them full. Then when he has calls again in this neighborhood he fills his tank truck here and delivers. This saves him from hauling surplus gas or kerosene back and forth between Garner and Klemme.

Rev. Grosshuesch went to Belmond today to attend the funeral of Mrs. Thorman.

LONE BANDIT ROBS BANK AT GOODELL

ered the bank and started the conversation with Mr. Conwell. Several people were on the street at the time and saw him enter the bank, but paid no further attention to the matter.

Bandit Was In Klemme

This same bandit was identified later as being the man who strolled in the First National Bank here early Wednesday afternoon and commenced a line of questioning on C. G. Watrman, cashier, similar to the questions asked at Goodell, but in Klemme he inquired about a man by the name of "Ossiam." Waterman stated there was no such man around Klemme and asked the stranger what was his business. This point blank question evidently baffled the stranger, for he immediately inquired if there was a bank at Goodell, and that the man might live in that community. Waterman informed him there was a bank at Goodell, whereup he left the bank and immediately left town in his car.

Condition Were Not Favorable

Eivdently the man did not think conditions were very favorable for a hold up at the First National, as besides Mr. Waterman in the bank, there were Mr. Kudje and Miss Thompson, and several men were in he back room. Likewise there several men across the street playing horse shoes near the drug store, and other men were outside the bank. The lone bandit evidently decided there were to many to handle.

Waterman noticed the stranger in front of the bank, looking around before he entered. Mr. Waterman also noted the car he drove, and had a good personal description of the man, and part of his car number. This evidence was used later and helped furnish a more complete description to aid in the capture of the lone bandit.

Deputy Sheriff Does Good Work

Deputy Sheriff Bruce Orr got on the job immediately after the robbery at Goodell, pieceing together clues and descriptions. Orr made trips to Belmond, Dows, Galt and Eagle Grove where he gathered lues and interviewed officers and soon had enough pieced together to be able to furnish a complete description of the bandit and learned he was probably Lloyd Musselman, of Eagle Grove. With the information supplied by Deputy Bruce Orr, it was an easy matter for the Des Moines officials to locate the man.

The vigilantes of the state had spread out a net work of armed men and practically every road in the state was patrolled. South of Kanawha vigilantes fired on the lone bandit's car and later Des Moines officials found that the bullets had found their mark. One bullet had pierced the steel body of the car over the rear window.

A check-up at Goodell revealed that the lone bandit had gotten away with $2,287.70. He had the money with him when captured.

Ate Diner Here Wednesday

Musselman evidently had been in Klemme for several hours, looking over the town, for he ate dinner at the Quandt cafe Wednesday noon, according to Mr. Quandt, who says he recognized the man from his picture and description in the papers. He paid for his dinner here with a $20 bill, which he peeled from a big roll of paper money, Mr. Quandt said.

MABEL GRIFFEN FINDS FIRST CROCUS THIS SPRING

Tuesday afternoon Mabel Griffen was skiping the rope in front of her home when she saw two crocuses pushing their yellow heads up thru the grass in her yard. Miss Mabel brought them to the Times Office and we have the two little yellow flowers in water in the office for anyone to view.

Now, who will be the first to find a violet?

Mabel gets a quarter for bringing the crocuses. Th first to bring us a violet will also receive a reward of 25 cents.

THANK YOU!

I want to thank the voters for their support at the school election Monday. I shall endeavor to give you the best of service. Albert Barz.

EARL JOSTEN'S PUPILS WILL ENTER MUSIC CONTEST

A high school music contest is being staged at Spencer this week on Thursday, Friday and Saturday and several schools in that vicinity will compete, including Estherville, Spirit Lake, Spencer, Armstrong, Graettinger and other schools.

Earl Josten, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Josten of Klemme will have the pleasure of having three schools of which he is the music instructor, enter the contest. They are Estherville, Graettinger and Armstrong.

Earl's pupils for the past two or three years have taken the contest, so we are expecting his pupils to live up to their past reputation this year.

The contest includes both vocal and instumental competition.

FARMERS PREPARE FOR SPRING WORK

AROUND THE COUNTY WITH THE COUNTY AGENT

County Agent Walter Weiss Gives Times Interesting News

Oh, what a week and don't think that the Hancock County farmers aren't more busy preparing to enter their fields if this weather holds out!

Albert Swanson of the Swanson Leghorn Poultry Farms is more than busy trying to supply chicks for his patrons. 1100 young Leghorns are found peeping and pecking at their well balanced ration. It would be worth any ones time to see them and the real equipment that Mr. Swanson has for caring for them.

Ray Ford is a thorough believer in modern methods of farming. Test your soil for acidity and add what fertilizer is needed to grow the most economical crops is his slogan.

The W. L. Lawhorn household should not want for the real good pork roasts and sausages you read about. Roy has spent a day or two the past week in putting up two nice porkers. The writer knows as it was his privilege to indulge in part of it.

I. C. Hastings believes in making the best better. If you do not believe it, just visit the Holstein herd of Hastings-Quintus Incorporated.

Theo. Kemp of near Goodell is doing more than most renters. He is going to fertilize his ground this year. "You can't mine your soil and get results forever, so I'm going to use fertilizers" he states.

Ralph Upmeyer says he is taking no chances on throwing good alfalfa seed away but prefers to test his ground for acidity first to see if he can get a stand. Howard Schaefer also states he prefers testing first.

Jelle Tjaden of near Woden is finding himself face to face with the problem of ridding his apple orchard of fish scale or oyster shell scale. He has a very fine orchard and our guess is that if any one can win the battle against scale, Mr. Tjaden can.

We are glad to welcome the two Gjerde boys who are living with their father near Woden, into our Club enrollment as Market Pig club members. We also welcome the four Bird boys in the same club. If ambition and hard work will win and it will, they are off to a good start.

Conrad Limberg and Albert Kudje, not to be caught throwing away good legume seed have tested their soil first.

G. E. Klipping states he is never too busy to work for a good cause, the Farm Bureau. Don't think for minute Mrs. Klipping can't cook! Their "star boarder" the writer knows.

Leonard Johnson, along with giving the public thrills, is keeping his farm in A-1 shape.

I am sure we all should back up Albert A. Olson in his fight to get a mail route nearer his farm. Going a mile for the mail is too far.

T. C. Rogness is keeping busy making preparations to efficiently farm his 240 acres.

Alvin Swanson finds that wood chopping and log splitting is a good appetizer. Willows don't come up to his expectations as trees.

We wish Ed. McWilliams a speedy recovery. His car back fired and as a result he has his arm in a cast.

Wilson White is another firm believer in putting up his own meat. He and his neighbors spent one entire day packing away some exceptionally good looking pork.

Ellington Township gladly welcomes H. M. Abbott back again after a few years of absence. They also welcome a newcomer in Ray Perry who has just moved in from out of the county.

Jens S. Jensen is justly proud of his young Holstein dairy stock.

G. J. Meinecke is ready to give his woodpile a good cutting with his remodelled buzz-saw.

REFORMED CHURCH MOVED TO REAR OF CHURCH LOT

Excavation Work Begins Today; Bartleson To Push Work

George Neimeyer and Herman Schleusner, Garner building moving contractors, who have the contract for moving the Reformed church, showed some real speed in the art of moving large buildings when they had everything in readiness and began moving the Reformed church Monday.

The moving contractors spent a few days in getting the building ready. When everything was all placed and the rollers put in position the building began to slowly creep back and they moved about 65 feet Monday, and completed the skidding process Tuesday. The men seem to understand their business when it comes to tackling big jobs.(

Mr. Bartleson, who has the contract for building the new church, was on the ground Tuesday staking and surveying the site. Excavation work was scheduled to begin today.

HELD COUNTY WIDE MEETING OF THE FARM BUREAU

One Hundred Forty Six Attended Meeting Held At Britt

On last Wednesday, March 12th, 146 men and women, members of the Hancock County Farm Bureau asembled for an all day meeting at the Legion Hall in Britt.

The morning session found V .E. Donelson of Ames, a former Boone County farmer, holding a round table discussion on the advantages of the Farm Bureau to farmers. Twenty-two points were listed as to why we are and should be in the organization. All the points were discussed pro and con.

Shortly after twelve o'clock, the Methodist Ladies Aid of Britt served a bountiful dinner to those attending the meeting. These ladies are to be commended on their ability displayed in handling this large group.

After the dinner, Chairman W. L. Lawhorn introduced O. W. Beeler, State Organization Director of the Farm Bureau Federation. Mr. Beeler gave a very interesting and educational talk as to what the national and state organizations are doing for our farmers.

After Mr. Beeler's talk, the sixteen township representatives met in groups to organize three or four teams which were to go out and solicit members for the farmer's organization, the Farm Bureau.

This Booster meeting proved very beneficial. In the first three days following the meeting, 108 new Farm Bureau members were turned into the office making a total of about 1060 paid up to date. Remember that we want and need every farmer in the county. The more members, the stronger the organization; the stronger the organization the greater the benefits to the farmer.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS PLAYS WERE WELL ATTENDED.

Miss Ford's High School Orchestra Gave Short Program

The three one-act plays given by the Camp Fire Girls at the school gym last Thursday evening were well attended and greatly enjoyed. The girls all took their various parts well.

Miss Gracka Quandt entertained with piano selections until the curtain came up for the first act.

Miss Ford and her high school orchestra provided special music between acts. Miss Ford's orchestra has shown wonderful improvement in the short time she has directed it.

The Misses Nora and Ruth Wellemeyer put on a specialty number when they acted and sang "The Tin Pan Parade."

Miss Marie Blank and her Camp Fire Girls are to be congratulated on the fine entertainment they put on Thursday night.

BUTTER AGAIN IS ON UPWARD TREND

EFFECT OF ANTI-OLEO BATTLE SHOWING RESULTS NOW

Gimer Points Out That The Butter Market Is More Favorable

There is no doubt but what the fight against butter substitutes is begining to have its effect, for the price of butter fat is again gradually going up. That is encouraging, and the more reason why Iowa and other Dairy states should keep up the battle against dairy substitutes.

Following is a statement from A. D. Gimer, manager of the Klemme Co-Operative Creamery Co.:

To the Farmer And Dairyman

"At last we are seeing an up-turn in the Butter Markets of the country.

"From the very low prices which have prevailed for some months past, and beginning with March butter fat prices wil be several cents higher, which will be welcomed by every dairyman.

"The Klemme Co-Operative Creamery have a car of butter on the Chicago Market every Monday.

"We have found that Monday's butter market, as a rule, is the best day to have our car arrive in the market.

"So those who are interested keep watch for this and you will know what we are getting for our butter each week."

RAT KILLING DEMONSTRATION WILL BE HELD FRIDAY

On Friday, March 21, Mr. F. D. Butcher from the Extension Service of Ames will give a Rodent Control Demonstration at the W. E. Burk farm east of Goodell. The demonstration begins at 1:30 P. M. so any one who is finding difficulty in ridding his place of rats should plan to be present.

Mr. Butcher will also talk and discuss the control of other rodents so come prepared to ask questions and take part in the discussion.

WHAT? Rat Control Demonstration. WHEN? Friday, March 21 at 1:30 P. M. WHERE? W. E. Burk Farm east of Goodell.

BELMOND CAR BADLY WRECKED SUNDAY

A Ford sedan in which were riding Mr. and Mrs. Quinlin and daughter and another young lady, all of a few miles east of Belmond, was badly wrecked in front of the John Swalve farm, south of Klemme Sunday afternoon at about 3:00 o'clock.

The party were on their way to Forest City and when near the Swalve farm struck some loose gravel, and Mr. Quinlin, who was driving the car at a moderate speed, lost control of the car and it swerved from side to side and finally turned up-side-down in the middle of the road.

The occupants were badly shaken up and bruised and suffered some cuts, except the one girl who had but a few scratches.

The car was badly wrecked, the top being torn and twisted, the radiator caved in, fenders bent, and other damages caused.

Mrs. Dick Swalve took the party to Belmond. We understand the car, which was nearly new, was taken to Mason City by an insurance agent.

Another car, a Ford coupe, was wrecked south of Goodell later Sunday afternoon. We did not learn whose it was or if anyone was badly hurt. The car was badly damaged and evidently had turned over in the ditch several times.

Donald M. Lewis, superintendent of schools at Frederika, Iowa, drove up Saturday evening for a visit with Klemme friends. He was a guest at the J. N. Day home. Mr. Lewis returned to Frederika Sunday forenoon.

TROOP 56 WINS FIRST AID CONTEST

LOCAL FIRST IAD TEAM WILL COMPETE AGAINST AREA

District Court Of Honor Held At Britt Monday Night

Klemme Trop 56 Boy Scouts won District honors at the Court of Honor meeting held at Britt Monday night when the Klemme Boy Scout First Aid Team won the district meet, competing against Garner, Britt and Crystal Lake, who had First Aid Teams entered in the contest to determine the champion team of District IV and who will represent this district in the Area-Wide Contest to be held at Mason City in May.

The Troop 56 team was composed of Souts Wayne Pavey, Captain; Harold Jost, Asa Gibbs, Byrnes Missman and Paul Sampson.

The local team worked smoothly and accurately and displayed several features of First Aid which other teams failed to perform. The points made were as follows:

Klemme	92
Britt	89
Crystal Lake	88 2-3
Garner	84 1-3

The three judges of the contest were First Aid experts from Mason City.

The problems, which were handed to each team in a sealed envelope were:

1. Man ovrcome by gas gas, requiring immediate removable. Burns on hands, arms, neck and face. Carry patient 10 feet on an improvised stretcher. Two of team at that time should be supposedly overcome by gas. Remainder of team carry patient, without stretcher, for 20 feet to fresh air and treat the case.

2. As the result of a fall, man has simple fracture of left collar bone; also simple fracture of right thigh. Prepare patient for transportation and carry on stretcher 20 feet.

3. Simple fracture of both forearms; great toe on right foot cut off; compound fracture of right wrist with bright red bleeding. Treat.

Troop 56's First Aid Team will begin at once to work on problems of all kinds in preparing for the big meet in May.

FARM BUREAU LADIES MET TO PLAN PROJECTS FOR YEAR

Th first Commitee meeting of the Home Project work for this year was held at Britt on Monday, March 10, 1930, with our new project leader, Mrs. Ed. Oxley, Corwith, in charge.

Mis Neale S. Knowles of the Extension Department of Ames was present and gave a very interesting and constructive talk on cooperation which made the leaders want to get to their respective townships and put the new ideas into operation at once.

The work for the year was outlined and planned. Among other things it was decided to hold the Women's Achievement Day on June 7th instead of in conection with the 4-H Achievement Show.

This meeting was well attended, twelve townships being represented which shows the interest the women of our county take in th eopportunities for service offered them by our Farm Bureau.

All the ladies agreed that the time had been well spent and that the covered dish luncheon was delicious.

MRS. S. B. DURANT,
Publicity Chairman.

He Knew His Race Tracks

Mrs. Gossip: "Oh, doctor, I feel so ill."

Doctor: "Your temperature is normal. Your pulse is exact."

Mrs. Gossip: "Well, doctor, is my tongue coated?"

Doctor: "No, madam; one never finds moss on a race track."

MISS GERTRUDE JOHNSON AND ALFRED CARPENTER WED

Marriage Took Place At Hampton Thursday, March 6th

Miss Gertrude Johnson, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe E. Johnson, of Klemme, and Mr. Alfred Carpenter, of Belmond, son of Mr. A. C. Carpenter of Goodell, were quietly married at the Methodist Parsonage at Hampton, Iowa, by the Rev. J. Arthur Young, on Thursday, March 6th.

The affair was to have been kept a secret for a few weeks, but the happy couple forgot to tip off the Hampton editor and when the copy of the Hampton paper reached the Times desk, the secret was out on last Thursday, a week after the marriage.

The marriage ceremony was also the birthday anniversary of Miss Johnson.

A big wedding dinner was served at the Joe E. Johnson home Sunday to which all of the relatives were invited. Mrs. J. N. Day baked a large decorated wedding cake for this happy occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter are undecided as to where they will make their future home.

Both of these young people are popular in this community and have a large host of friends who wish them a happy and prosperous journey together through life.

Hockey Making Good!

It may interest some to learn that Mr. Hockey, formerly coach of the school, has again developed a championship basket ball team and will his boys at Des Moines playing the last of this week against the best all over Iowa. We wish him the best of luck there.

Lewis Visits In Klemme

Mr. Donald Lewis, who was a member of our faculty last year and who is now superintendent of the schools at Frederika, was a caller here last Saturday night, leaving early Sunday morning.

Senior Win Inter Class Games

Our Senior class won the local class tournament in basket ball last Saturday night. Three games in all were played. The first was a scrap between the Freshmen and Sophomores which was won by the sophs. Next occured a game between the Juniors and Seniors which was won by the latter. The finals then were between Seniors and Sophomores, which was easily taken by the Seniors.

As the Senior class team was composed of four of our regulars who have acquired considerable skill at the game we anticipated their triumph. Clarence Lemke, one of our stellar men of the game, had rather inexperienced team-mates for this tournament but they were all game to the last. Marion Carson also one of our regulars, bolstered up the sophomore team and Henry Smid, a promising Freshman, who has been substituting for our regulars, added to the strength of the Freshman team.

Our boys are now awaiting good weather for base ball. They should play a good game this spring.

SUGGESTIONS

What is a bargain? Price alone cannot make one. It's what you get for the price that makes the bargain. Sherwin-Williams Paints, for example, may cost slightly more per quart. But they cost less on your walls, because each quart thoroughly covers far more surface. Fewer quarts are needed. We recommend Sherwin-Williams Paints because they are the world's greatest paint bargains.

Solves the Hired Help Problem at husking time. It can be depended upon to stay with you until the job is finished—and it smiles at overtime.

Note These Features

The grain flows into the cup rather than pulling the cup through the grain. This means reduced draft and less shelled corn.

No sharp curves for the grain to turn and get clogged. You can elevate anything that will go in the cups.

Each cup turns at an angle of 60 degrees at the top of the elevator absolutely delivering every particle of its contents into the spout hopper.

The wagon conveyor or feeder can be placed either above or below the driveway floor.

KLEMME MAN ANNOUNCES FOR OFFICE OF SHERIFF

Henry H. Stoltenberg, marshall of Klemme, has announced himself as a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Hancock County, and has his announcement in this issue of the Times as well as other papers in the county.

Mr. Stoltenberg is a young man. He has resided in the county for seventeen years. Before coming to Klemme he worked on a farm near Kanawha. He has been giving good service as marshall in Klemme. He received his higher education in the high schools of Clayton county.

Mr. Stoltenberg is a clean cut young man and should make a good impression on the voters.

You Can't Fool 'Em!

Two colored gentlemen were engaged in conversation when one of them became persistently annoyed by a large fly.

"Sam what kind of a fly am dis?"

"That is a hoss-fly.'

"What am a hoss-fly?"

"A hoss-fly am a fly whut buzzes 'round cows an' hosses an' jackasses '

"See here, you ain't makin' out to call me a jackass?"

"No, I ain't makin' out to call you no jackass, but you can't fool a hoss-fly!"

IOWA can truthfully claim to be the habitat of White Pine trees standing on the shores of Pine Lake in Hardin county, the farthest south of any such pine trees known in the United States.

IOWA state capitol building has these dimensions: Height at top of finial, above dome, 275 feet; greatest length, north and south, 363 feet and eight inches; width, east and west, 246 feet and eleven inches.

IOWA has a highway bridge, near Pine Lake, in Hardin county, spaning the Iowa river, that is 960 feet long, 86 feet above the river, and presenting a wonderful view of the Iowa river gorge.

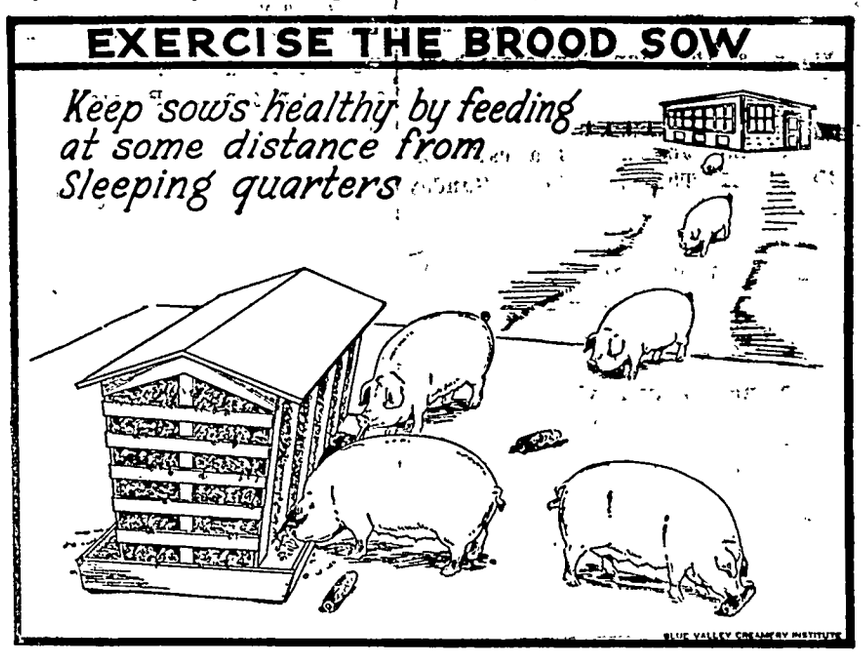
PROTEIN
A NECESSARY INGREDIENT OF DAIRY COW FEEDS REQUIRED FOR LARGEST AND MOST ECONOMICAL MILK PRODUCTION

MOST FERTILE SOILS GROW RICHEST HAYS

Addition of Lime Found to Increase Richness and Yield of Alfalfa.

To feed dairy cows well requires that the land on which alfalfa and other legume hays are grown also be well-fed, says the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. Analysis of legume hays shows that these best of all dry rough ages vary considerably in their content of protein, the ingredient which is needed and most often lacking in average dairy cow rations. Legume crops richest in protein and greatest in yield are produced invariably on the most fertile soils. In many cases, this merely means soils that carry enough lime to meet the crop's requirements for lime as a food and soil sweetener.

The good effect of lime on the richness and yield of alfalfa hay is shown in experiments conducted at the Missouri Agricultural Experiment station. There it was found that one acre of land which had not been fed lime produced 878 pounds of alfalfa hay in one cutting, which contained 11.7 per cent or 103 pounds of protein. An application of one ton of lime on a near-by one-acre field resulted in a yield of 1,930 pounds of alfalfa hay containing 16.7 per cent or 323 pounds of protein. The field receiving the light application of lime gave over twice as much hay as the unlimed field and over three times as much protein, the most valuable part of all dairy cow feeds. The difference in the yield much more than made up for the cost of applying the lime.



EXERCISE THE BROOD SOW
Keep sows healthy by feeding at some distance from Sleeping quarters
BLUE VALLEY CREAMERY INSTITUTE

KEEP BROOD SOWS FROM GROWING FAT

Daily Exercise Will Prevent "Catching" Disease Due to Lowered Resistance.

The longer brood sows can be kept on their feet, the better it is for their health and the better will be chances that they will farrow thrifty litters of pigs, says the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. Unless forced to take exercise, brood sows will lie around in their quarters most of the time, get fat and out of condition, and become readily susceptible to disease owing to lowered resistance. To force brood sows to take plenty of exercise every day, experienced hog men find that it is a good plan to feed them at a place some distance from their sleeping quarters. This arrangement forces them to make several trips back and forth each day.

Alfalfa hay, either whole or chopped, kept in a rack out of doors, makes a fine feed for brood sows. In addition, a limited amount of ear corn and shelled corn, and some sheaf or whole oats, scattered on the ground, will bring the sows out into the fresh air and keep them busy a good share of their time. With deep snow on the ground, it is well to make a path from the sleeping quarters to the feeding point. When the ground is icy and slippery, a little ashes will often prevent serious accidents which might result in abortion.

BLUE VALLEY CREAMERY INSTITUTE

FIND FEEDING COST CUT DOWN BY SILO

Cows on Silage Produce the Most Milk and Butterfat, Tests Prove.

Is the silo profitable on the dairy farm? This question the Blue Valley Creamery Institute answers by saying that a silo of some kind, either above or below ground, is a storage house of "green food" which can, like a bank account, be "drawn on" when it is needed, summer or winter.

The cost of feeding is the biggest expense in dairying and silage can be depended upon to lower the feed cost regardless of whether the farmer is feeding poor quality timothy or high-quality alfalfa hay. With the grain and hay portions of the ration equal, the cow fed silage will produce the most milk and butterfat. In typical Minnesota dairy herds it was shown that cows receiving silage were producing 50 pounds more butterfat per year than were cows not receiving it. A recent demonstration in Pennsylvania showed a yearly production of 30 extra pounds of butterfat per cow from silage-fed cows, compared with the ones not receiving it.

An excellent example of how this "canned pasture" reduced the feed cost of making 100 pounds of milk on a farm in New Jersey where alfalfa was fed is cited by the Institute. On this farm accurate feed records were kept on the cost of making milk during the barn-feeding seasons, from December to April, during two successive years. The first season, without silage, the feed cost was $1.29 per 100 pounds of milk. The next summer a silo was built and in the fall was filled with the chopped, green corn. During the following season, from December to April, silage was fed with the regular grain and hay ration, and the feed cost per 100 pounds of milk dropped to $1.05. On another farm nearby, where mixed hay was fed, the cost was reduced from $2.33 to $1.50 per 100 pounds of milk as the result of feeding silage.

BANKERS REPORT DROP IN SAVINGS

Lure of Stock Market Partly to Blame, but Slackened Speculation Expected to Bring Return to Thrift.

The first recession in the nation' savings account in banks in the twenty years during which records in this field have been kept by the American Bankers Association was disclosed for last year in the recent annual compilation prepared by its Savings Bank Division. The shrinkage amounted to over $195,000,000, on the basis of figures for the year ending June 29, 1929, whereas a ear earlier the reported increase was over $2,300,000,000, the largest ever recorded. The number of savings depositors also decreased during the year covered by more than 500,000 accounts. The lure of the stock market and affiliated activities are cited as part of the explanation for these changes.

The association's statement says that savings deposits in banks and trust companies of continental United States on June 29, 1929, stood at $28,217,656,000. The recession in savings, it declares, indicates a fundamental change in the savings situation, irrespective of whether it is temporary or not.

How Savings Used to Grow

"In 1926 savings deposits increased $1,562,000,000, in 1927 almost $1,400,000,000 and in 1928 over $2,300,000,000," it says. "It appears now that some influences in one year have taken the gain that might reasonably have been expected in savings deposits for 1929 and lowered them from the high mark of the preceding year. This recession is not one coming as a result of drouth, famine, unemployment or conditions outside of the United States.

"A year ago it was stated: 'The year closing June 30, 1928, registered the largest gain in savings deposits in banks and trust companies of continental United States ever recorded in the history of this country.' What a difference one year makes! From a gain of more than 2¼ billions of dollars in savings deposits to a loss of almost 200 millions!

"The loss in savings deposits is reflected also in the loss of savings depositors. The year 1929 showed a total of 52,664,127 depositors, against 53,188,348 for 1928, a loss of 524,221.

"Industrial production was much higher last year than the preceding year. Factory payrolls were considerably greater. In production, employment and trade, advances were made over the preceding year. In the farm areas the improvement noted for 1928 did not recede in 1929 and the livestock industry in all its branches was prosperous.

The Causes of the Drop

"The causes of the recession are possibly multiple. There is scarcely any reason to doubt that one of the important factors draining away savings and decreasing depositors has been the lure of profits to be made in stocks. For a number of years the people have been regaled with stories of profits made in stocks in all types of companies. During the last few years there has been a specious philosophy preached that panics such as formerly occurred were no longer possible.

"If it was the lure of profits in stocks which caused the recession in savings, then a factor in future savings will be the success attendant upon this venture of savings depositors in stocks. If the experiment did not prove generally successful, then another year will doubtless witness an increase in savings deposits as well as in savings depositors."

HELPING YOUNG FOLK TO BECOME BANKERS

Through the American Institute of Banking, which is the American Bankers Association's educational section, the banking profession is educating 35,000 bank men and women in the technical and scientific departments of their work. These students are enabled by this institute, which is entirely non-commercial in its operations, to obtain a grasp of the finer points of banking without interrupting their employment or interfering with their earnings, in their bank jobs.

The courses given, including banking economics and law and bank administration in all the departments, have been worked out under the direction of senior college educators and the lectures are always given by practical men, such as lawyers in the legal courses, experts in banking operations and college professors in the economics courses. There are chapters with meeting rooms in over 200 cities and also a number of smaller study groups are fostered with correspondence aid.

It has been said that the A. I. B., as it is familiarly known throughout the banking field, is the greatest adult educational organization in the world and is supplying the banking business with the largest supply of trained workers each year that any comparable line of business is receiving. The organization holds an annual convention attended by hundreds of young bank workers as well as senior bank officers actively interested in furthering the institute's educational work, at which numerous technical subjects of practical banking application are presented and discussed. This year's convention will be held at Denver, Colorado, June 16 to 20.

Cigarette Paper

Practically all the cigarette papers in this country come from France, which makes the cigarette paper for almost the entire world. These papers are so thin and light that it takes several hundred of the little sheets that go around the cigarette to make an ounce. While commonly known as rice paper, this paper is not made from rice, but from flax and hemp trimmings, only new material being used. The flax and hemp is cut into small particles, thoroughly mixed and ground almost to a dust. Then it is put through a washing process, crushed into a pulp and rolled out into paper.

Childish Rhymes

Who originates the rhymes that school children repeat in their games at recess? Some are ancient, recalled, dressed over, adapted, from old folklore. Others are obviously quite modern. Who starts them? How do they travel around the world? Hundreds of them, never written down in print or handwriting, yet pass from place to place, from country to country, and from generation to generation—a survival of the ancient custom of the minstrels and story-tellers whose day preceded printing.

His Tongue Slipped

Philip had just said good-by to a nurse and mademoiselle reigns instead. At nursery breakfast she had been drilling Philip in the morning greeting to his mother downstairs. When the summons came she was heard exhorting the little chap at the top of the stairs:

"Bon jour, maman."

But what he said when he reached the dining room was:

"Mah-jong, mummie!"

UNCLAIMED DIVIDEND CHECKS OF STATE SAVINGS BANK

Over $6,000 Still Unclaimed; State Wants Owners To Get Checks

Over $6,000 in cash dividends are still due depositors of the old State Savings Bank; of Klemme.

The State Banking Department is anxious to have the rightful owners claim the money due them. If your name is on this list, write to R. H. Miller, Examiner in Charge, Algona, Iowa, for claim blank and you will receive your money.

Perhaps our readers know some of the parties, and if so kindly notify them that they have money coming. For instance L. W. MESERVEY MERCHANTS JOIN ANTI-OLE BATTLE

We, the undersigned Merchants of Meservey, Iowa, in view of the depressed dairy market at the present time and deeming it an advantage to again stabilize the prices of dairy products, are joining a state-wide movement to discontinue the sale of butter substitutes until such a time as the dairy industry is again on a firm basis, or all as a group agree on any other action which will be a benefit to the farmer and dairyman. We reserve the right to dispose of the stock now on hand.

The Season of Open Doors--

It won't be long now before summer comes. Doors and windows will be invitingly open, and all too frequently they prove entirely too inviting.

Why don't you, now, before the open door season comes, put your valuable papers and other things away where they'll be safe from marauders. The cost of such protection in our safe deposit vault is exceedingly small—but the protection is great indeed.

Make a point of visiting our vault and selecting a box in the very near future.

CHEAP LIGHT

(From the Charles City Press, Charles City, Iowa)

An electric lamp of 100 watt power, burned for 1,000 hours, would bring to the average consumer in this country an electricity bill of something like $7.00. If he turned to the method of the good old days and sought the same amount of illumination by means of candles, his bill would be nearer $1,500.

Dr. H. E. Howe, editor of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, cites these facts in suggesting that a lot of us don't know how well off we are when we pay our monthly illuminating bills.

Many things have contributed to the low cost of lighting. The improvement of the bulbs; which is still going on, is one factor. Efficiency in the generation and distribution of electric current is another.

Our ancestors who used candles in their homes didn't spend any such vast sums every 1,000 hours as the $1,500 mentioned, for the simple reason that they didn't attempt to have so much artificial light. Many things may be said to be cheaper for us than for them, but our cost of living is greater because we want greater quantity and better quality. Not very many admirers of the good old days would consent to go back to them in their daily living. Candles for decorations are lovely, but we don't put them on the bridge table until the refreshments come in.

What Dairy Products mean

To the Community

Scientific authorities make it clear that the increased use of dairy products— milk, butter, cheese, and ice cream, will do more for individual health and community prosperity than any other single factor in food consumption.

A prosperous dairy industry is inseparably linked with the financial progress of the community.

METHODIST CHURCH CONTRACT WAS LET

J. C. MAYER, CLARION AWARDED GENERAL CONTRACT

Over Fifty Men In Klemme To Bid On Building Tuesday

At the meeting of the church officials and the building committee of the Methodist Church Tuesday, at which time bids were taken for the construction of a new church, the general contract was awarded to J. C. Mayer, of Clarion for some less than $19,000.00.

The Campbell Furnace Co. of Des Moines received the heating and ventilating contract for $1,400. The furnace to be installed is one of the large blower system plants of the latest design.

B. L. Prouty, Garner, received the contract for electrical work and fixtures for the main auditorium.

The art glass contract was let to a Kansas City firm.

The plumbing contract was not let at this time as the figures submitted were thought to be too high.

The basement excavation was not included in the contract as this work will be done locally. Work on excavation will start immediately.

The contractor expects to begin work by the middle of April.

The plans for the building were drawn by John S. Bartley, Waterloo architect.

The building committee composed of Rev. H. E. Whyte, C. A. Larsen, Tom Nelson, Jr., E. J. Arnold and Frank Gruetzmacher have put in a lot of time and it was through their work, in a large way, that it was possible to have a new Methodist church in Klemme. They are to be commended for their "stick-to-itiveness" in the face of many discouraging circumstances that arise during a building campaign. Mr. Whyte is to be complimented for his active part in keeping the building program before his congregation and for the active part he took in raising the funds needed.

Rev. Whyte had the architects drawing of the church today, but had to send it back. However the picture will be returned to Klemme and may be seen at the services Sunday, April 6th, when it will be on display.

Eight Co-operators were present and helped to prepare and serve the noon meal.

The last lesson will be given May 6 at the home of Mrs. L. Weaver.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR HARM CHRISTIANS THURSDAY

Services Were Conducted At The Ell Town Reformed Church

Funeral services for Harm Christians were held at the Ell Town Reformed Church last Thursday afternoon in charge of Rev. C. A. Schmid. pastor. Interment was made in the Klemme Cemetery.

Following is the obituary of Mr. Christians as read during the services by Rev. Schmid:

"It has pleased Almighty God to take out of this life Harm A. Christians.

"Harm was born in Hartsburg, Illinois on the 4th day of April 1899 as the second child of Mr. and Mrs. John Christians. He was baptized in the Christian faith. His parents continued to live in Illinois until Harm was eleven years old, when they came to Hancock County, Iowa and located on a farm about 5 miles north east of Klemme. It was here that Harm grew up to young manhood. Here he attended the public school and demeaned himself as a dutiful son.

In 1919 he returned to Illinois near his former home to work on a farm. It was here that he met Mrs. Harm Christians, his wife, of Manitou, Illinois. They were married on the 31st of August 1921. The same fall they moved on the farm known as the Aug. Katter farm, 4 miles east of here, which he rented. From there they moved to the Wenck farm where they lived two years. From there they moved on a farm a few miles west of here where they lived four years.

"Harm had been of a robust and industrious nature, but a few years ago he became afflicted with a treacherous ailment which seemed to baffle all medical science. He literally wasted gradually away. He took over a smaller farm thinking he would improve in health, but the ailment had such a hold on him that he gradually became weaker. Everything possible was done to relieve him. Last summer he was in the hospital in Iowa City but to no avail For the last few months he was practically helpless. So his wasted body fell an easy prey to pneumonia which he contracted a few days ago. In spite of the tender care of his wife and sister he passed away Monday afternoon, March 17, 1930, at about 4:40 o'clock, having reached the age of nearly 31 years.

"He leaves to mourn his early death his beloved wife and three children: Glenn, aged 6; John, aged 4, and Vida Mae, aged 2. His parents, Mr. and Mrs John Christians, and the following brothers and sisters: Peter, Grace (Mrs. Herman Merkel,) Edward, John, Carsjen, Anna, Emma, Henrietta, Sena, Harold, Elsie, Duane, as well as many other relatives and friends"

Card Of Thanks

We wish to thank our neighbors and friends for their kind assistance during the illness and death of our beloved one; for the beautiful floral offerings and words of sympathy given us, and thanking the choir for their part in the services.

LARGE CROWD IN KLEMME SATURDAY

350 FARMERS ATTENDED THE SPRING OPENING DAY

Klemme Stores Had Many Special Bargains For The Day

Klemme streets had the appearance of a celebration crowd Saturday and there was but little parking room for cars along Main Str. and nearby streets.

It was a big day in Klemme Saturday all because of the big spring opening and machinery display put on by The Northern Lumber Company with fine co-operation from the merchants who had many special bargains for the day.

The Northern Lumber Co. gave a free hot dinner to everybody who registered, and some three hundred and fifty farmers had diner with the Northern. This fine dinner was served by the Auxiliary ladies, who after dinner, began serving hot lunches during the afternoon to the large crowd.

The Northern Lumber Co. had on display a full line of Case farm machinery, including tractors, inside and portable elevators, threshing outfits in operation, hammermill feed grinder in operation, and many other items. The lumber department had on display five types of brooder and hog houses, and poultry equipment manufactured by them here.

The Northern gave away oil cans which were filled with En-Ar-Co oil given by E. F. Jacobs.

As a result of this big day the Northern Lumber Co. sold quite a lot of farm equipment, including machinery, brooder and hog houses, building supplies and creosote.

The merchants who advertised their specials in The Times for the big day report a large volume of business.

The day was a splendid example of co-operation of the business men and we should have more big days like that every month at least. It brings a lot of people to town.

ELL TOWNSHIP PUTS OVER A FINE F. B. PROGRAM

The Ell Township Farm Bureau meeting was held Thursday evening at District No. 4 school.

Miss Hallie Greiman had charge of the program which consisted of some very good songs and dialogs.

The committee on refreshments, Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. H. Stromer served a delicious lunch.

George Lawhorn gave a talk on the Service Bureau department of the Farm Bureau.

The next regular meeting will be held at the District No. 8 school on April 17th at 8:00 o'clock. Every body invited.

LIBERTY FARM BUREAU HAS MEETING

The Farm Bureau of Liberty held a meeting last Wednesday evening, March 19 at District No. 6 school. It was a fine evening and the school was packed.

Miss Norma Lenz had charge of the meeting and presented a very interesting program. The school children presented a fine program.

A quartette rendered some excellent numbers. The county agent, Walter Weiss, gave a talk on "Soil Fertility." Miss Johnston gave us a report on the Girls 4-H Club Work. Mr. Donelson also gave us a short lecture which was very much enjoyed.

Last, but not least, a fine lunch was served to all.

The next emeting will be held on April 17, at the Center School, Dist. No. 5 Come on farmers, let's go!

— By a Visitor.

Mr. Anthony Baker, of Britt was in Klemme and vicinity on business Monday afternoon. Mr. Baker is a candidate for supervisor.

AVERY FARM BUREAU HAS FINE MEETING

EXTRAORDINARY MEETING WAS HELD IN AVERY

Lauen's Mechanical Milker Creates Much Merriment

The regular monthly meeting of the Avery township Farm Bureau was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lauen, Thursday evening, March 20th.

As people arrived, the reception committee pinned colored birds on each one. Upon each bird was written the birthday month of the person wearing it.

The meeting was called to order by President Virgil A. Cook. Everyone stood during the community singing of "America."

William A. Prelipp gave a report of the organization meeting at Britt

V. E. Donelson, of Ames, a former Boone county farmer, discussed the Hancock county membership drive, with which he had been assisting. He stated that the "Bureau" has many valuable and fine things in it, along with the more common and coarser articles found in the lower drawer. They are there for each member to use, if he will. By the use of many homely illustrations and stories he emphasized the need of each one putting thought and effort into the Farm Bureau organization, if he wishes to receive any benefit therefrom.

Mrs. Howard C. Barger reported that Hancock county had the largest per capita returns of any rural community in the United States in the Christmas Seal drive. She attributed the success of this campaign in a large measure to the fact that Mrs. C. E. Barnes, county chairman, had picked as her township chairmen for this work, Farm Bureau women, who had been trained in leadership through Farm Bureau work.

The program committee for this meeting consisted of Mr. and Mrs Herman Lauen, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R Prelipp, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Barger. The program, as the committee had arranged it, was announced by Howard Barger.

A general handshaking during the song, "How Do You Do, My Neighbors," aroused a spirit of good will and friendship.

Then Mr. Barger extended a welcome to all new members neighbors after which the young people's cohrus joined in a welcome song.

After the debate by Herman and Paul Lauen, all agreed that "We could not afford to stop raising alfalfa."

The reading "The Wind," by Loney Kroeger, was well given and was followed by a pleasin encore.

"Why Butter Prices Have Gone Down," was forcefully brought out in a paper read by Marjorie Andreason.

William Prellpp's treatise on "The Cow," pointed out the necessity of the cow for the maintenance of human life and health. No nation has been able to reach a high state of civilization without the cow. Hence, the vital importance of the present dairy situation!

Mr. Barger announced that an inventor in Avery township had found a solution for this important problem. "Professor" Andrew Lauen demonstrated deftly and convincingly how the use of his invention, "The Sympathetic Milk Machine," would make production of milk cheaper and easier. Simply by dumping a little corn, oats, alfalfa hay and some green grass to pasteurize it, into a hopper and turning the crank. "Proffessor" Lauen produced milk which he claimed surpassed cow's imlk! This invention makes cows absolutely unnecessary except as carriers of cow bells and does away with many unpleasantries, such as being switched in the face by a cow's tail or the kicking over of milk pails! To introduce this machine into the community, it was offered for sale at half price at this meeting.

"Professor" Lauen is now working on that problem, which has been puzzling us all the last few days,—"Why is it that Swiss cheese has all the holes, when it is Limberger that needs the ventilation?"

The old round, "Three Blind Mice," led by the chorus, created much merriment.

After this song, the men gathered on the enclosed front porch, where county agent Weiss led them in a discussion of soils management.

The women formed a group in another room. Mrs. C. A. Arnold, township chairman of women's work, gave a report of the lessons which have been presented this year.

Mrs. Howard Barger emphasized the need for 4-H Club Work among the girls and presented the Bread Club program for inspection.

Mr. Gerling, of the Garner Hatchery ,led the round table discussion for the women, on the brooding and care of chicks. Mr. Gerling presented facts and answered questions in an able and convincing manner

During these discussions the children played games in a separate room, chaperoned by Loney Kroeger.

As a mixer, after the discussions, groups were formed according to birthday months. Each group was invited to identify the pictures of birds, which had been pinned on the walls of the rooms.

A great deal of discussion and some disagreement resulted within the groups as to the names of these birds.

After these lists were completed and checked, each group wsa requested to give a bird call.

The group represented by V. E. Donelson carried off the first prize in the bird contest—a pair of love birds.

The January group, represented by Virgil A. Cook, was awarded canary whistles to help them improve their bird calls.

Sandwiches and doughnuts were served with cocoa an dcoffee. The coffee was ronated by the Louis Hulsebus store of Meservey.

The young people's chorus led in the impressive singing of "Home, Sweet, Home," and several people were seen wiping moist eyes, as V. E. Donelson pronounced this an outstanding Farm Bureau meeting.

KLEMME LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES

By Mrs. P. W. Johnson

The American Legion Auxiliary met in regular session on Thursday night, March 20. Mrs. Ben Coobs and Miss Leona Lau were hostesses.

Plans were laid for the serving of the free lunch on the opening day held by the Northern Lumber Co. At that time we served approximately 400 lunches.

The Auxiliary voted to purchase and make twelve cushion covers for the Veterans Home at Knoxville. If any Auxiliary members are interested in doing this sewing you can get more information from Mrs. P. Grange.

There is also a call from Knoxville for bright colored carpet rags. Remember, members, these things must all be furnished by the units over the state. To heal the sick minds of these boys they must be kept busy at work. Rug weaving, making of poppies, basket weaving and similar lines of work are what they are doing. If you have rags, sew them and leave them with the president or leave them with her and some one else will sew them if you haven't time to do that. These are such small things for us to do but remember:

Do small things well,
And great things half begun
Will crowd our doorway
Begging to be done.

The next regular meeting will be an afternoon meeting at the home of Mrs. Lew Lewis, April 10th.

Members try and come. We need your help in this wonderful work.

WILL BUILD BRICK SCHOOL

Another fine new brick school house will be built in Liberty township this year in District Number 1 and will be located one mile north and one mile west of the Ell Town eRformed Church. There are now several brick school houses in the township.

County Spelling Bee Saturday

The County Spelling Bee will be held at Garner on Saturday afternoon of this week. Our school will be represented there by John Kaduce, winner of the local contest.

Miss Corle, our primary teacher, who was absent the three days of last week is reported seriously ill with a fever at her home at Algona.

FIREMEN CALLED TO ARNOLD HOME TUESDAY MORNING

The Klemme fire company were called to the F. A. Arnold home Tuesday morning about 11:30 to extinguish a fire on the roof of the back porch. The boys made a fast run and were on the job in a few minutes after the alarm was turned in. The blaze was easily put out with chemicals and but little damage resulted to the roof; one corner being damaged by the flamse.

"BETTER BREAD BAKERS" OF LIBERTY MET SATURDAY

The "Better Bread Bakers" 4-H Club Girls of Liberty Township met Saturday afternoon at the home of the Misses Lola and Marie Goll.

A talk on 'The History of Bread' was given by Arlene Upmeyer An interesting demonstration on "How to Make Attractive Whole-wheat Bread Sandwiches" was given by Marie Greiman, and a demonstration on "Making Different Kinds of Whole-wheat Rolls" was given by the leader, Mrs. Ben Reimer, after which delightful refreshments were served by the hostesses and a social hour was enjoyed by everyone.

George Carson was on the sick list a few days the past week and had to close his barber shop. Harlan Trees of Ventura ran the shop for him Saturday.

KLEMME LOCALS

The Ladies Aid Society of the Reformed Church met at the home of Mrs. William Kirkwood this Wednesday afternoon. At the close of the business session a social hour was spent and Mrs. Kirkwood served a delicious lunch.

We are informed that Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wiles will move back to Klemme in the near future and will live in their home, now occupied by the John Etchen family. We are glad to welcome these former Klemme people.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barz and son Raymond, acompanied by Mrs. Emma Gibbs and Mrs. Lena Schroeder, drove to Mason City Thursday. Raymond had his tonsils removed while there and was able to come home the next day.

Lenabelle McGinnis, came up from Ames Friday and spent the week end visiting at the Sumner Trumbell home. Mr. McGinnis has completed a three year dairy course at Ames and started to work Monday at the E. B. Higley Co. at Mason

J. Kraus, who fell from a ladd- last Wednesday forenoon while ining tear down the old Parish ouse, was not seriously injured nd waa sble to be about again the first of the week. Charley says "It asn't the fall which hurt, it was o sudden stop!"

Mr and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson and Buster, drove to Mason City day morning to attend church ices at the First Presbyterian urch, of which Rev. George K. ies is the minister. Rev. Davies e the commencement address in Klemme last spring for the class J.

A number of Klemme members of Eastern Star lodge at Garner, nded the regular meeting Friv evening. After the business eting a delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Will Lemke, Mrs. John Lemke, Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson and Mrs. Sumner Trumbell, who were Hostesses at this meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Seney and baby came Friday from Iowa Falls and visited until Saturday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. D. P. Anderson. Mrs. Seney and the baby are staying with her folks near Iowa Falls, as Mr. Seney has been doing relief work at Ames, helping at a drug store. They expect to move to Ames soon where Mr. Seney will engage in the drug business.

At the organization meeting of the Klemme School Board, John N. Day was elected president of the board. Mr. A. D. Gimer has been president for several years and was an efficient president. Besides Mr. Day, the other members of the local school board are: A. D. Gimer, Conrad Quandt, Harry Gibbs and Albert Barz. Mr. Barz is the new member of the board this year.

As Monday was the birthday of R. A. Jorgenson, some of his friends planned a surprise party for him on Sunday, and had intended to have a noon dinner. However, the tables were turned and the surprisers were themselves surprised to find nobody home at the Jorgenson home and so postponed the party until evening when the family were again home. At that time a delicious six o'clock dinner was served, with birthday cake and all the trimmings, and the evening was spent in a social way. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Keraus; Frank Kluckhohn and family; Wm. C. Keraus and family; Fred Kluckhohn and family; C. G. Waterman and family; and A. J. Kudje and family. The crowd presented R A. J. with a fine gift.

AROUND THE COUNTY WITH THE COUNTY AGENT

Had it not been for the snow, rain and cold weather of the past week I am sure this article would be filled with what the farmers have seeded and how much, however, we do not wish you to gather that no seeding has been done. A few farmers have as high as forty acres seeded.

If we were a wheat raising county the ideal situation has just existed as "mudding in" wheat is the most satisfactory procedure when growing spring wheat.

Bert Katuin of Kanawha is ready to hit the spring work in earnest. When we realize that he owns and is working 240 acres and renting an addition 320 acres we can see he will be kept busy. Charley Prull is a strong believer in land improvement and states it is the only sound practice. His land is never wanting for legume crops. Raymond Rust is more than making things move on his rented farm. Mrs. Axel Johnson and her two boys are improving their tract of land and their buildings show that they have received good care. Tho boys state that feeding alfalfa to their fall pigs is great stuff. Let's hope they continue this practice until they can turn their pigs on new pasture.

Oliver Allid of near Ventura takes great pride in his flock of ewes. His boy is a Dairy Heifer club member and his gilr is in the Ewe and Lamb club. After seeing the stock we must say that they are hard to beat.

George Alden of Klemme, while a renter, spends part of his time exchanging livestock. E. C. Buentenbach has cleaned up his building site and has his machinery ready for the spring work. He is a firm believer in driving good horses. The cattle found in his possession are also very good.

Eathias Kellner of near Wesley is having good luck with his ewes. Let's hope his ewes average two lambs apiece for him. Henry Haverly still has faith in his good herd of dairy cattle. Raymond Hansen, who moved into Hancock county from Kossuth two years ago is again one of our members and states that organization is what the farmer needs and he knows of none better than the Farm Bureau.

J. J. Hansen of Crystal township states he would not be without his herd of improved cows. Why should he when they netted him an average of $100 per head last year? If you get a chance to eat with the family, don't miss it as the writer knows the food is excellent.

Harry Carpenter knows his land is fertile but states he would not sow alfalfa until he had it tested for acidity. If you wish to visit a beautiful homestead, don't miss seeing the home of J. J. Cook near Goodell.

On Friday of last week, F. D. Butcher of Ames held a Rodent Control demonstration near Goodell. The forty interested persons first assembled at the W. B. Burk farm where every rat hole was filled with rat exterminator. From there, the party went to the Mathias Smith farm where the same demonstration was put on. The demonstration was brought to a close at the elevator in Goodell where about ten rats were found guilty and sentenced to death. On opening up two of the females it was found that they each had eleven young which means that in a week or two instead of two there would have been twenty-four rats.

We want you to know that the Office has a spray gun for exterminating rodents and that we can help you dispose of the pocket gophers on your farm. Ask us for the latest information on Rodent Control and we will be more than pleased to assist you.

We could not close this article without mentioning the township meetings of last week. Those attended by the writer were Magor, Liberty, Avery and Ellington. When you know that approximately 500 persons attended you must realize that the interest in Farm Bureau is growing.

NORTH IOWA SCOUTS SHOULD PLAN CAMP PERIOD NOW

Camp Roosevelt Will Accomodate 104 Scouts Each Week

The 1930 Camping Season for the Boy Scouts of the North Iowa Area Council is rapidly approaching, and they are looking forward with anticipation to the opening of Camp Roosevelt, the Camp of the North Iowa Area Council, on June 24th.

104 Boys, 16 Leaders Weekly

During the 1930 season, there will be five one-week periods. It is planned to accommodate 104 boys and 16 leaders each period this year, and because of the shortened camping season, it will be necessary for all Scout campers to register at their earliest possible convenience. The big rush will be on in about two weeks.

Will Live In Teepee Camp

Camp during 1930 will have a number of added attractions. In addition to the regular camping program, which affords a Scout unlimited opportunities for advancement in the Scouting program, development of leadership ability, and the finest kind of associations, there will be added waterfront attractions for the Scouts who are interested in that side of camp life; bigger and better campfire programs to take care of the evenings; and a special campcraft unit of 32 boys who will live in sixteen-foot teepees; build their own camp beds, and cook at least one meal a day for themselves over the open fire.

Bulletins Wil Be Sent Out

An advanced camp bulletin is being sent to every Scout and Scouter in the North Iowa Area Council in the next week or ten days, and will be followed in about a month by the regular camp bulletin; giving detailed information concerning camp dates, how to get to Camp Roosevelt, information concerning the daily programs, the camp staff, etc.

Scouts Start Saving For Camp

All Scouts of the Norht Iowa Area Council are very thriftily saving their nickels and dimes so that they may be able to pay their own way to Camp, which costs ....6.00 for a seven-day period.

Scoutmasters and Scouters who have visited a number of camps during the 1929 season, are high in their praise of the opportunities that are afforded Scout Campers in Camp Roosevelt.

PROFIT TO FARMER IN COW TEST WORK

Many Benefits to Owner of Dairy Herd From Membership in Association.

The easiest way known for a farm family to make from 25 per cent to 50 per cent more profit on the average dairy herd, according to the De Laval Bureau of Dairying, is to join a cow testing association. These prosperity-building organizations of local dairy farmers, of which there are more than 1,000 in 40 states, have the backing, co-operation and endorsement of the owners of 414,891 cows, every state college of agriculture and the U. S. Department of Agriculture. In these organizations every member is visited every month by the cow tester, who tabulates the month's milk yield, tests the milk and figures out the monthly butterfat production of each cow, works out balanced rations for the herd, tests the skim milk from the cream separator to see that the machine is not losing butterfat, etc.

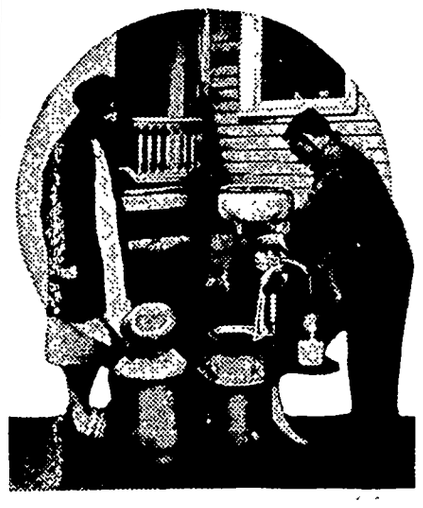
Every dollar invested by the dairy farmer in cow test association work usually returns from 15 to 25 times more profit than money invested in the soundest bonds on the market, states the De Laval Bureau. Directly and indirectly the benefits derived from joining a cow testing organization, the practical help and assistance and inspiration they provide makes the small yearly cost of being a member seem a mere trifle. A typical story pointing out one of the benefits of belonging to such an association is found in an item in the monthly report to the Iowa Agricultural college made by Harold Strom, tester for the Montgomery-Mills (Iowa) association.

The cream separator of one of his members broke down one day, so he took the milk over to a neighbor's to have the cream separated. To his surprise he found that the machine left .24 of 1 per cent fat in the skimmilk. The owner of this separator had produced close to 9,000 pounds of skimmilk during the month; therefore, he must have lost in the neighborhood of 20 pounds of butterfat worth nearly $10. How much better off that neighbor would have been had he spent the $10 which he lost in a single month from an inefficient separator, for joining a cow testing association which would check the efficiency of his separator every month!

There are an untold number of poorly constructed and badly worn separators on farms today that are "short-changing" their owners every time they are used. An effective method resorted to by some farmers to check the efficiency of their separators is to have five gallons from their separator reskimmed in a new separator of known standard quality. Like the neighbor in the above story, quite a lot of them are finding that they have been feeding their stock on skimmilk that is entirely too rich for their pocketbooks. Responsible concerns are glad to provide the facilities whereby the farmer may make a test of his separator and to furnish information on how a cow testing association can be organized in a community.

Try This Test on Your Separator

Setting aside a glass of skimmilk to await the rising of any cream in it to the top is the least efficient and least accurate way that can be used to determine the amount of butterfat lost in skim milk, says the De Laval Bureau of Dairying. When cows are in certain periods of lactation or eating dry feeds in the winter months, cream may be present in the skim milk and yet not show at the top of the glass. Depending on this kind of test to determine the efficiency of his cream separator, a farmer may be losing from 5 one-hundredths to 15 one-hundredths of one per cent butterfat and never know that the poor separator is causing him to lose from $12 to $36 worth of butterfat a year.



Reskimming skimmilk to test the efficiency of the separator.

The most practical, positive way to test skimming efficiency—the best way to catch the cream thief—is to take five gallons of skim milk from a separator and reskim it in a good separator. This method produces the evidence and shows the farmer how much butterfat he is feeding to his hogs and chickens. If the owner of the cream-stealing separator will take the cream recovered by the good separator and have it tested by the Babcock test, he will likely find his year losses on butterfat, in a herd of six cows, are four or five times more than enough to pay the annual cost of owning a dependably accurate separator of the highest type.

ANTHONY BAKER IS CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY SUPERVISOR

Owns His Farm At Britt Where He Is In The Dairy Business

Mr. Anthony Baker, well known Hancock County farmer and dairyman, who resides on his own farm 1¼ miles northwest of Britt, is a candidate for the office of supervisor of Hancock County. His announcement appears in this issue of The Klemme Times.

Mr. Baker is well known over the county through his work in the Farm Bureau, of which organization he was secretary for several years. He is a trustee of Britt township and has held that office for sixteen years and is well versed on road and drainage matters and other civic affairs which has qualified him for the office he seeks. Mr. Baker has also been president of the Producers Shipping Association at Britt for twelve years.

Mr. Baker expects to meet all of the voters before the June primaries and will make a thoro canvass of the county.

The Wrong Process

A colored Baptist was exhorting. "Now, breddern and sistern, come up to de altar and have yo' sins washed away.

All came but one man.

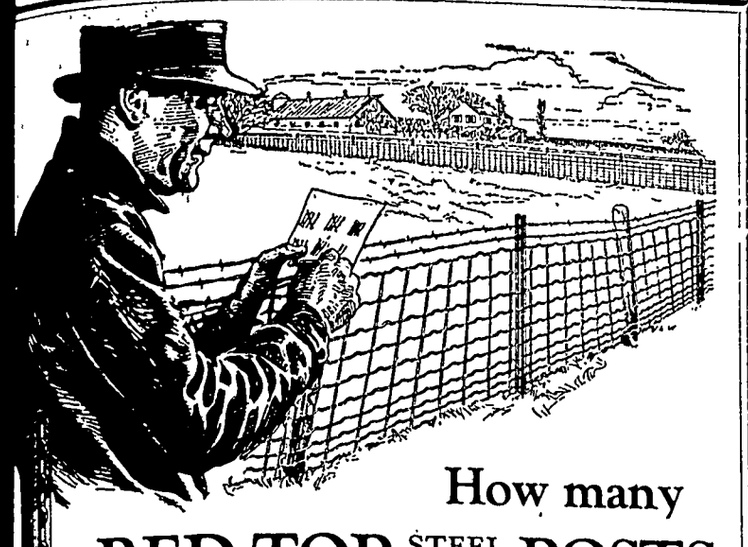
"Why, Brudder Jones, don't yo' want yo' sins washed away?"

"I done had my sins washed away."

"Yo' has? Where yo' had yo' sins washed away?"

"Ober at de Methodist church."

"Ah, Brudder Jones, yo' ain't washed; yo' jes' been dry cleaned."



How many RED TOP STEEL DRIVE POSTS will you need this season?

YOU can get many extra years of service from your standing fence lines if you will remove each year the rotting wood posts and replace them with Red Tops. In this way, by degrees and with the outlay of but little money at any one time, you can give your fence lines an entirely new foundation—get more years of service from the fencing. Then when new wire is needed your permanent Red Top Fence Posts are already in place.

Right now is a good time to check your fence lines. Count up the number of Red Tops you will need for replacements. Include the number you will need for the new boundary and cross fences that you plan to build and add to the list several extra bundles of Red Tops to keep handy on the farm—for emergency fence repairs and for the movable or temporary fence that you will want to throw up in a hurry throughout the season.

Come in and let us show you on a Red Top post the exclusive features that make it the best steel post your money can buy.

Let us have your order for that BROODER HOUSE now. It won't be long before our men will be busy in the country and Brodoer Houses will be hard to get.

The Sunset of Life

WHEN the life of a dear one reaches its close, we yearn to express our love in some lasting tribute. As a protection to the precious remains and a source of comfort to the bereaved, nothing is more fitting than the provision of a burial vault. The Buckstaff Burial Vault is guaranteed to protect the casket against all moisture and burrowing animals - for 99 years. Many families specify it in place of the ordinary "rough box." Its price is reasonable.

Because of this positive protection, we recommend the Buckstaff Burial Vault. It is in keeping with our policy of providing the best in equipment and service.

WELCOMING WARD'S

The Claremore Progress of recent date carried the following cleverly written comment upon the coming of Montgomery & Ward to the widely known Oklahoma resort city. The article was, in fact, a paid advertisement of Streeter's Shoe Store and needs no further comment:

Wlecoming Ward's

We extend a hearty welcome to Montgomery Ward & Co.'s new store. We are not among those who look upon the coming of Ward's store as a calamity to the local retail stores.

Not being members of the Juveniles or the Seniles we are free to express our personal opinions and we are sincerely glad to welcome Wards new retail store.

For years, Ward's and other mail order houses have spent millions trying to convince the public that retail stores were too expensive a method of selling merchandise. Now the fact that Ward is establishing hundreds of retail stores, stamps their former claims as absolutely false.

They now propose to establish a retail store in every county seat, and if the Wall Street bankers can find suckers enough to buy Ward's stock (now worth 54c on the $1.00) they will have a Ward store in each county seat.

They figure that because of the good roads that we have built (and no mail order house ever paid a dollar's tax to build these roads) they can draw the trade to their central store, wipe out the small dealers in the small towns, secure a large volume of business and insure large profits to the Wall Street owners.

Possibly it may work out that way, but the chain store may be as unsound in theory and as unprofitable in operation as the mail order business.

At any rate we welcome them to the city for many reasons.

First, because they give employment to many people, and we are in favor of any payroll, even Ward's.

Second, we welcome them because now they will have to pay taxes on the same basis as the other merchants. (something they never had to do before.)

Third, we welcome them because they will be large advertisers and will help support our local press.

We hope that their patronage may enable our dailies to employ a proof reader. Not necessarily a high-priced professional proof reader, but say a $6.00 a weeker.

(And we offer a self-wringing dish mop as a prize to anyone who can get three people to agree as to which paper needs a proof reader the worst.)

Fourth, we welcome Wards because it will be the only store in which many of our people will feel welcome. Some people in town cannot go into any other store without being dunned for overdue accounts.

Fifth, we welcome Ward because he has now placed his merchandise where people can examine it and compare values. We are firmly convinced that no chain store with their multiplied overhead expenses and the necessity of paying dividends to Wall Street can sell merchandise as cheaply as the store well managed by its owner.

We are glad to be where people can compare our style, quality and price with Ward's.

The fact that our business last Saturday (Ward's opening) was more than 2½ times what it was the previous Saturday, proves that people compared prices, quality and style.

There are some harping critics who have criticised paying $12,500 to build a store for Ward to move into. We disagree—it was money well invested.

We wish to apologize to Ward's for the many who were disappointed in your opening. Some people thought that in spite of enormous expenses and Wall Street dividends you could sell goods for almost nothing. Naturally they were disallusioned. We realize that if you pay expenses and dividends you have to get a profit on everything you sell. Don't mind our criticism. It makes some people sore to be fooled.

To the men who are managing Ward's store, we extend a hearty welcome. You are doing just what my bootlegger and I are doing—trying to make a living.

Sometime come in and explain why so many people will lie about wearing Ward's apparel. If you can remove the feeling of inferiority that goes with wearing mail order merchandise, you would undoubtedly pay better dividends and Ward's stock would rise in Wall Street (closed at 54¼.)

Again we say—Welcome.

(Signed) Streeter's Shoe Store.

P. S. One of Ward's first customers was the wife of one of our local grocers who objects to chain grocery stores. "Sed Libera A malo."

Rupture Shield Expert Coming to GARNER

—On—

Wednesday April 9

At the New Victoria Hotel from 10:00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m.
Evenings by telephone appointments only

ONE DAY ONLY.

No Charge for Consultation

Mr. C. F. Redlich, the successful expert says:

The "Perfect Retention Shields" hold the rupture perfectly, no matter what position the body assumes or how heavy a weight you lift. They give instant relief, contract the opening in a remarkably short time and strengthen the weak tissues (the real cause of rupture) so that they frequently recover their previous natural retaining power, needing no further outside support. Stomach trouble, backache and constipation often caused by Rupture promptly disappear.

Truly remarkable and prompt results have been obtained not only with recent and not fully dveeloped ruptures but also with old, long neglected ones.

Ingenious, recently perfected devices are now holding ruptures firmly which heretofore never had been retained.

No elastic bits nor filthy legstraps are used.

I guarantee the durability of my absolutely sweat and moisture proof sanitary appliances.

75% of ruptured children recover completely through expert mechanical treatment according to statistics.

Do not awste your money on wide ly advertised mail order contraptions. You cannot fit yourself.

C. F. REDLICH, Rupture Appliance Expert, Home office, 535 Boston Block, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

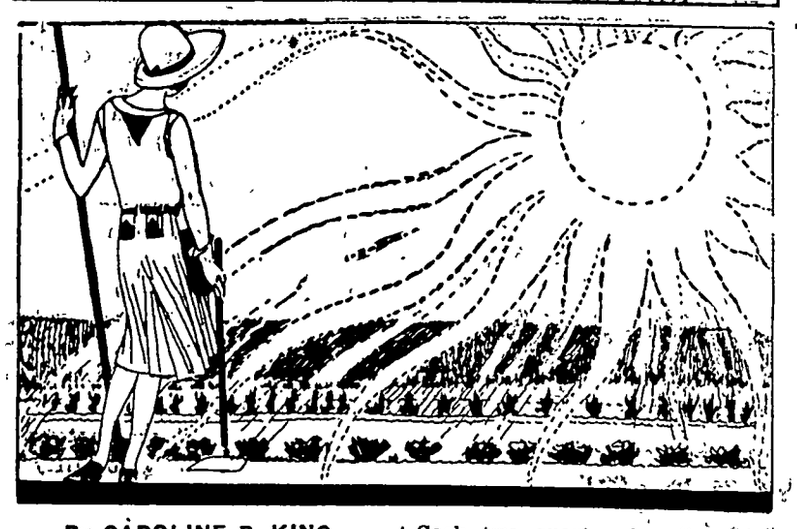
Sunshine Dinners



By CAROLINE B. KING

NEAT, straight rows of faint green showing across the soil in the sunniest section of the garden; curly-leaved parsley, pungent spikey onions, pale green lettuce, grass hued spinach, purple toned beet tops—all busily absorbing the warm rays of the sunshine, storing them up and turning them into minerals and salts and rich flavors so that later they may supply the family with vitamine-filled wholesome sunshine dinners.

Fresh green vegetables that ripen above the soil and have spent the whole of their growing period drinking in the sun's beneficent rays are teeming with every vital quality the body requires, and the modern housewife aware of the beneficial effects of the sunshine not only sees to it that her table is generously supplied with these best of all foods, but that as many of them as she can manage are grown in her own garden plot.

Planting a gardsn is a fascinating undertaking, and it is surprising how easily many of the most useful of the sunshine vegetables will grow in a very small space. Follow the directions that accompany the seeds, keep the soil about the young plants free from weeds, water occasionally and the garden will surprise and thrill you.

And here are some new and very tempting ways for preparing sunshine vegetables for sunshine dinners.

Spinach Nests make a delicious main dish for dinner or supper. Cook two quarts of well washed spinach in just as little water as possible for ten minutes. Drain and chop fine and season well with pepper, salt and a dash of mace. Butter individual casseroles or custard cups, place a border of the spinach in each one, forming the nests, break an egg into each nest, season nicely, drop a bit of butter in the center, pour in one or two teaspoonsful of cream, and cover with grated cheese. Bake until the egg is set. Serve in the baking dishes.

Green Onions in Cream Sauce is an unusual dish and a very delicate one. Trim neatly and scald a bunch of fresh green onion or scallions. Drain and place over the fire in freshly boiling salted water and cook ten minutes. Drain and season nicely with pepper, salt and paprika. Serve on strips of buttered toast and pour over a white sauce made in the usual way.

Piquant Lettuce is an appetizer as well as a sunshine dish. Separate into leaves and wash a head of tender lettuce. Dry well; then set aside. Meantime fry three or four slices of bacon cut in small pieces to a crisp brown, add one-fourth cupful of hot water, three tablespoonsful sharp vinegar and a generous dash of salt, pepper and paprika. Stir all together, bring once to the boiling point and pour over the lettuce, tossing it well with a fork. Serve immediately.

Beet tops, turnip tops, Swiss Chard, chicory are all sunshine vegetables that add their own healthful qualities to a sunshine dinner.

Make Them Keep You!

MOR-GAIN DAIRY SUPPLEMENT WILL HELP THEM DO IT AT A BIGGER PROFIT TO YOU—

A 1200 pound giving 30 pounds of 3.5 per cent milk needs—

10 pounds ground oats and corn
20 pounds alfalfa hay
2 pounds Dairy Supplement
Plenty of water

Fed this way she is similar to a machine and will continue to produce the 30 pounds of milk for 8 or 9 months rather than for only 4 or 5 months.

Besides the high prtein feeds MOR-GAIN DAIRY SUPPLEMENT contains a balanced proportion of minerals necessary for profitable milk production.

MOR-GAIN DAIRY SUPPLEMENT does not contain any home grown grains nor any cheap worthless filler. It simply supplies what is lacking in the farm grains and furnishes the proteins for milk production without drawing on the cow's body for them.

DAIRY SUPPLEMENT will take the place of oil meal and cottonseed meal in the ration and give better results.

FEED MOR-GAIN DAIRY SUPPLEMENT, and get MORE milk and have better cows.

FAMILY MEAL PLANNING WAS STUDIED BY AVERY LADIES

A "Family Meal" Was Planned And Served At Co-Operators Meet

(Too Late For Last Week)

The Co-Operators of Avery Township met at the home of Mrs. L. W. Sherwood Saturday, March 15th. Miss Myrtle Johnson gave the lesson "Meal Planning for the Whole Family.

The dinner was prepared by the ladies present, which would be suitable for the whole family. The menu which is as follows:

Rolled flank steak with vegetables
Corn Muffins Butter Jelly
Fruit Cup

The ten secrets of meal planning are: Use the Simple Meal Planning Guide as a foundation pattern for all meals. Plan meals one, two or more days at a time. Keep on your pantry shelves foods you can build a good meal on short notice. Observe the "Fine Points' in Menu Making. Consider the cost of food in relation to food value. Provide for the needs of the children first and then use their needs as a nucleus about which you build meals for the entire family. Diet should be modified to meet the needs for advanced years. It is also wise for the over-weight and underweight members of the family to count their calories.

When cooking for threshers remember the principles of good meal planning and simple plans. One meat, one starchy vegetable, two other vegetables, one served as salad, one pickle or relish, one jelly and one desert for each meal is quite sufficient and will satisfy tired men more than a table "groaning" with too much food. Of course there must be plenty of each food served and be nourishing. Do not have too many dishes at one meal Save part of your ideas and put variety in different meals.

The health of the family is the reward of well chosen meals. Wise selection furnishes the necessary elements; good cooking developes the flavors, and attractive service tempts the appetite.

SCOUT PARTY HELD

DISTRICT IV SCOUT JAMBOREE HELD AT GARNER MONDAY EVE

Surprise Party Given Paul Manor, Assistant Scoutmaster Troop 19

Monday evening approximately one hundred twenty-five Scouts and Scouters of District IV of the North Iowa Area Council planned and successfully carried out a surprise party on Paul Manor, Assistant Scoutmaster of Troop 19, Garner, who is leaving this district in a few weeks to manage a creamery near Northwood. Mr. Manor has been active in Scouting, both in his own troop and in the District, and the party was given in appreciation of his services in the past.

The party was conducted as one large Scout Troop in charge of R. A Jorgenson, of Troop 56, Klemme and the following program was carried out:

Opening Ceremony, in charge of C G Waterman, Klemme. The Flag Circle Ceremony being used.

Address of Welcome, and Explanation of This gathering by Rev. C. H. Van Metre, Garner.

Game Period, in charge of Asst. S. M., Wm. Breitske, Klemme.

Song and Pep Period, in charge of Scout Oswald Thorson, Forest City.

Talk, by Scout Kenneth Ryan, of Troop 19, Garner, in which he expressed the appreciation of the Troop for Mr. Manor's excellent service and help.

Roll Call by Troops, P. J. Kirkpatrick, Deputy Commissioner. Forest City, Britt, Crystal Lake, Garner and Klemme were all well represented.

Field Meet, in charg of Troop Committeeman Rankin and A. S.M. Menke, of Crystal Lake. Klemme Troop 56 won this event.

Talk, by Field Scout Executive L. Osam, of Mason City. Mr. Osam told about the new advantages being offered at Camp Roosevelt

Lunch—A big feature of the meeting when Troop 19, Garner, served "hot dogs," coffee and cookies.

Game Period.

At this point Troop 56 Klemme sprang a surprise on their Scoutmaster when Dr. Missman, chairman of the Troop Committee gave a short talk, ending by saying that it was the birthday of Troop 56's Scoutmaster and Dorance Day presented him with a fine book on nature study.

Paul Manor was introduced as the "teepee" scout of District Four and given the honor of lighting the Council Fire for the closing ceremony. Paul took advantage of the occasion to thank the Scouts and Scouters for the party in his honor He led in the closing ceremony at which time lights were tunred out and the council fire lighted while all sang "Around the Blazing Council Fire's Light," and "Taps" and the happy occasion came to an end with the echo of the bugle from a distance with "taps."

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Wilson visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Klingman at Garner Sunday evening.

The District IV Scout Leader's Training School was held in Klemme Tuesday night.

EDGWOOD Red Cedar Shingle — FLAT GRAIN Red Cedar Shingle

NATURE created in Red Cedar the only roofing material that possesses all five essentials in home building as enumerated below. From centuries old trees . . . some of them a hundred and fifty feet in height and forty feet in circumference . . . the manufacturers have fashioned a superior shingle. After the most rigid and minute inspection the trademark "Edgwood," which serves as your identification for these superior shingles, is applied.

The 5 Essentials of Home Building

1st Essential—APPEARANCE.

The overlapping butts of EDGWOOD Red Cedar Shingles create luminous highlights, deep shadows and soft pencilled lines which give rhythm and repose to your home. The cell-like structure of the wood absorbs and retains color stains.

2nd Essential—SAFETY.

EDGWOOD* Shingles are sawn edgegrain. Consequently EDGWOOD Shingles will not warp, cup or curl, always lying tight and flat to the sheathing, preventing lodgment of combustible matter, resisting flying fire brands, presenting a maximum resistance to exterior ignition. Fire tests at the State Firemen's Convention of Iowa proved conclusively that EDGWOOD Red Cedar Shingles offer greater fire resistance than many so-called fire-proof roofings. It is also worthy of note that less than .0327% of residential fires originate on roofs.

3rd Essential—DURABILITY.

EDGWOOD* Red Cedar Shingles are endowed by nature with a time-resisting preservative. EDGWOOD roofs and sidewalls, when laid with zinc-coated nails, will last for fifty years and more.

4th Essential—INSULATION.

Each square inch of red cedar possesses 6,000 to 10,000 minute air-cells. These insulating air-cells and the three overlapping butts with air space between, create in an EDGWOOD roof or sidewall from 10% to 47% greater insulation than any other standard exterior building material. The Bureau of Industrial Research revels that EDGWOOD Red Cedar Shingles on sidewalls and roofs will save the average home-owner from $2,427.60 to as much as $4,807.60 in fuel expenditures over a period of thirty years. It is significant that the Fire Prevention Bureau of the Chicago Fire Department says: "Most of the sub-zero fires are caused by the efforts to heat homes comfortably by forcing the heating plants or stoves beyond the point of safety." This is the result of using building materials lacking in insulating qualities.

5th Essential—ECONOMY.

Compared with the better grade asbestos, slate or tile, the cost of EDGWOODS is less than half and the EDGWOOD roof will last fifty years and more. The saving on sidewalls is 10% and upward over any other material.

AROUND THE COUNTY WITH AGENT WEISS

Interesting News Furnished By County Agent Walter Weiss

Let us hope that next week will find news of a more active nature than heretofore, however, we cannot realize that maybe our small grain is better off in the bin than sown. For those that have seeded, let's hope not.

O. M. Aarvig of Garner is hoping for better corn prices as he has many bushels of nice ear corn in the cribs. All of us should watch with interest Clarence Lawhorn's last fall seeding of alfalfa. It looks like a good stand so far so if wishing will help let us wish him the best of stands We must say in passing that Clarence wouldn't think of seeding a legume without first testing the soil for acidity. More of us should follow the same pracitce. Peter Engstler is going to grow alfalfa this spring. He is now hauling lime to apply to the ground to be seeded. The lime should have been applied last spring or fall but better a little late than never. Christian Rasmussen is going to enter the Litter Contest this year with his sows and Christian is a real hog raiser. Duroc Jersey's are his hobby.

W. E. Bentley of near Woden is making good progress on his rented farm. We are glad to welcome A. W. Bingham, one of the old county Supervisors, among our Farm Bureau members.

Wm. Bredlow states that any organization that will help the farm can rely on him for support. A. J. Phillips never is too busy but what he will spend some time in Farm Bureau organization. If you are in doubt as to his farm management ability just visit his well improved and beautiful farmstead. Jno. Crone states that he will do all in his power and then some to help organize the farmers so that we may obtain something near to what we are entitled to.

C. A. Vining south of Britt, isn't so busy but what he can help his neighbors cut wood. Edward Anderson has been discing with his Fordson and seems to be doing a good job. C. W. Johnson states that he is relying on his horses to do his farming and after seeing them we must admit that they are as good as one finds. His dairy herd is easy to look at also. H. L. Johnson, his son, rents a farm and has been spending part of his time helping Dad butcher and haul corn fodder.

A. A. Nelson isn't worrying about who is going to do his threshing but worrying about the small grain crop as he operates a threshing rig. W. F. Davis takes pride in his ewes and we must admit they are good ones. The boys seem to take to rabbits as they have three breeds of fur bearing bunnies. John Blank makes the statement that he would not drop his Farm Bureau membership if it cost ten dollars a year.

Harvey Goll says that he has been waiting for three years for some one to ask him to join the Farm Bureau. He regrets that he must move next spring as Henry Ludeke has purchased the farm he is now on. If you want to see some heavy oats just stop at Henry Ludeke's place. E. J. Blumer is more than busy making preparations for estting out of a real shelterbelt. In passing, we must state that Mrs. Blumer is a real cook.

Fred Oxley at Corwith is hoping for warmer weather as he has his oats sown. The writer knows that the Oxley farm is minus one rooster as he helped eat it and oh, oh, it was real! Frank Whetsler has finished shelling corn so he is now ready for the spring battle. Dan Halligan is tackling his pring work with a new Farmall tractor. The writer would certainly enjoy working horses like those owned by Art Mewes. We all welcome L. Fischer to Hancock County. He has moved here from Wright county. Herman Brunes certainly has a nice flock of chickens and some real brood sows. Ben Lamperes, another transfer from Wright county, is making things hum on his rented farm.

STORE FIRE MIGHT HAVE BEEN SERIOUS

FIRE CAUSES DAMAGE AT THE KLUCKHOHN STORE

Fire Was Discovered Sunday Night Before Much Damage Resulted

Sunday evening about nine o'clock as Gracka Quandt was sitting in her father's cafe across the street from the Kluckhohn Store she told Mr. Quandt that it loked like a fire in the back room of the Kluckhohn Store. The alarm was turned in and men broke in and smothered the flames with a chemical extinguisher.

The fire, which was already eating its way into the wall and in a few more minutes would have presented a dangerous conflagation, had evidently originated around an egg candling device, the flames then igniting excelsior packing and other material nearby.

It was indeed lucky that Miss Quandt saw the flames, as at the time the streets were deserted and no one was about, and in a few more minutes the entire store would have been a mass of flames.

Some repairs are needed where the flames damaged the walls and a large regrigerator, and some of the goods stored on an overhead balcony were damaged by chemical and smoke.

W. C. Keraus received a severe cut on his right wrist which severed an artery when he broke out a rear door glass. In reaching thru the broken window to unlatch the door he struck his wrist on a jagged piece of glass. The doctor closed the wound with several stitches and Bill is carrying his arm in a sling.

The loss was covered by insurance.

HARRY BUSS BOUGHT FORD GARAGE TODAY

Has Had Several Years Experience In Garage Business

A business change took place in Klemme this morning when Harry Buss bought the Klemme Auto Co., the Ford garage, of W. S. Pritchard and sons, of Garner.

In the deal Harry Buss became the owner of the business, tools, fixtures, stock and accessories. The building was not purchased by Mr. Buss.

Harry has had a lot of experience in the garage business, having spent about four years in that line, and later farming. He entered the employ of the garage here last fall. Harry is a fine young man and will treat the public right and give them the best of service.

The Pritchards have owned the business here for two or three years. John Pritchard had charge of it for a time and later "Buddie" took charge. Bud was well liked and will be missed from the business circle in Klemme. The Pritchards own garages at Garner and Britt.

Harry has already started fixing and cleaning things up and says he is going to run a real garage.

Welcome, Harry, we are glad to have you back in business in Klemme.

FORMER KLEMME BOY LANDS SUPERINTENDENT'S JOB

Adolph Lauritsen, a graduate of Upper Iowa University and who taught in the Renwick high school for three years, and the past year in the Orange township consolidated school, Waterloo, has been elected Superintendent of the public school at Ledyard at a handsome salary.

"Abe" is a former Klemme boy, and a former Times "devil" and we are mighty glad to see him making good.

GIVES TIPS ON DORMANT SPRAYING

TIME FOR DORMANT SPRAY OF APPLE TREES SAYS WEISS

County Agent Gives Some Pointers On Caring For Orchards

The dormant spray on apple trees should be applied during the first two weeks in April, or just before growth starts. Only those orchards containing trees badly infected with the oyster shell or scurfy scales need this dormant spray in the north half of Iowa, according to H. E. Nichols, fruit specialist with the Agricultural Extension Service of Iowa State College. The San Jose scale is not found in the northern half of the state. In fact, the Oyster Shell scale is the most common and, where bad, causes considerable damage by reducing the vitality of the tree to the point where very few fruits are produced.

These scale insects consist of tiny lice that suck the sap from the bark and excrete a scale over themselves for protection. Many old trees, especially where they are crowded, will have the lower, and oftentimes all the branches entirely covered by these scales. The Oyster Shell scale is about one-eighth of an inch in length and about the color of the bark. At this time of year small white eggs may be found under many of the scales. These will hatch during blossoming time and the young scales soon settle down nearby and start drying out the bark. The scurfy scale is white, it somewhat resembles flakes of snow, and in the dormant season has small red eggs under it.

To control these scale insects, a thorough spraying with a rather coarse driving spray is needed just before growth starts. Usually the dormant spray must be applied for several years in succession to completely eradicate this pest. Lime sulphur is the most common material used and it might be the most practical where there are just a few trees to be sprayed. Any spray left over may be used in the later summer sprays. There are various miscible oils and oil emulsions on the market for dormant spraying. These if used at from 6 to 10 gallons to 100 gallons of water will do a good job of cleaning up the scale, however, an oil spray can only be used on the trees before growth starts as they will injure the foliage. They are perhaps a little more effective than lime sulphur, and certainly they are more pleasant to apply. Thy cost a trifle more than lime sulphur. For dormant spraying, lime sulphur is used at the rate of 6 gallons of the liquid form to 50 gallons of water or from 15 to 20 pounds of the dry form to 50 gallons of water. Complete coverage of all parts of the tree s necessary for good control of these scale insects.

AMSTERDAM TOWNSHIP FARM BUREAU HOLDS MEETING

On Friday evening, March 28th, more than sixty persons gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Cosgriff to attend the first township Farm Bureau meeting held in Amsterdam in years.

The fore part of the evening was spent electing officers for the remainder of the year. The result of the election was as follows:

Director, Melvin Hall; President, Melvin Thompson; Vice-President, Mrs. John R. Cosgriff; Secretary, Elmer Engstrom; Treasurer, O. L. Schroeder.

The program consisted of a talk by County President W. L. Lawhorn, a Soils discussion by the county Agent, and a group of musical numbers by Amsterdam folks. Following the program, coffee, doughnuts and cake were served by the ladies.

Everyone expressed their appreciation for the opportunity of getting together and stated they wouldn t miss the next meeting to be held on April 11 in the District No. 2 school house.

LINEN SHOWER HELD FOR BRIDE

Mrs. A. J. Kudje entertained a number of ladies to a linen shower given in honor of her sister, Mrs. Alfred Carpenter, Jr. The afternoon was spent in a social way and a variety of games, as well as a radio program were enjoyed. Following the social hour Mrs. Kudje served a two course lunch, after which Mrs. Carpenter opened the packages of gifts which were both useful and beautiful. The ladies all wished her much happiness.

DOINGS AT SCHOOL THE PAST WEEK

"BIG TIME" IS TITLE OF SENIOR CLASS PLAY

Senior Busy On A Now Type Of Play Directed By Miss Trumbell

Our Seniors are getting started on their class play which we are told is something idfferent and intensely interesting. Most of the class have displayed considerable interest in public speaking and dramatics and have participated in these and we predict a pretty strong cast can be chosen for the play. The name of the play is "Big Time." No doubt it will please.

Junior Senior Banquet In May

Miss McGinnis and the Juniors are planning the Junior-Senior banquet which will be staged in May, soon after the class play..

Teacher Secured For Primary Department

Miss Mabel Smith, who consented to supply for us in grades 1 and 2 until we could secure another, has been relieved and Miss Herseman of Clarion is now on duty in the Primary Room. Miss Corle, whom the Board contracted with to teach those grades, is very ill at her home in Algona and it now seems may not be able to get back. We appreciate the willingness of Miss Smith to substitute for us and keep the work progressing in those grades until we could secure another and to continue the rest of the year in case she may be needed. Miss Herseman has had splendid training and rich experience in Primary work and parents are assured their children will be well cared for.

Richard Schubert Won County Spelling Bee

The county spelling bee held at Garner last Saturday was again won by Richard Schubert, of Britt township No. 4 school. Richard is a fine little speller and we predict he will remain up a long time at Des Moines if he does not win there. There seemed to have been more preparation shown for the contest and perhaps more students entered. Our contestant, John Kaduce, will be trying again next year for honors for he is now in grade 7. Others of that grade in Klemme are determined to try also for the honor of representing us next year at Garner as well as win prizes in our local spelling bee.

Raymond Barz, one of our senior boys, has been forced out of school recently by a bad condition of the throat.

PECK HANSON WEARS NEW DERBY IN RACE

Has Thrown His Old Sky-Piece Into Political Ring

Peck Hanson, of Garner, was in Klemme Monday renewing acquaintances with old friends, and while in town dropped into the Times Office to place his announcement for candidate for Sheriff. The announcement appears in the column for that purpose.

Peck was wearing a brand new derby hat, and not being accustomed to seeing him topped off in that manner we inquired the why-for of the cranial decoration. Peck smiled and said, "I have thrown my old hat back into the ring, and I am a candidate for the Sheriff's office." And that is why Peck wears a derby.

Peck needs no introduction to the voters of Hancock county and anything the Times could say would be no news for anyone of our readers Peck is out because he wants the office, and that's all there is too it. For the past year he has been doing state work in the Treasury Department investigating and collecting gas tax. He still holds the position in that office. The work has not affected Peck's genial disposition and he is as fat and jolly as ever.

Negro Folk Songs

Negro spirituals, said to be the only real folk songs in America, grew up in negro communities as expressions of group experience, and are the results of the negroes' habit of putting into verse any experience that impressed them. There are thousands of these songs which have never been written, many of rare beauty, which are known only locally. There are evidences of African influence in these songs. In all of them there is not one note of bitterness.

Many Deaths From Falls

Falls are the chief cause of deaths among workmen. Vehicle accidents come second. In the first group some fatalities occur because beams, bricks or other heavy objects fall on the men, while others are due to the fall of the workman himself from a high and perilous position. Watching workers on their lofty perches one cannot wonder that there are many serious accidents, but it is harder to understand the many falls on level ground.

Confederacy's Designation

"The Lost Cause," is a phrase which became current through the title of a history of the Civil war (1886) by E. A. Pollard. It is used as an expression designative for the purposes and aims which the southern people, through the war, vainly sought to realize in the permanent establishment of the Confederate States of America.

The Great Moral Force

What has been the greatest force in achieving such morality as we have? Probably the certainty, demonstrated cruelly every hour of the day, that it is a better policy than immorality, has more to do with it than anything else. It isn't natural wisdom, love, that rules the world, but experience, punishment. —Howe's Monthly.

Odor After Rainfall

Rain has no odor, but in falling purifies the air. Often rain is produced by electrical charges in the air, and these charges produce a gas called ozone which has a delightful fresh odor.

Ancient Folk Songs

What country has the oldest folk songs cannot be stated definitely, but the songs of Piedmont, Lombardy and Tuscany, northern provinces in Italy, are probably the oldest folk songs in the world.

Personality

Animals have no sense of personality. They do not recognize themselves in a mirror, for example—the simplest test.

Proud Designation

Andrea del Sarto was designated "the faultless painter."

Curiosity's Uses

Curiosity came into the world when the first man looked at the stars or had the original primordial stomach ache. It is the first sign that the lately born child is something more than an impersonal scrap of appetite. It can survive the adventures of youth and the disillusion of later years and give old age enough to do to keep it out of mischief and misery. It deserves a good word even though it needs none.

"Northern Lights"

The aurora borealis is a luminous phenomenon seen usually at night in the northern latitudes. It consists for the most part of long, slender beams of light of various colors, which form an arc in the heavens. Scientists believe that the aurora borealis is the result of electrical discharge through the upper regions of the atmosphere, though under conditions not yet entirely understood.

Earthquakes

The occurrence of earthquakes depends on strains set up by changes in elevation and other slow earth movements. There are more such actively moving regions in Europe and Asia than in the United States, hence more quakes. The details as to why certain regions are in this state of change, and others are not, are not fully known.

Says Cats Cure

According to Dr. E. Paller of the French Academy of Medicine, cats prevent pneumonia. He says every family should keep at least one cat. He thinks the day is not very far distant when the practicing physician will have to keep a cat farm, thus enabling him to answer emergency calls with a cat or two under his arm.

Tolerance First

If there is any principle of the Constitution that more imperatively calls for attachment than any other, it is the principle of free thought—not free thought for those who agree with us, but freedom for the thought that we hate.—Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Differ in Meaning

The expressions "fatally wounded" and "mortally wounded" are commonly used to express the same thing, but mortally is regarded by some as meaning suffering death at the time of, or soon after, the wounding, while fatally wounded conveys the idea that death followed after a considerable lapse of time.

Nickname for Stone

The word holystone denotes a piece of soft stone used in scrubbing decks. The term is supposed to be derived from the fact that decks were usually scrubbed on Saturday as a preparation for Sunday inspection, church, etc.; hence, the phrase, holystone and holystoning.

Food From Palm Tree

Sago is obtained from the trunks of several species of a genus of palms. There are large forests in Borneo and Sumatra where the finest sago is produced. Each stem yields from 100 to 800 pounds.

Florida Well Named

The name Florida is from the Spanish "Pascut Florida," meaning feast of the flowers, the Spanish name for Easter. The tradition is that the state received its name at Easter, 1513.

Rupture Shield Expert Coming to GARNER

—On—

Wednesday April 9

At the New Victoria Hotel from 10:00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m.

Evenings by telephone appointments only

ONE DAY ONLY.

No Charge for Consultation

Mr. C. F. Redlich, the successful expert says:

The "Perfect Retention Shields" hold the rupture perfectly, no matter what position the body assumes or how heavy a weight you lift. They give instant relief, contract the opening in a remarkably short time and strengthen the weak tissues (the real cause of rupture) so that they frequently recover their previous natural retaining power, needing no further outside support. Stomach trouble, backache and constipation often caused by Rupture promptly disappear.

Truly remarkable and prompt results have been obtained not only with recent and not fully dveeloped ruptures but also with old, long neglected ones.

Ingenious, recently perfected devices are now holding ruptures firmly which heretofore never had been retained.

No elastic bits nor filthy legstraps are used.

I guarantee the durability of my absolutely sweat and moisture proof sanitary appliances.

75% of ruptured children recover completely through expert mechanical treatment according to statistics.

Do not awste your money on widely advertised mail order contraptions. You cannot fit yourself

CHICK MASH

NEEDED TO SAFELY FEED ONE CHICK for three weeks

Only a small amount of NUTRENA Chick Mash is required. Two handfuls will SAFELY feed a chick the first 3 weeks. Yet, how important this first feed must be. It should SAVE 90% or better of the baby chicks started. It must give the baby chicks food to maintain life, materials to build a complete new set of feathers—muscles—blood—bones. Feed alone will supply these things.

NUTRENA Chick Mash ingredients are selected and milled with these things in mind. It is thoroughly tested in test pens and checked with practical poultry raisers throughout the country. That's why chicks do better on NUTRENA Chick Mash. You can put your confidence in NUTRENA Chick Mash to save more chicks, grow them faster and make chick raising more profitable.

JUDGE
E. C. BRANCH,
America's Premier Poultryman

One hundred pounds will feed one hundred chicks, four weeks. 17½c worth of NUTRENA Chick Mash will feed one chick eight weeks, and NUTRENA Chick Mash-fed chicks average 1¾ to 2 lbs. apiece at this age. Come in and get your NUTRENA Chick Mash now—have it ready for all your hatches.

THE QUALITIES OF LEADERSHIP

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers Association

Leadership and success, in a general way, are synonymous. They are both founded upon simple codes of thought and action, upon the realization that he who wins the laurels must be a doer, not a waiter, that application of energy, not time or luck is what counts most. A rabbit's foot is a poor substitute for horse sense.

John G. Lonsdale

Both success and leadership, if they be of the highest quality, are the result of service to humanity. Service has been aptly described as "the supreme commitment of life." Analyze the lives and times of all great leaders of history and you will find that those whose names are enshrined in the hearts of their countrymen are those who sought to render a needed service to the populace.

Leadership, like success, need not, however, be international or national to achieve great results. There is room for each of us to be a leader in his community, in his work, in his church, and in various organizations.

One of the indispensable qualities of leadership is the ability to persist steadfastly in the face of discouragements. If George Washington had not possessed the quality of persistence, he and his soldiers would never have survived the hunger and privations which were theirs at Valley Forge.

We have too many young men and young women these days saying a job cannot be done. Too many spend their time explaining why a thing can't be done, instead of saying, with firm resolve, that it can be done, and then going out and doing it. Anything that ought to be done is capable of being done. And anything worth doing at all is worth doing well. The fellow who handles a little job in a big way is always on the road to greater fields.

BANKERS STUDY CHAIN BANKING

The Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association has been specifically instructed by the general convention of the association to study and report on chain and group banking developments, and also on the proposal of the Comptroller of the Currency for an extension of branch banking in the national banking system, to permit those banks to conduct branches in the trade areas surrounding their locations.

R. S. Hecht, President Hibernia Bank and Trust Company, New Orleans, Louisiana, is chairman of the commission. The members are: George E. Roberts, Vice President National City Bank, New York, N. Y., vice chairman; Nathan Adams, President American Exchange National Bank, Dallas, Texas; Leonard P. Ayres, Vice President Cleveland Trust Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Frank W. Blair, Chairman of Board Union Trust Company, Detroit, Michigan; Walter W. Head, President Foreman-State National Bank, Chicago; W. D. Longyear, Vice President Security-First National Bank, Los Angeles, California; Walter S. McLucas, Chairman of Board Commerce Trust Company, Kansas City, Missouri; Max B. Nahm, Vice President Citizens National Bank, Bowling Green, Kentucky; Melvin A. Traylor, President First National Bank, Chicago; Paul M. Warburg, Chairman of Board International Acceptance Bank, New York, N. Y.; O. Howard Wolfe, Cashier Philadelphia National Bank, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Gurden Edwards, American Bankers Association, New York City, secretary.

A survey showing the extent to which chain and group banking has developed in the United States has been made and issued in booklet form by the American Bankers Association of New York City.

SECTIONS WHERE SAVINGS DECREASED

A regional analysis of the drop in the nation's savings deposits in banks, as recently reported by the American Bankers Association's Savings Bank Division in its annual compilation for 1929 showing the first recession in national savings in the twenty years during which it has published this data, reveals that all sections except the New England and the Pacific States groups recorded losses.

The published figures showed that on June 29, 1929, the total savings deposits in banks and trust companies of continental United States stood at $28,217,656,000, which was $195,305,000 below the similar total for 1928, when there was an increase of $2,300,000,000.

The regional analysis by state groups discloses, however, that the six New England states as a group gained more than $38,800,000 in savings and 152,984 in savings depositors, while the seven Pacific states as a group gained over $79,000,000 in deposits and nearly 278,000 in number of depositors. The gains in these two sections, however, were smaller than the gains recorded there for 1928. The sections which showed losses are the Middle Atlantic States, Southern States, East Central States and the West Central States.

SAVINGS PASSBOOKS SOUGHT BY CROOKS

Use Them to Steal Money by Forged Slips — Should Be Guarded as Carefully as Cash.

Continual vigilance in safeguarding savings pass books, as well as blank and cancelled checks, against theft by crooks, who use this material in forgery operations, is urged on bank customers by James E. Baum, Deputy Manager of the American Bankers Association, in charge of its Protective Department. This department is continually vigilant in promoting means, both among bankers and the general public, to thwart the operation of bank crooks. It annually investigates hundreds of crimes against banks and is responsible for the majority of arrests among this class of criminals.

"In a large majority of cases of forgeries on checks or savings withdrawal orders investigated by the American Bankers Association, stolen blank checks or savings pass books were the forgers' chief stock in trade," Mr. Baum says. "In many instances the temptation presented through the careless handling by depositors of cancelled or blank checks or pass books so that they fell into the hands of others was the immediate stimulus for hitherto honest people to commit their first criminal offense."

Banks should educate their depositors to exert the same degree of care in handling these instruments and to avoid leaving them about unguarded as they exercise in respect to actual money because they represent money, he declares.

For dealing with the bank robbery situation, Mr. Baum recommends the use of electrical alarms actuated by any tampering with the wires or mechanism and also wider adoption of the plan of state police forces now employed in a few states, declaring that last year in seven eastern states where state police forces were maintained there were only 20 bank holdups as against 164 similar attacks perpetrated against banks in five states in the central and far west, where banks are denied the advantages of the speedy and coordinated action given by statewide police forces.

"The records of the American Bankers Association Protective Department reveal that for many years the odds in favor of state police protection have been at least 8 to 1 when measured by the experience of banks in states where efficient police protection is missing in the rural districts," he says.

THE THINKER LEADS MODERN PROGRESS

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers Association

THE greatest need of the world today is interpreters of our times —modern Daniels in agriculture, finance, politics, industry — who can see through the fog and haze that enshroud our difficult problems and advise, instruct, and influence those who are either indifferent or limited in their perceptions.

John G. Lonsdale

Through the thinker and the interpreter, unknown situations are disclosed or puzzling conditions explained in logical light. The American people are so constituted that they can meet and combat any situation once it is known and understood. It is the unknown that comes like the thief in the night and brings disaster.

Some one has defined prosperity as something the business men create for the politicians to take credit for. But America's present-day prosperity can be defined as a product resulting from the business man's ability to study and to interpret. Huge corporations maintain research staffs and special bureaus to interpret the times for them. Disaster looms in the offing for any industry that goes blithely on its way day after day without due regard to significant trends in trade and business

Keeping Up With Change

Leaders of finance have discovered that they cannot remain passive in an age when all the rest of the world is in a transitional stage. The modern banker not only must know about the changing styles in other lines of business, but above all must be alert to the transformations which are taking place in his own. He must be a man of keener, broader vision, because the order of the day is for larger units of service. Mergers and consolidations have taken place in great numbers. We now talk of billions where a few years ago we talked of millions.

We have only begun our changes. What disposition is to be made of the many problems that they bring will depend in large measure upon our leaders, upon the students and the interpreters who can read accurately the signs of the times, so that we may base future actions and hopes upon their wisdom. The quickest way to go to the top is to go to the bottom of things, and let us hope that among them will be found many who will not only aspire to leadership but will be successful in reaching their goal.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Allaben were at Traer visiting their son, Hammy and family.

Misses Vogel Christenson and Doris Miller were Klemme visitors Saturday.

Mr. aud Mrs. Art Castle of Britt visited at the Jay Griggs home Friday evening.

The Junior Class presented their play, "Am I Intruding?" to a large crowd Friday vening.

Mrs Homer Ness and daughter, Dorothy, and son, Harry and Lawrence Christie, were Klemme callers Saturday.

Sylvester Cashman, who travels for the Pullman people, was visiting his mother, Mrs. Tom Cashman and family.

A Bread Baking demonstration was given at the home of Miss Jane Dutheridge Saturday. Mrs. Barger is the club leader.

Miss Mae Griggs left Thursday morning for Clarion for a few days visit before taking up her school duties at Iowa Falls, after a weeks vacation.

Mr. Hamilton of Mason City visited the high school Thursday noon and delivered a short speech to the pupils, which they all appreciated very much.

The Juniors and Seniors challenged the Freshmen and Sophomores selling tickets for the Junior Class Play. The side selling the least would have to present the other side with a movie. The Freshmen won by selling 55. Those who sold the most on either side were given a free ticket and that was Judith Williamson and Gerald Burk.

WHYTE ADDRESS P. T. A. AT BELMOND

Rev. H. E. Whyte gave a talk before the P. T. A. Meeting at Belmond Friday evening on the subject "The Place of Moral and Religiuos Education in the Modern Home."

From reports Rev. Whyte's talk was greatly enjoyed. Other numbers on the program included music by the school band, and a vocal solo by Harry Norskow.

WARD'S LEGHORN HEN HAS SOME BIG IDEAS

Mrs. Frank Ward has a few white Leghorn hens. One of these hens evidently is trying to beat a goose out of a job, for Sunday morning she laid an egg that would almost put a goose egg to shame. The egg measured 7¾ inches around the oblong way, and was 6¼ inches around the middle. The egg was perfect in shape.

James Stefanatas and family of Wabash, Indiana came Saturday for a visit of about a week at the Clarence Kluckhohn home.

Old Household Utensil

An old "coffee mortar," which was used in olden days when coffee had to be ground by hand, is owned in Fluvanna county, Virginia. The mortar, which is made of wood, is about a foot in height and an inch thick. At the top the bowl is about six inches in diameter, and slopes to a rounded bottom. An iron "mauler" was used to do the actual grinding. The mortar originally came from Scotland, and is believed to be about 200 years old.

Darktown Fables

Once upon a time Rastus Henry Clay Washington came home late at night and found George Washington Johnson snoring in his own bed, whereupon George upon awaking and finding Rastus staring down at him exploded: "Believe it or not, brudder, Ah'se nuthin' but er stowaya here, Ah is!"—Pathfinder Magazine.

Light and Sound

Light travels very much faster than sound, and for that reason we see the flash of lightning before we hear the sound of the thunder that accompanies the discharge. The speed of light is 186,324 miles per second through the air. The speed of sound through the air is about 1,120 feet per second at ordinary temperatures.

The First Telephone

"Beginning of Telephony" says that the telephone was exhibited and demonstrated at the centennial exposition in Philadelphia in 1876. The experiments of Alexander Graham Bell had been crowned with definite achievement when in March, 1876, he made himself heard over a telephone wire for the first time.

All we have, all we can rightly get and use, all we are or can become, must be held as a sacred trust, and devoted as a willing offering. The very wit or skill by which we acquire and manage our small resources is itself a heavenly gift for earthly uses.—Rev. C. G. Ames.

Crudely Worded

A mayor who owed his prosperity more to hard work than to education was making his farewell speech after a strenuous year of office. "Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "tonight I finish my year of morality. Tomorrow I resume my normal life."—London Tit-Bits.

Heavy and Light Woods

Results from more than 130,000 tests made by the United States forest service show that hickory is the heaviest wood grown in this country, and the lightest when green was found to be western red cedar.

Didn't Foresee Growth

No modern city has been designed and executed on an unoccupied site. The vision of Washington and L'Enfant for the national Capital was of a city for 800,000 people, the population at that time of London.

Whistling for Breeze

Fishermen in the Asturias whistle for a breeze and so do sailors in Scotland and the Annamites in the Indian ocean. All sailors whistle very softly for fear of producing a hurricane instead of a breeze.

Keep Hoping

Failure is often that early morning hour of darkness which precedes the dawning of the day of success.—L. M. Hodges.

Joy for Reckless Drivers

A million new telephone poles are set up each year. This assures raw material for the most popular sport among young motorists.—Washington Post.

KLEMME LOCALS

At the meeting of the school board last week Supt. Penrod and all of the teachers were re-elected for another year. We understand that some have already signed contracts to teach next year in our local schools.

A baby boy of stndard weight and size was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Christians Saturday morning. The young man has been named Raymond Edward, and we say that is a fine name. Mrs. Alfred Merkel assisted in caring for mother and babe Monday and Tuesday.

The Wellemeyer store was closed Tuesday afternoon from 4:00 until 6:00 while the store people attended the burial services of Mr. Wellemeyer's mother who was buried at Garner Tuesday afternoon. The funeral services for Mrs. Wellemeyer were held at Charles City.

Sunday for dinner Mr. and Mrs. Art Kudje entertained Art's sisters and their families. The following enjoyed the day at the Kudje home: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kopacek and family; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tlack and family; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Chizek and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wellek and family. These folks reside around Britt and Garner.

P. M. Wilson has been busy the past few days adding some new ideas to his show cases. He has made some shelving which fit on top of the show cases and gives him extra d splay space as well as giving him better displays for his articles in the show cases. It is a good improvement to Pete's already very neat store.

Another real estate transaction in Klemme was closed last week when John Etchen bought the Joe E. Johnson property just north of Mr. Johnson's residence. The place is occupied by the Hughes family at the present time. John Etchen and family will move into the house on April 15th, when Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Wiles will move up from Ames into their own home, ocupied by the Etchen family. The Hughes family are undecided as to where they will move, as there are no more houses for rent in Klemme.

The young peoples society of Ledyard, Iowa, at the present time are in first place in the Atwood Request grand prize contest, only twelve more days left, every package is worth so many votes, buy a three lb. package and leave the votes at Kluckhohn's store. Ledyard needs the support of Klemme to win this grand prize, lets all buy a package before the 12th. Rev. Depping, former pastor in the Reformed church in Klemme is the Pastor of the Reformed church in Ledyard.—Calvin Grosshuesch.

Reports are that Miss Corle is somewhat better at her home in Algona but will not be well enough to finish her teaching in Klemme this year. The Board has hired Miss Herseman, of Clarion, to finish the school year in Miss Corle's place. The Board is fortunate to be able to secure a good teacher at this time of year but Miss Herseman had been engaged in other lines of work this year. She has a pleasing personality and the pupils say they like her very much. Miss Herseman is an experienced teacher, and taught in the Sioux City schools for five years.

When in a hurry for Baby Chicks telephone number 800 Algona, Iowa or 1000 Spencer, Iowa. Our large capacity of 60,000 chicks per week enables us to get you chicks just when you want them. Seventh successful season. Chicks from Supt.-Culled, Bloodtested flocks only—your greatest insurance against White Diarrhoa. Write for prices now. Kossuth County Hatchery, Algona, Iowa. Re-Style the old home

The old home beginning to look a little shabby and old-fashioned? It's an easy matter to bring it up to date ... to give it new life and loveliness .... the EDGWOOD way.

Harsh lines, bleak surfaces, ornate contours, can be softened and changed so that your home will bloom with a new, modern beauty, a slight remodelling in structure here ... an addition there ... and EDGWOOD red cedar shingles laid (with zinc-coated nails) right over the old roof and sidewalls. Rich, softly colored stain takes to EDGWOOD as dye takes to cloth ... the over-lapping butts and irregular lines of the shingles create beautiful high-lights and shadows. We'll be glad to talk over the low cost of EDGWOOD remodelling with you.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT OF BENEFITS DRAINAGE DISTRICT NO. 18

To the persons named herein, Owners of land within Drainage District No. 18 and to all other persons whom it may concern, including occupants of lands within said District.

You and each of you are hereby notified that on the 15th day of January, 1930 the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa in adjourned Regular Session appointed C. F. Merten, Engineer, J. C. Ford and H. V. Reed as commissioners to apportion costs, costs of construction, damages and assessment of benefits between the several tracts of land within Drainage District No. 18 in said county, as provided by law.

That the report of the said commissioners is now on file in the office of the County Auditor and that the 6th day of May, 1930, at one o'clock P. M. has been set aside as the time for hearing the same before the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa, at the Court House in Garner, Iowa.

That all objections to the said report must be in writing, filed with the County Auditor on or before the hour set for hearing on said 6th day of May, 1930.

That the said Board of Supervisors will then and there hear and determine all objections made and filed to said report, and may increase, diminish, annul or affirm the apportionment made in said report, or in any part thereof, as may appear to the Board to be just and equitable, or the hearing may be adjourned from time to time for cause.

Names of owners, descriptions of property taxed, and amount of assessment on each tract as reported by the Commissioners is as follows:

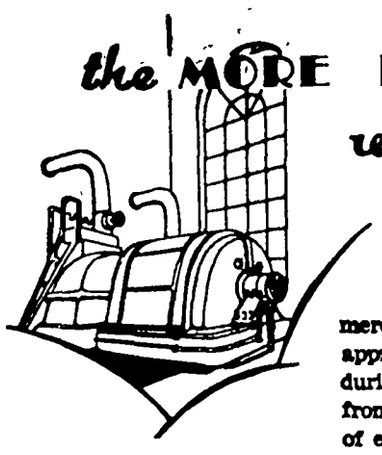
Rev. Grosshuesch, C. G. Waterman, John Day and R. A. Jorgenson drove to Mason City last Thursday night to attend a meeting of the Red Cross First Aid Course. These men are taking a twelve week's course in that subject.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Merkel entertained a number of friends to a Court Whist party at their home Sunday evening. Mrs. H. H. Stoltenberg won high score for ladies; M. O. Barr, high score for men and Wayne Kirkwood, low score. Wm. Kirkwood won low score for ladies, as he was playing as a lady. All report a fine time.

The
MORE ELECTRICITY
you USE
the MORE EXPANSION we NEED



DURING 1929 the consumption of current for residence and commercial uses, on our system, was approximately 13% greater than during 1928. This resulted largely from the rapid growth in the use of electricity for heating and refrigeration—uses which we are assured will continue to increase in the future. This increased demand for service must be provided for in advance by the construction of larger and better transmission and distribution facilities.

As our system is improved and expanded to handle the increased demand, it is necessary to invest additional capital in our business. To provide this capital we are offering you an investment, the stability of which is established by fifteen years of successful operation, and the future of which is assured by the constantly increasing use of electricity.

Our 6% Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock furnishes investors a safe and conservative investment paying dividends quarterly.

Any Division Manager or employee will be glad to give you further information about this investment.

MRS. HENRY LEMKE GIVEN A BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Brothers And Sisters And Families Gathered At Her Home Sunday

The sisters and brothers of Mrs. Henry Lemke gathered at her home and gave her a complete surprise party Sunday in honor of her birthday, which was April 4th.

The following were present and and brought with them well filled baskets of good things for dinner and supper.

The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Greiman, Elmyra and Robert; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Greiman and Dennis; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Greiman and three children; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Swanson and two children; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Etchen; Mr. and Mrs. Ben F. Greiman and five children; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Etchen and five children; Mr. Ernie Henschen; and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Klinge.

A fine time was enjoyed by all. Mrs. Lemke was presented with a purse of money as a birthday gift.

FOUND FIRST BUTTERCUP AND FIRST VIOLETS

To Erwin Tanner goes the honor of finding and sending to The Times Office the first Buttercup of the season, which he found Sunday, the 30th of March. If Erwin will stop at the Times Office he will receive a cash reward of 25 cents.

Norma Baack was right on his heels as she brought a Buttercup to The Times Office last Thursday morning.

Found First Violet This Spring

Norma Wille has the honor of finding the first Violet this spring. Tuesday morning she found a violet on her father's farm as she was on her way to school. She brought it to The Times Office and received a cash reward of 25 cents.

The Times will offer no more rewards again until next spring, when we will again pay byos and girls for the first flowers brought in.

A baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Borchers, April 2nd. Mr. and Mrs. Borchers formerly lived near Klemme, but now reside on a farm near Miller.

BUTTER HELPS BUILD LIFE TIME TOWERS

INTERESTING STORY TOLD OF FRENCH PEASANTS

Butter Contains Valuable Vitamin A Which Builds Body Strength

A beautiful stone, lace-work tower, the legend runs, was built from money paid to the church by the peasants of France that they might eat butter during Lent. It is viewed by tourists today in Rouen. Here is a tower built two hundred years before Columbus discovered America. Because of its origin it is called "Tower of Butter."

"All of us can find a real lesson in this Tower of Butter," say nutrition authorities of the National Dairy Council. "Each one is building a life-time tower. Every meal we eat adds new material to the structure. If we would stand strong and straight there are certain building foods which we must be sure to furnish our bodies. Of them all, butter is one of the most important because it is such a concentrated source of Vitamin A. As stated in 'Your Weight and How to Control It,' edited by Dr. Morris Fishbein, 'whole milk and its products are the most important sources of vitamin A of all our foods, not even excepting eggs and leafy vegetables, although these follow closely in their vitamin A value. Even cod-liver oil, though four to ten ro more times as high in vitamin A as is butter, does not rank so high as a source of this vitamin because of its limited use."

Those who would observe Lent today are wise enough to keep such a health-building food in their diet and choose rather to eliminate some of the luxuries. The peasants of the twelfth century in France did not realize that they were paying for a dispensation to eat a food that would help their own body building. They only knew that butter tasted good.

And you can help build up Iowa Farms, Iowa Towns and Home Industries by eating more butter.

Start this building campaign right at home by resolving today to eat only rich, golden butter made by the Klemme Creamery.

KLEMME SCOUTS WORKING FOR CIVIC SERVICE BARS

Several Scouts of Troop 56 are at work earning Civic Service Bars and plan to have enough hours piled up by May 16 to receive a Bar at the Area-Wide Court of Honor.

A Scout is entitled to a Bar when he has completed seventy-five hours of service (without pay) that is of benefit to his community. This week a number of Scouts are raking the Park, and the timet hus spent will be applied on Civic Service. Several Scouts have a number of hours to their credit for Memorial Day services, Flag Days, Christmas Decorations, ushering at the North Iowa Fair, and other items of service to the community.

JOHN DAY INSTALLS REFRIGERATOR COUNTER IN STORE

Monday J. N. Day installed a refrigerator counter in his grocery store. It is a large counter and will enable Mr. Day to cary in stock a variety of fresh vegetables, meats and fruits, besides his other lines.

All of the Klemme Stores now enjoy modern equipments and the customers in our trade territory can at all times find in Klemmme a variety of goods that are usually found only in city stores. It pays to trade in Klemme. Our merchants are doing everything to merit your patronage. Spend your money in Klemme and help local business grow.

Just a reminder—have you paid your subscription? If not please call at office or mail check.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM AX OF SWALEDALE GIVEN SURPRISE

Relatives Help Them Celebrate 28th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. William Ax, Swaledale, were pleasantly surprised on last Sunday when Mr. and Mrs. Art Schoenwetter and Ethel; Mr. and Mrs J. M. Newberger; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ludeke and Paul; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Schoenwetter and family; all from the vicinity of Klemme, and Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Bennette and family, of Mason City, came with well filled baskets for dinner to celebrate their twenty-eighth wedding annviersary, which was the third of April.

The afternoon was joyously spent and special vocal numbers were enjoyed, as well as in a social way.

KLEMME SCOUTS TO INSTALL NEW TROOP AT CORWITH

Klemme Boy Scouts and troop officials will go to Corwith Monday night of next week to officially install Troop 58, which was recently organized there.

Klemme Scouts will have a prominent part on the program and will have charge of the opening exercises, the Installation Ceremony, when the Candle Investiture will be used. Klemme Scout Officials will appear on the program in various places. Klemme Scouts will also give demonstrations in First Aid work and building fire by friction.

Anyone interested in Scouting are welcome to accompany Troop 56 on their trip to Corwith.

WORK PROGRESSING RAPIDLY ON NEW KLEMME CHURCHES

Walls Bing Built On Reformed; M. E. Work Starts Next Week

Klemme is certainly going to be a busy place this spring and summer with two new churches under construction.

Mr. Bartleson, who has the contract for the Reformed Church has the footings all in and has started to laying up the walls.

The basement for the Methodist church was dug last week and Contractor Mayer expects to begin work next week.

NEW FILLING STATION FOR KLEMME ONLY A RUMOR

It was rumored around last week that officials of the Shell Company were in Klemme and purchased the corner lots east of the Drug Store, the old hotel site, and would erect a filling station on that corner.

As far as The Times can learn this is but a rumor at this time. A. G. Koerner owns the lots in question and states that he has not sold them, nor has any Shell official negotiated with him.

NO P. T. A. MEETING NEXT WEEK

The P. T. A. meeting will not be held next week, but will probably be held on the following week. The announcement will be made in The Times. Watch for it.

Please send your news in early in the week. The Times has been delayed on acount of late news each week. We must have your items not later than Tuesday afternoon.

DOINGS AT SCHOOL THE PAST WEEK

BASE BALL SEASON BEGINS ON BRITT'S BALL DIAMOND

Several Games Are Scheduled For The Klemme High School Nine

Base ball season begins in earnest this week when our boys play Britt on Britt's diamond. Next week we shall play Swaledale here. Thornton will probably be engaged for two games if dates can be agreed upon. They have already consented to May 6 for one game.

Six Weeks Period Ends

This week ends the second six-weeks period of the last semester and written tests are in order. We hope adequate preparation has been made for them. No students can afford to neglect reviews. This is one of the benefits resulting from regular tests. Much that most students learn is learned for the moment and too little effort is made to retain information. It is the information retained or that can be recalled that will serve the students needs in the future. It is regrettable that so many students both in high school and college are content to secure credits and are so reluctant to repeat courses in the interest on thoroughness. It is possible that teachers care too little at times about student mastery of subject matter especially when both students and parents treat it so lightly. Most parents, however, appreciate thoroughness on the part of their children unless, perhaps, repeating a grade or subject is required to secure it.

Several Out With Measles

Attendance has been materially reduced in the lower grades due to measles in our community. Fortunately the contagion appears in light form and no one is very seriously ill.

Visietd Klemme Schools

Rev. Dunkle, from Traer, who is stopping for a time in our community, was a welcome visitor at our school this week and spoke very highly of the work our teachers are doing.

Miss Siemson's Father Very Ill

Miss Siemson, instructor in grades 5 and 6, was called home last week end to see her father who is not expected to live long. She courageously left his bedside to return to her work here, arriving on the morning train Monday morning. Miss Siemson, it seems, is quite popular with her students, two of whom warred with each other over the privilege of attending her down town from school. They have been reconciled, however, and later both together were observed in company with her on her way to lunch.

Dads Will Stage Baskct Ball Battle

Friday night will be "Dads Nite' at the gym when two teams made up of dad's of grade and high school pupils will play a game of basket ball. This promises to be a real exhibition of fun and an opportunity to see the "has-bins" in action. In addition the K. H. S. Girls will play the Alumni girls. 10c and 20c will be charged to see the games. The money will be used for purchasing awards for the girls in the K. H. S. Pep Club. If you want to see a lot of fun come out and see the Dads of Klemme play basket ball Friday night.

NOTICE TO VOTERS

Iowa expends 59.50 per cent of its taxation revenue for school purposes; 27.77 per cent for institutions operating under the state board of control; 4.72 per cent for administration purposes; 3.39 per cent for administration of justice social and miscellaneous expense 2.66 per cent; and regulatory expense, 1.64 per cent.

BASKET BALL GAMES FRIDAY NIGHT AT GYM

Klemme Dads Will Play Other Dads At Double Header

There seems to be a chance for a fine display of pent-up energy when the Alumni Girls meet the High School Girls in a fest of plain and fancy basket shooting in the High School Gymnasium. They are going to put it over Friday night at 8:00 o'clock.

Dads Will Battle Dads

Not content with letting the girls do their stuff, the Dads are going to mix in a little game to see whose Daddy is the best. At the same time they will be showing the girls a thing or two in Basket Ball.

The men and girls are putting on these games for the benefit of the Athletic fund which is much on the down side, and your attendance will be very much appreciated.

After the games coffee and doughnuts will be served to the players and the audience for ten cents per person.

KLEMME LOCAL NEWS

Bird lovers of Klemme were indeed glad to see the first Martins arrive in Klemme Friday morning. The "advance guard" of Martins remain for a few days to look things over and then go back south to get the rest of their aggregation, when all will then spend the summer here. There are many Martin houses in Klemme, and as a result we have hundreds of these fine songsters with us each year. The little Wren arrives later in the spring.

Quite a number of children, nearly all in the primary room, came down with measles Sunday. They are Reuben and Gertrude Grossheuesch, Garland Brinkman, Elnora Schuldt, Charles Bock, Cecil Leitzinger, Jackie Kudje, Allan Barz, Dwayne Johnson, and perhaps others. Evidently these children were all exposed from someone who came to school with th disease. Parents should watch their children closely and much of this could be avoided. Scarlet fever is in the country and this needs watching carefully.

Semesan Jr. Seed Treatment Produced Average Increase of 3 Bushels per Acre for Less than 3c

An average increase of three bushels per acre followed the use of seed corn treatment on extensive tests conducted in central Illinois on seed corn collected from the planter boxes of 200 farmers. Considering that such treatment with Du Bay Semesan Jr. costs less than 3c per acre, no farmer should run the risk of losing a three bushel increase by planting untreated seed.

Big Yield Increases Reported
Although the average of many tests through the Corn Belt is three bushels' increase per acre from Semesan Jr. treated seed, even larger increases have been reported.
Arthur J. Lutz, winner of the 1928 Michigan Corn Contest, obtained an increase of four bushels per acre from Semesan Jr. treated seed.
According to the Livingston County (Ill.) Farm Bureau News, George Delheimer increased his yield eleven bushels per acre by planting Semesan Jr. treated seed corn.
Semesan Jr. treated seed produced a yield increase of 5.2 bushels per acre on Krug corn in Henry County, Ill. On Funk Bros. Farms, Illinois, Semesan Jr. seed treatment increased the yield 7.2 bushels per acre.
Semesan Jr. seed treatment caused an average increase of 4.2 bushels in tests conducted by the Iowa extension service on twenty-two Iowa farms.

U. S. D. A. Circular 34 reports yield increase of 5.4 bushels per acre from Semesan Jr. treatment of selected seed

Advantages of Semesan Jr.
Seed treatment with Semesan Jr. protects seed against rotting, makes early planting safer, increases germination, controls seedling blight and seed-borne infections of Diplodia, Gibberella and Basisporium, and has also given splendid results in combating certain other common diseases.

Easily and Quickly Applied
Semesan Jr. is easily and quickly applied as a dust. Use two ounces per bushel of field or sweet corn. Harmless to seed. Does not slow up the rate of drop. Treat now or right before planting. Four ounces, 50c; one pound, $1.75; five pounds, $8.00.

Use Ceresan for seed grains and cotton; Semesan Bel for seed potatoes; Semesan for vegetable and flower seeds and bulbs.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT OF BENEFITS DRAINAGE DISTRICT NO. 18

To the persons named herein, Owners of land within Drainage District No. 18 and to all other persons whom it may concern, including occupants of lands within said District.

You and each of you are hereby notified that on the 15th day of January, 1930 the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa in adjourned Regular Session appointed C. F. Merten, Engineer, J. C. Ford and H. V. Reed as commissioners to apportion costs, costs of construction, damages and assessment of benefits between the several tracts of land within Drainage District No. 18 in said county, as provided by law.

That the report of the said commissioners is now on file in the office of the County Auditor and that the 6th day of May, 1930, at one o'clock P. M. has been set aside as the time for hearing the same before the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa, at the Court House in Garner, Iowa.

That all objections to the said report must be in writing, filed with the County Auditor on or before the hour set for hearing on said 6th day of May, 1930.

That the said Board of Supervisors will then and there hear and determine all objections made and filed to said report, and may increase, diminish, annul or affirm the apportionment made in said report, or in any part thereof, as may appear to the Board to be just and equitable, or the hearing may be adjourned from time to time for cause.

Names of owners, descriptions of property taxed, and amount of assessment on each tract as reported by the Commissioners is as follows:

Cannot Warp

Edgwood Roofs

"stay put"

EDGWOOD Red Cedar Shingles are sawn strictly edge-grain. This vertical and parallel grain equalizes all stresses and strains resulting from exposure to the elements.

Therefore EDGWOOD shingle Will Not warp, cup or curl. They lie tight and flat to the sheathing . . . preventing lodgment of combustible matter . . resisting flying firebrands . . . and presenting a maximum resistance to exterior ignition. Let us tell you more about the EDGWOOD red cedar shingled home!

Squill Kill

This New Powder Kills RATS and MICE But Nothing Else

Rats Cost Millions Annually.

You can rid your premises of this costly pest without danger to your poultry or domestic animals by using Squill Kill, a Red Squill preparation. Red Squill is recommended by the U. S. Dept. of Agri. in farm bulletin No.1533, as being taken readily by rats and relatively harmless to human beings and domestic animals.

Rats cost the American people $200,000,000 annually. They distribute the virus of plague of hydrophobia, of trichinosi, of equine influenza. When you can be rid of these pests by using Squill Kill at a cost of 50 cents, can you afford to have them?

Squill Kill carries a positive guarantee. If used according to instructions, your money will be refunded if Squill Kill does not kill rats and mice (4-9-11)

KLEMME SCOUTS INSTALLED NEW TROOP AT CORWITH

Used Impressive Candle Investiture Service As Ceremony There

Scouts and Scouters of Troop 56, Klemme Boy Scouts, went to Corwith Monday night to install a new Boy Scout Troop, Troop Committee, Scoutmaster and Assistant Scoutmaster.

The Klemme Scouts had charge of both the opening and closing ceremonies as well as the installation of the eleven new Scouts of Troop 58.

The Corwith Troop Committee and officers were sworn in by R. A. Jorgenson, Deputy Scout Commissioner for District IV.

L. Osam, Field Scout Exeuctive gave a fine talk in which he explained the purposes of the meeting and told of Scouting in this Area.

Wm. Breitske, Assistant Scoutmaster, Klemme, gave a talk in which he explained the meaning of the Investiture Ceremony Following his talk Troop 56 iniated the new Scouts and put on an impressive service using the Candle Investiture Ceremony.

Dr. Missman, organization chairman for District IV. presented the Tenderfoot Badges. The new Scoutmaster, Rev. Schaal addressed the new Scouts, setting forth their duties to God and their Country and emphasized the meaning of the Scout Badge, Oath and Laws and welcomed them as his Scouts.

Demonstrations in first aid was put on by Klemme's Boy Scout Red Cross First Aid Team, and Wm. Breitske explained to the audience the various steps as the Scouts prepared the "patient." Paul Sampson gave a demonstration of making fire by friction, and the Corwith Troop demonstrated knot tying and the O'Grady Drill.

Dr. Missman presented the Troop Charter, which was received by Mr. Lewis Larson, troop committee chairman.

The meeting was closed by the Klemme Scouts who used the flag retreat, Indian Benediction and Taps by Bugler Kenneth Kluckhohn.

EAGLE LAKE FARMER ASKS TO BE SUPERVISOR

Wm. Jakoubek Has Lived In County Forty Eight Years

Wm. Jakoubek, who resides on his farm, the first place north of the Park at Eagle Lake, this week places his announcement in the Times as a candidate for the office of Supervisor

Mr. Jakoubek states that he has lived in Hancock County for forty-eight years, and thirty-four years of that time he has lived on his farm near Eagle Lake. Besides this farm he owns an adjoining farm and another near Hayfield.

When a young man he attended the Academy at Garner and later attended school at Mason City. He spent a few months learning to be a railroad telegrapher but soon decided the farm was the best place and he has been there ever since. He expects to retire from the farm next fall.

Mr. Jakoubok is treasurer of the Farmers Elevator at Britt; has acted as a board member on the creamery there for thirteen years, and is a director on his local school board and has also served as president of the school board for a number of years.

He feels that he knows a few things about drainage matters as he is in four drainage districts. If elected Mr. Jakoubek says he will serve without fear or favor to the best interests of the taxpayers.

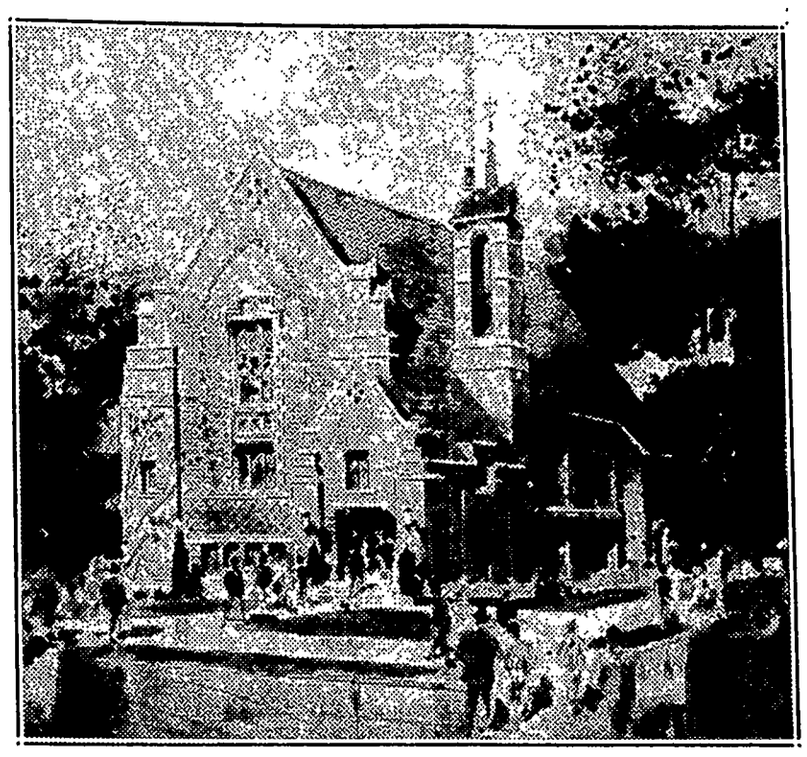
The New Methodist Church



The contractor's equipment and some of the steel for construction has been delivered to the site of the New Methodist Church, and work is expected to begin this week if weather permits.

The above cut is taken from the architect's drawing and gives a fair idea of what the new building will look like when completed, at least so far as general lines and appearance is concerned.

The dimensions of the church are to be 36 feet wide by 72 feet long. Due tot he extra width resulting from the off-set of the tower and entrance, the building as it faces the Park will have a front of 44½ feet.

The tower also projects out to the front adding about 6 feet to the length of the main building

The Church is to have a full basement which will be modernly equipped, and so arranged as to adequately care for the needs of the Sunday School, League, and social life of the entire congregation.

The main auditorium is planned to acre for the general needs of the worship services. It will seat 215 to 220. In case of over-flow services, the balcony and the rooms beneath the balcony, which will ordinarly be used for Sunday School purposes, are available. These two departments will seat another 125 people. If necessary, it will be possible by using extra chairs to accomodate a crowd of 400 or more people.

The church will be constructed out of a somewhat light colored or buff brick in variable shades with sufficient stone trimming to give it a beautiful effect. Then, to give it the final touch as a temple of worship, it is to be equipped with a number of fine art glass windows, which have already been contracted for. All modern conveniences will be found in the new church and a forced air heating system will be used.

This is the story of the new M. E. Church which the congregation and the minister have long dreamed about and is soon to be a reality.

Faith, finance, and co-operation must go hand in hand. Each one must do his part with unselfish loyalty.

BOY MANGLED THUMB IN PLAYGROUND SWING

Dick Delger's Boy Lost Thumb In Accident At Prairie Queen

Friday the ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Delger, who reside on the Zinn farm in Avery township, suffered a serious accident which cost him the loss of a thumb.

The boy was playing on the swing on the playground and caught his hand in the gears at the top of the swing, crushing the thumb of his right hand so badly that it had to be amputated.

AROUND THE COUNTY WITH AGENT WEISS

SMALL GRAIN AND GRASS SEEDING NEARLY FINISHED

County Agent Weiss Gives Short Review Of Farm Activities

The farmers of Hancock County have taken advantage of the real nice weather we have had and as a result have approximately all of the small grain and grass seeding done. Compare this spring with the one of 1929 when small grain was still being sown the latter part of April and the first of May. The farmers with quack grass have a wonderful opportunity to eradicate it during these warm, dry days. Keep cultivating and spring toothing the quack grass as long as this weather continues, however, what we need now is a real good soaking rain. What we got helps but we need more.

Dormant Spray Demonstrated

On Monday, April 7th, H. E. Nickols of the Extension Service was at the Jelle Tjaden farm near Woden putting on a fruit tree dormant spray demonstration. Lime Sulphur was used for spraying with two different mixtures. Fifteen pounds of line sulphur in fifty gallons of water was used to spray part of the orchard while twenty-five pounds of lime sulphur in fifty galons of water was also used The spray was applied to check and kill the bad infection of Oystershell scale. Later in June Mr. Nichols will return to the orchard to check up the results from using the different mixtures. George Knaupp of Garner planned on giving his trees a good spraying with lime sulphur to exterminate the Oystershell scale that is increasing in his orchard. Since the trees are starting to bud one should use the bordeaux spray and not the lime sulphur.

Garfield Held Fine Meeting

On the evening of April 8th. the Garfield Township Farm Bureau held another one of their very popular meetings. When it comes to monthly meetings, Garfield must be rated with the best in the county.

Feeding Low Priced Minerals

Louis Schmidt and Albert Abele are convinced that it pays to feed minerals to their livestock but they also know that there is a difference in minerals and that the higher priced minerals does not necessarily mean the best. The minerals they are feeding cost less than $3.00 per hundredweight.

Blumer Has Nice Shelterbelt

E. J. Blumer has finished the task of setting out a shelterbelt. He and his neighbors spent Wednesday setting out the trees. The final check showed 102 trees ready to do their stuff against the winter breezes in a few years time.

Will War On Rats Now!

Howard Barger has purchased a spray gun and five pounds of Calcium Cyanide which means that he has declared war on the rodent pests found around his buildings.

Club Members Held Meeting

All of the club members of Avery ownship met at the V. A. Cook me for their first meeting this ar. Stanley Pals was elected as hairman of the Club. Virgil Pre- p was elected Secretary. Bonnie erwood and Dolores Cook are the ublicity chairmen. The writer will wager a great deal that Bonnie and Dolores are the best "little" singers n the state!

Pete's Alfalfa Looks Good!

Peter Frandson's last fall seeding of alfalfa seems to be coming very od and with a good rain we know that a good stand is assured.

Enters Dairy Heifer Club

Dean Chisel of near Miller is the proud owner of a purebred Guernsey heifer. He has entered the Dairy Heifer Club and is determined to have his calf at its best in August during the show. Mrs. Floyd Chisel has the largest spring chickens seen in the county. She has about 500 Buff Orpingtons and 100 Jersey Black Giants that will easily be fries in a month.

Brothers Join Club Work

We are more than glad to welcome Otto Anderson in the Market Pig Club and his two brothers Orion and Morrin in the Ewe and Lamb Club. Competition will not start at the Show but has already started among the three brothers. Harold Mulert has done his dairy heifer one very good turn this spring and plans on doing the same deed in a day or two. He has given his calf a real good bath with warm water and lots of soap. Every club member should do the same thing on the next warm day.

J. N. Steil states that he has nearly gotten things squared around but admits that it was a lot of work. Starting this week he is going to drive his horses the easiest way, by using the Multiple Hitch.

Amsterdam Held Second Farm Bureau Meeting

Amsterdam township held the second monthly Farm Bureau meeting on Friday evening at District 2. The meeting was very interesting and educational. A short program of music was given by the students of Dist. No. 2. John Chambers of Boone township and Fairfield Dean of Magor township debated on the subject "Resolved that it is easier to buy and pay for a farm now than it was twenty years ago." A discussion on Weed Eradication followed. Approximately eighty persons attended this meeting.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

Who? The Liberty Township Farm Bureau.

What? Will hold their monthly meeting.

When? Thursday evening, April 17th.

Where? At the Center School House.

Come out and hear some of our most prominent County Officials. Be entertained by the Melody Boys, and the Liberty Township Comedians. Bring your food problems, as well as your health problems to Dr. Vegetable. Something going on every minute of the time.—Committee

"Butch" Schroeder, of Chicago was here the last of the week buying livestock. He came in his car but returned to Chicago on the stock train Saturday night. This morning he again returned to Klemme on the train, bringing his mother, Grandma Schroeder with him. She will spend the summer at her home here in Klemme. Her many friends are glad that she is again back in Klemme. "Butch" will return to Chicago in his car again in a few days.

Preparing For Class Play

Our Seniors are hard at work on "Big Time," their class play and expect to have it ready in two more weeks.

Miss Corle Is Improving

Miss Corle's sister from near Algona called on us this week and took with her some of Miss Corle's belongings. She reports that her sister is now recovering, is able to sit in an easy chair a part of the day but that she does not expect to be able to return for work this year. Miss Hersman, who is in charge of her room is doing well by the primary folks and at the rate they are going it now seems their handicap from change of teachers may be overcome.

P. T. A. MEETING NEXT WEEK TUESDAY, APRIL 29th

Britt Junior College Will Provide The Entertainment

The April meeting of the Klemme P. T. A. will be held on next Tuesday evening, April 29th at the High School Gym.

A special program has been arranged and will be presented by Hancock County's only Junior College: The Britt Junior College.

The program will be varied and will include musical numbers, readings and talks by Coach Rockford and Supt. Thies.

Refreshments will be served to all at the close of the meeting.

This will be the last P. T. A. meeting of the year, so a large attendance is desired. Bring your own dishes, please.

LADIES AID MEETS FRIDAY

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church meets Friday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. Members are asked to bring clean old rags for making carpet rags. Bring needle, thimble and scissors and come early. Mrs. Fred Kluckhohn and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson are hostesses.

WILL TAKE FURLOW AS CHIEF TELEPHONE OPERATOR

Mrs. Walter Lau has not resigned her position here with the Iowa Union Telephone Company, as has been reported. Mrs. Lau states, however, that she is taking a furlow of perhaps six months and will go to Albert Lea where Mr. Lau has a position with a packing company. The Lau children will finish the school year here before joining their parents at Albert Lea.

Mrs. Lau's furlow begins May 1st. Just who will act as chief operator during her absence has not been decided upon.

LIBERTY SCHOOL CHILDREN SAVED FARMER'S GARAGE

Discovered Flames From School House In Nick Of Time

The children in Liberty No. 6 made heroes of themselves when one day last week during the noon hour they saw flames coming from the roof of the Wm. Katter garage about a quarter of a mile away. Three of the larger school girls ran to the Katter farm to notify the family, and the fire was soon put out.

There were two cars in the garage and one was scorched and had one or two broken windows from the heat.

The Katter's appreciated the quick work and help of the children and their teacher, Norma Lenz and the school was presented with a five pound box of fine chocolate candy.

The garage is behind a grove and is not easily seen from the house. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Cannot Warp

Re-Roof over the old roof

The EDGWOOD Red Cedar Shingle is a 300% perfect shingle . . . 100% clear, 100% edgegrain. Sawn edgegrain, it positively will not warp, cup or curl, but lies perfectly flat to the sheathing for fifty years or more when laid with rustproof nails.

Thousands of homes have been re-roofed the EDGWOOD way, during the past few years . . . right over the old roofing or shingles. One of many home-owners, writes: . . . "The wonderful results which I have obtained by your method of re-roofing with new, red cedar shingles laid directly over the old wood shingles, has made me a very enthusiastic advocate . . . of the double roof . . ."

Double insulation is one of the many advantages of this method . . . the double roof keeps your home cooler in summer, warmer in winter. Saves labor, litter and expense . . . and the Edgwood red cedar shingled roof costs 14 to 315% less than any other standard roofing material.

The general public is urged to attend.

LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES

Mrs. P. W. Johnson, Sec.

A delightful meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lew Lewis on Thursday, April 10th. We were especially honored in having our three Gold Star Mothers with us—Mesdames Kurtz, Schaefer and Wille. Mrs. Gibbs, wife of a deceased Civil War Veteran, was unable to attend. Mrs. Jots, wife of a Spanish War Veteran was a welcome visitor.

Mrs. Lewis, on behalf of the Unit presented the three Gold Star Mothers with membership cards and pins. We are very happy to have these ladies with us and hope they can come more often.

A lovely lunch was served by Mrs. Pavey and her committee. A feature of it being a large cake baked and decorated by Mrs. Day. The cake was baked in the form of a heart, decorated with a gold star and the words, "Gold Star Mothers" written on it. Many thanks are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis for this lovely afternoon.

During the business meeting it was voted to spend the two dollars heretofore sent to National Headquarters for Child Welfare Work in our local community.

Corn King Increases Yields 4 Bushels per Acre by Semesan Jr. Seed Treatment

EVEN an increase of four bushels per acre looks good to a man who raises 100 bushels of corn per acre. That is the yield increase obtained from Semesan Jr. seed treatment by Arthur J. Lutz, winner of Michigan 1928 Corn Contest, who says, "Part of the field which I entered in the 1928 Michigan Corn Contest was planted with seed treated with Semesan Jr., the rest with untreated seed. When the field was sampled and weighed, we found that the treated seed yielded slightly more than four bushels of shelled corn per acre more than the untreated. Needless to say I have ordered enough Semesan Jr. to treat all my corn this year."

Arthur Lutz won 1928 Michigan Corn Contest

Increases Yields at Low Cost

This increased yield is typical of those obtained by the thousands of farmers who regularly treat their seed corn with Du Bay Semesan Jr. dust disinfectant before planting, at a cost of less than 3c an acre.

Advantages of Semesan Jr.

Seed treatment with Semesan Jr. protects seed against rotting, makes early planting safer, increases germination, controls seedling blight and seed-borne infections of Diplodia, Gibberella and Basisporium.

These diseases cause damage to the seed, plant or crop, such as partial or complete decay of the seed, seedling blight and barren stalks.

Semesan Jr. is easily and quickly applied as a dust. Use two ounces per bushel of field or sweet corn. Harmless to seed. Does not slow up the rate of drop. Treat now or right before planting. Four ounces, 50c; one pound, $1.75; five pounds, $8.00.

Use Ceresan for seed grains and cotton; Semesan Bel for seed potatoes; Semesan for vegetable and flower seeds and bulbs.

There will be some moving going on in Klemme this week, and perhaps the various parties are now all comfortably settled. Jack Etchen and family who have lived in the C. W. Wiles house purchased the Joe Johnson property just north of the Johnson residence and are moving in. Mr. Hughes and family who have been living there, unable to locate a house have built a garage-house on the Lauden lots north of the Henry Wille home, and are moving in. They may later build a new home in Klemme. Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Wiles who have lived at Ames for several years will again live in their home here. The people of Klemme are glad to have them live here again. There is not a vacant house in Klemme, which shows that Klemme is the best little town in North Iowa. It's time somebody was building some new houses.

Placing De Laval Quality within the reach of Everyone

THE "Golden" Series De Lavals introduced in 1928, in commemoration of the 50th De Laval Anniversary, are without doubt the finest separators that have ever been made. In skimming efficiency, ease of turning and handling, durability, beauty of design and finish, they are the world's best. They will be the choice of the man who wants the best.

Now the new member of the De Laval family—the "Utility" Series—gives a worthy companion line for the "Golden" Series and enables De Lavals to enter a lower price field.

These "Utility" De Lavals are equal in skimming efficiency and service to the "Golden" Series, and differ only in external features and finish. They are quality machines in every respect.

We carry the Golden Series in Nos. 16-17, plain or ball bearing. We carry the Utility in No. 16. We can furnish De Lavals in Electric, Power or Hand Drive. Use only De Laval Oil on your Separators—sealed in ½ and gallon cans.

ALL IOWA STREAMS CONSIDERED STOCKED, SAYS ALBERT

This Means A License Is Required To Fish In Iowa Rivere Here

All streams in Iowa are considered stocked by the state fish and game department and a license is required for fishing in any stream in the state, adcording to the interpretation given by W. E. Albert, state game warden.

This interpretation is based on the fact that fish work up stream and thus go from stocked bodies of water to streams that have never actually been stocked.

Mr. Albert further states, "We have no unstocked treams in the state. It would be permissable to fish for suckers, red horse, bullheads, buffalo and other unprotected fish at any season of the year, each person would be required to have the regular fishing license."

This would mean then, that the Iowa river near Klemme, is a stocked stream, and anyone desiring to fish there must have a license.

A license to fish is required of every male eighteen years of age or older.

JAMBOREE PICTURES SHOWN TO A LARGE CROWD

A fairly large crowd turned out, despite the bad roads, Friday night to see the World Jamboree pictures and hear Bob Moody, Jamboree Scout, give an interesting talk on the things he saw at the Jamboree.

Special numbers were given by Miss Gracka Quandt on the piano, and two numbers by the high school girls Glee Club was enjoyed.

Following the Jamboree pictures, L. Osam showed movies taken at Camp Roosevelt.

It was said by many, to be one of the most interesting and unusual entertainments given in Klemme for some time. This program was ponsored by Troop 56 Klemme Boy Scouts.

VETERANS MAKE POPPIES FOR MEMORIAL DAY

The ten million bright red poppies which Americans will wear this year as a Memorial Day tribute to the World War dead are ready. Disabled Veterans, working in government hospitals and convalescent workshops in 26 different states, have practically completed the task of making the vast crop of memorial flowers.

The poppies are now being boxed for shipment to local units of the Auxiliary thruout the country in preparation for the Auxiliary's nation-wide sale of poppies May 24, the Saturday before Memorial Day. More than one million dollars is realized annually from the sale for the relief work of the Legion and Auxiliary among the disabled veterans and their families.

Poppies have been made this year by disabled veterans in 31 government hospitals and six convalescent workshops maintained by the American Legion Auxiliary. The disabled men are paid one cent each for the flowers they make and have earned approximately $100,000 through the work during the winter.

ELL TOWNSHIP 4-H CLUB HELD INTERESTING MEETING

Will Attend "Veisha". At Ames On May 9th This Year

4-H Club Work is already offering many interesting things for the Club Girls of 1930. Charlotte Greimann and Nellie Stromer have been chosen to attend a short course which is to be held at Ames in June. The Club Girls of Ell Township are also planning on attending Open Day at Viesha, May 9th.

Withstanding the rainy weather April 19, ten girls answered roll call at the meeting held at the home of Lydia Pearson. Nellie Stromer gave a very interesting report on "Fresh Air and its Relation to Good Looks." The Girls scored three loaves of whole wheat bread which were baked by Jennie Albers and Mrs. R. Elder. Selections from the opera "Martha" were played and discussed. After adjournment very pleasing refreshments were served by the hostess.

Th Club intends to sell candy at the next Farm Bureau meeting in order to increase the club funds and we hope it will also increase the crowd at the Farm Bureau meeting. The club members are asked to pay dues of fifty cents at the next meeting on May 10 at the home of Alzada Mullin.

"B. B. B." CLUB OF LIBERTY MET AT THE LENZ HOME

The "B. B. B." Club of Liberty Township met at the home of the Misses Lois and Evelyn Lenz Saturday, April 19th. There were thirteen members present, including the two new members who just joined had one visitor. The Club has now an enrollment of fourteen members.

A demonstration was given by Lois and Evelyn Lenz on the making of whole wheat bread. Another demonstration on the making of butterfly rolls and apple crescent was given by Marie and Lola Goll.

The girl chosen to be sent to Ames in June is Miss Mildred Gast.

A delicious luncheon was served at the close of the meeting.

The next meeting is to be held at the home of the Misses Margaret and Dorothy Haberkamp May 24.

MRS. LEONARD SAMPSON TO BE TELEPHONE OPERATOR

Will Begin New Duty May First; Mrs. Lau Taking Furlow

As reported in The Times last week, Mrs. W. F. Lau, chief operator here for the Iowa Union Telephone company, will take a furlow and will move to Albert Lea, Minn., May 1st. where Mr. Lau is employed and where the Lau family will reside.

Mrs. Leonard Sampson has been chosen to act as chief operator during Mrs. Lau's absence. The Sampson family will move into the Lau residence, where the office is located, about May 1st.

Epworth Leagurers should begin now to plan their vacation and take in this fine work at Okoboji.

AROUND THE COUNTY WITH AGENT WEISS

SAYS SMALL GRAIN LOOKS FINE AFTER THE RAIN

Gives Interesting News Of Activities On Hancock County Farms

The good old rain that was long looked for arrived and wasn't it a good one? Most of us would have liked it better ha dit warmed up a little more but as long as no freezing was experienced we shouldn't object.

Regardless of the slightly chilly weather, nearly all of the small grain is up and it certainly looks fine. The fields are in better shape this year than in many years which is directly due to the physical nature of the soil this spring. It has been many years since the disc did such a good job as it did this spring.

Peat Bed Gives Him Trouble

Otto Schmidt, east of Miller is troubled over an old peat bed that was seeded to clover last spring but which failed to materialize this spring. He is planning on sowing sudan grass and soybeans which will be used as a hay crop. Ray Ford had what might have been a costly experience had it not been for his neighbors. While the Ford family were away from home the clo and alfalfa fields caught fire. Two hours of fire fighting by the neighbors checked the blaze just before reaching the straw stack and buildings.

Mrs. Abele Has 500 Chicks

Mrs. Art Abele for the first time, has purchased 500 baby chicks that seem to be coming along very nicely in spite of the damp, cold weather. She states that if bad luck is experienced this year she will go back to the method of raising instead of buying her chicks. Art Abele has gone into milking cows quite strong and att he present he and the boys are milking 29 cows. They have one cow that has milked for two years straight and still turns out over thirty pounds of butterfat per month.

Has Good Yellow Seed Corn

Ed. Buentenbach, east of Klemme, took time out last fall to select some good yellow seed corn. As a result he finds that he has more than he needs for himself and will be in a position to sell some. How much nicer his situation is than when we run short.

Rain Didn't Stop Them!

Liberty and Ell Townships were not to be stopped because of the rain and bad roads but held their township meetings on Thursday evening. Eight people were present at the Liberty meeting where a play and county officers were found on the program. Approximately sixty persons were in attendance at the Ell meeting where a real good program was given by the school, along with an interesting chicken discussion. A very large disappointment was experienced by the children at the meeting who were expecting to see moving picturs, but due to lack of electrical power the picture could not be shown. A weed discussion was substituted for the movies. Twin Lake township also had a rousing meeting with about fifty attending on Friday evening. A good play, talks by county officers and a weed discussion made up the program. Following the program, sandwiches, doughnuts and coffee were served by the ladies.

Clean Ground For Your Pigs

If possible you should move your spring crop of pigs out on clean ground. Why? Because there you have them on disease-free ground This same condition may be true of your old lot but many chances to one that your pigs will do better on the clean ground.

Leaguers Attended Rally Monday Evening At Swaledale

As long as Memory Lives

LONG after most of life's experiences are forgotten, we will remember each detail connected with the passing of a loved one.

The tributes of friends, the impressive service—these will help to solace the lonely hours to come. But the greatest comfort is the knowledge that the dear one is protected, even after burial.

This assurance of protection is provided through the Buckstaff Burial Vault. No moisture can enter—ever. It is fully guaranteed.

The Buckstaff Burial Vault adds only moderately to the cost of the funeral. Yet the certain knowledge of protection it gives is a lifelong source of comfort.

Buy your paint on the job basis . . . and save

S-W Paint Products are sold the world over under this famous trade-mark

SWP—the world's best house paint—costs less on your house than cheaper paint. This is because its wonderful body thoroughly covers more square feet of surface per gallon. Therefore its slightly higher price per gallon is more than made up by the fewer gallons needed for the job. That is why you should buy by the job—not by the gallon.

The beautiful, weatherproof SWP colors and its tough film last twice as long as cheaper paints. That means that you save from 50% to 60% on repainting when you use SWP. It is the world's greatest house paint bargain. Note the many Friday and Saturday Suggestions we offer this week.

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY SUGGESTIONS

FOOD HABITS Then and Now--

Food knowledge of twenty years ago is as out of date as an automobile, or a woman's hat, of that period. Nobody knew much about Vitamins then. The purpose of eating was to satisfy the appetite, with little regard to nourishment of the body.

Then came Docor E. V. McCollum of John Hopkins University, bringing out a new knowledge of food values based on those hitherto and little known substances—the Vitamins.

Hundreds of scientists, after, McCollum have firmly established this newer knowledge of human nutrition, which now is accepted as a matter of course.

The homemaker today in planning the family meals, makes sure to include foods that will supply the Vitamins—particularly Vitamin A, the body builder.

Klemme Creamery Butter is one of the most accessible and plentiful sources of Vitamin A.

Klemme Creamery Butter should be used as a spread, and in the preparation of various food dishes whenever possible, for a liberal supply of Vitamin A is better than the minimum on which growth is possible.

Have Had Plenty Of Rain The Past Week

This part of the country does not lack for moisture to grow spring crops, as it rained four days the past week. Country roads were in bad shape and even the gravel highways in places broke through when the rains brought out the last of winter frosts. A stiff wind Monday and sunshine did much to dry out the mud holes

With a few days of bright, warm weather and North Iowa will look pretty.

The "Easter" Rabbit which the Wellemeyer store gave away Saturday night is now in possession of Lester Gobli. Before turning the bunny over to its new owner Mr. Wellemeyer decided a "christening" ceremony should be performed to give the rabbit a name. This act was officially performed and Ruth Stille put jinger ale on the buny's head while Mildred Thompson held it, and it was named 'Klemma Ann,' the first part for Klemme and the second name in honor of Doc Anderson who gave the rabbit.

Mrs. Harry Smith had a birthday Monday and to help celebrate the occasion a number of ladies had a surprise on her and arrived at the Smithh ome in the afternoon laden with baskets of good things to eat. Cannot Warp

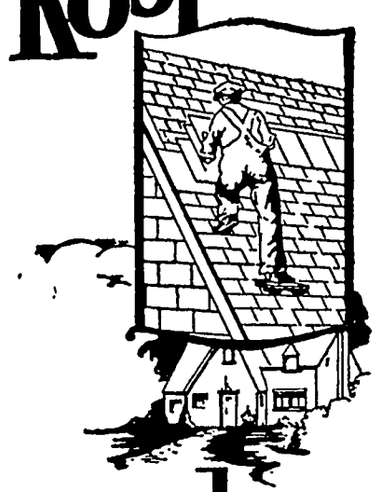
Re-roofing made easy-



Don't delay re-roofing just because you dread the litter of old shingles around yard and garden, and the time, labor and expense of tearing them off. The EDGWOOD way ... re-roofing right over the old roof ... saves it all. Re-roof with EDGWOOD red cedar shingles, and you have a new roof that will last 40 years or more.

Your home is doubly insulated, too, when you use this practical method ... much cooler in summer, and 12 to 15 degrees warmer in winter.

EDGWOOD red cedar shingles cost less than any other standard roofing material ... saving 14 to 315%. Measured by years of service, the saving is even greater, averaging from 126 to 825%.

Get these extra profits from fence supported on RED TOP STEEL DRIVE POSTS

GOOD boundary and cross fences plus a liberal use of movable or temporary fence are not an expense but the best investment you can make. It pays big dividends in the form of wastes stopped—labor saved in harvesting crops—down and shattered grain salvaged—pasturage in stubble fields made available—extra pigs raised and marketed earlier. And it pays extra dividends in the form of losses prevented, such as stock killed on the highways—valuable animals lost through breaking into and gorging on crops—damage to stock from wire cuts—milk production lost through damage resulting to a good cow breaking through a run down fence.

And when these good fences are erected on Red Top steel posts they not only last longer but are an efficient lightning protection to stock—Red Tops ground the flash every rod—save the loss of valuable animals.

Come in and let us show you the superior features that make Red Top last longest in the fence line—make it the best steel post your money can buy.

FIRE DAMAGES ROOF ON THE SMOCK HOME

Roof Fire Caused From Sparks From Chimney

Flames were discovered on the kitchen or porch roof of the C. D. Smock home about noon Friday. The fire company made a quick trip and extinguished the flames with chemicals and it was not necessary to use the fire hose.

The flames which probably originated from sparks falling from the chimney which was nearby, sparks igniting the dry shingles of the roof. A hole was burned into the roof and the corner of the house was burned and some damage was done to the interiar from chemicals soaking through.

Car Drivrs A Menance

At this fire and others in the past the writer noted how that car drivers lose all sense and go madly driving down the street at ah high rate of speed, endangering the lives of others who are on their way to a fire, and even hindering the fire company by driving past them or around them.

Car drivers should use the same care driving to fires as they would ordinarily drive to other places. There is no great hurry, and absolutely foolhardy and reckless endangering of life. Ift here is any fast driving to do, the fire boys will do that themselves—they have the right of way.

WILD FLOWERS IN DANGER OF EXTERMINATION

Many Of Iowa's Wild Flowers Now A Thing Of The Past

GRINNELL, Iowa, April 30.—A campaign to save the vanishing wild flowers of Iowa has been started here by Prof. Henry S. Conrad, head of the botany department of Grinnell college. The campaign has been approved by the Fish and Game department of the state of Iowa, the Academy of Science, the Wild Flower Preservation Society, and the Iowa Conservation association.

"The wild flowers of our woods and prairies are rapidly vanishing" Dr. Conard stated today. "Many of our flowers cannot recover after the tops are plucked off. Many are pulled up by the roots. Iowans used to know many a glorious wild garden where today everything is rooted out and gone.

"So serious is the situation now that a movement has been started which aims to interest the public in the protection of wild flowers. This movement is sponsored by the Iowa Academy of Science, which includes nearly all the scientists of the state, and the state Fish and Game department, which is the official bureau for the welfare of wild life in the service of the people."

"BIG TIME" TO BE STAGED FRIDAY EVE

SENIORS WILL STAGE CLASS PLAY FRIDAY NIGHT

Hancock County Music Festival Was Held At Britt Last Firday

Our Seniors will stage their class play, "Big Time" on Friday night of this week and the tickets are now on sale and may be reserved at the Wilson Pharmacy. The class has been to considerable expense to stage this unusal play and the recpits must be adequate to care for it. There will no doubt be wonder and surprise for those who do see it as it promises to be very different With a splendid cast and both Miss Trumbell and Miss Herseman to coach the players we predict a fine piece of work. The program will begin at 8:00 o'clock. The plans at present are to offer the play but one night, and only in case more reserved seats are called for than can be supplied will there be any change of plans.

Music Festival Held At Britt

The Hancock County music festival held on Friday evening of last week was the first of its kind in our county. It consisted of four selections by each of the glee clubs, boys and girls; selections by the orchestra and five by the band. Five of our own students participated in orchestra and girls glee club. Most of those participating were from Garner and Britt, while a few came from Kanawha, Corwith and Crystal Lake. There were over two hundred paid admissions and over one hundred students participating. The program was well balanced and had good variety.

Base Ball Team Wins Game

Our baseball team won their game against Thornton last Friday evening 7 to 8. They went to Swaledale Tuesday afternoon for a return game there and to try to retrieve their defeat by the same team on our own diamond.

ANOTHER CANDIDATE OUT FOR COUNTY SUPERVISOR

Mr. Geo. Klipping, of Madison, is this week announcing that he is a candidate for the office of County Supervisor and will seek the vote of the republican voters at the coming primaries.

The Times is unable at this time to inform our readers more about Mr. Klipping, as he telephoned his announcement as we were going to press. We will tell you more about him later.

With six candidates in the field for two offices, its going to be a hard battle for someone to get a majority vote.

STEEL WORK BEING PUT UP ON NEW CHURCH

Work Progressing On Both Of Klemme's New Churches

Contractor Mayer and his crew of men have completed the footings for the new Methodist Church and began putting up the steel frame work of the building Tuesday morning. The roof will be supported by the steel beams and does not rest on the walls as is sometimes the case. Mr. Mayer expects to keep things moving and a few weeks of good weather will make suite as howing.

Contractor Bartleson is keeping up a steady pace at the Reformed Church and that building is beginning to take form.

DO YOU WANT WORMS OR APPLES ASKS COUNTY AGENT

Necesary To Start Spraying Now To Keep The Worms Out Of Apples

"Spraying the trees this week helps to bring clean apples next fall," warns County Agent Weiss.

He says that this week's spray probably is the most important of those needed to keep the codling moth or apple worm out of the fruit. This spray called the calyx spray is applied to the apples when about 95 percent of the petals have fallen from the flowers and before the little apple is formed. The apple requires about a week to form after the petals have fallen and this spray must be aplied during this time to be effective.

Mr Weiss also states that most apple growers this year should get this spray quite early, that is, when most of the petals have fallen. Many growers were not able to get the cluster bud spray on before the trees came out in bloom, either because of the hot weather of the week of April 7, or in the rain during the following week. This rain started apple scab, hence the necessity of the early application of this present spray.

The spray should be applied to the pear, plum and cherry trees as well as the apple. It helps control scab and the first brood of the codling moth on the apples and pear, leaf spot on the cherry and brown rot on the plum. The black raspberries shoulda lso receive it for Anthracnose control, and the gooseberries and currants should be sprayed, if they are not in bloom, to kill the worms that usually eat off all the leaves.

The spray solution used should consist of either 4 to 5 quarts of liquid lime sulphur or 4 pounds of the dry forf plus 1½ pounds of lead arsenate to 50 gallons of mixture. "It is very essential," says the county agent, "that this spray be thoroughly applied to all parts of the tree for good results.

Lime sulphur should not be used on peaches or grapes as it will burn the leaves. Most grapes do not need spraying but if there was disease on them last year, the county agent says he will be glad to tell the proper spray mixture to use.

MISS MYRTLE JOHNSTON QUITS AS DEMONSTRATION AGENT

Miss Myrtle Johnston, home demonstration agnt for the Hancock and Cerro Gordo county Farm Bureaus for one and a half years, has resigned her position effective July 1, it was announced Monday in the office of the county agent. Miss Johnston plans to take up graduate work for procuring a master's degree.

Miss Johnston's successor has been appointed but a committee from the Cerro Gordo and Hancock organizations will meet with Miss Neale Knowles, director of womens work at Iowa State College at Ames in the near futre for the selection of another agent.

Miss Johnston has had charge of the work among the farm women and girls. This has included various projects such as studies of nutrition, sewing and recreational activities.

A safety razor blade is one of the best articles to use to remove paint spots from windows.

AROUND THE COUNTY WITH AGENT WEISS

CROPS ARE LOOKING FINE HERE THIS SPRING

Hancock Beats Hollandale For Fine Vegetables Says Weiss

Woudn't it be much nicer if it only would warm up a little more in the evenings, but the crops are looking good regardless of the cool nights. The weather has not slowed up the activities of the farmers as much of the plowing is done for corn and many are sure fighting the Quack Grass which s not succeeding in holding its own. I am sure no one will feel sorry ifm ost of it is killed off.

Has 400 Leghorn Chicks

Henry Nolte taking advantage of the farm sales has purchased a cheap, good corn planter which he will use for drilling. Mrs. Nolte has 400 very nice leghorn chicks which are taking advantage of the green grass about the farm.

Bankers To Back Club

Any farm boy or girl around Goodell certainly have a real chance of getting started in club work as the Goodell bankers, Mr. Conwell and Mr. Butts state that they will finance any of the farm boys and girls wishing to start in Club Work. If it is possible we are going to try to take advantage of this kind offer and if things go as they should a Club Stock Show will be held at Goodell for the members about that territory.

Will Try New Quack Killer

Rush Gabrielson of Crystal Lake has purchased a drum of sodium chlorate to use in spraying Quack Grass. He is more orl ess experimenting with the solution but let us hope that good results are secured

Plant 90 Acres Of Spuds

The Kroeze Bros. of near Crystal Lake have finished planting 90 acres of potatoes and 10 acres of onions. If you wish to see two busy boys just visit their farm.

Robert Clark is sure turning the turf with his tractor and the result is that he is nearly if not all done plowing.

Boys Are Raising Onions

Clare Reed's three boys are not to be found idle this summer as they are caring for 4 acres of onions.

Better Than Hollandale

Any of our Hancock County folks who drive up to Hollandale, Minn., to see the vegetable crop growing in that section should know that such a long trip is unnecessary as we have Hollandale backed off the map right around Crystal Lake. If any of you wish to see some real Vegetable Growers you only have to visit the Hayfield, Crystal Lake territory and get their eyes full. Most of the onions have been planted and if you don't think it is labor just talk to John Haan, Peter Zuidhof or Marvin Traas. They are all onion and potato growers on a large scale.

More Boys In 4-H Club Work

We are more than pleased to welcome the following boys in 4-H club work. Celbert and Francis Lundgren in the colt and mule club. We just had to introduce the mule club as we couldn't discourage the boys. Vern Burhow has enrolled in the Dairy Heifer Club. Ray Kirchbaum is one of the mule club members. His brother Eugene also entered the mule club while the third brother Cecil, has entered the colt culb.

A. M. Kirchbaum is real busy with a tractor, discing with a five horse team while carpenters are remodeling his farm home. Julius Jensen is trying some Missouri grown Hi-Bred seed corn. His boys are very much interested in ewes and in the dairy heifer club.

BEN SWALVE INJURED, STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

Accident Happened When He Cut Across Street

Ben Swalve received minor injuries and bruises when he was struck by a car driven by John Suckow late Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Swalve started to cut across the street from the post orice to the drug store between parked cars and was struck by the Suckow car. He was knocked down ando ut of the path of the car, receiving only a bad shaking up and minor injuries. He was again able to be about the first of the week.

The Times has repeatedly warned pedestrians of th danger of cutting across streets where cars are parked. The cement crossings are for the use of pedestrians—use them and help avoid accidents.

MRS. SCHLAWIN ENJOYED A BIRTHDAY PARTY

Thursday was Mrs. Caroline Schlawin's birthday, and on that date she was 79 years young.

In honor of the event a number of neighbors and friends helped her celebrate by having a party at her home. Those who atended were: Mrs. Lew Lewis, Mrs. W. F. Pavey, Mrs. Paul Grang, Mrs. Henry Lemke, Mrs. Lena Schroeder, Mrs Fred Haupt and Miss Nova Schlawin.

The ladies presented her with a nice cake enclosed in a fancy cake dish and cover. All report that a good time was enjoyed.

Mrs. Will Kirkwood was hostess to the Larkin Club last Thursday afternoon at which she entertained with Court Whist. A delicious lunch was served following the social hour.

BUILDING NEW BRIDGE WEST OF KLEMME

E. A Cramy, of Des Moines began work Monday building a new concrete and steel bridge over the river just west of Klemme.

To sharpen a food chopper run a small piece of sand soap thru it and you will find that it both sharpens and brightens the knives.

Don't hesitate to ask the cost

In making preparations for a funeral, some have not even considered the burial vault, feeling that the cost limited this form of protection to the very wealthy.

The fact is that the Buckstaff Burial Vault, which guarantees positive protection for the remains, is easily within the means of the average family. Ask us about it.

A fitting farewell to the one who has passed on—a comforting memory for those who remain—this is the double purpose of our service. With this in mind, we provide only the best in service, equipment and merchandise.

"DICK" DICKINSON HAS REPRESENTED IOWA DOZEN YEARS

Is Candidate Now For U. S. Senator

Congressman L. J. Dickinson of Algona, candidate for the United States senate, is a native son of Iowa. Fifty-seven years old, "Dick" was born on a farm near Derby, Lucas county. He was elected to congress in 1918 and now is serving his twelfth consecutive year as a member of the house of representatives.

"Dick" Dickinson, called strongest "farm relief" speaker in congress by a president of the United States.

The congressman now is engaged in his campaign for the republican senatorial nomination. His friends say that foremost among his many achievements in Washington is his unceasing fight for agricultural equality. Thoroughly grounded in farm economics, intensely loyal to his constituents, "Dick" has been an effective servant of the farmer.

The congressman has a consistent record favoring all constructive measures dealing with humanitarian causes, labor, education, pensions and child welfare.

Mrs. L. D. Dickinson, Dick's lovable white haired mother, waits for June 3 when she will be one of the first in Mason City to vote for her boy for United States senator. She is 83 years old.

Congressman Dickinson has not learned his Washington from a book. His acquaintance with legislative procedure in Washington is unlimited. Twelve years of constant attendance in the halls and committees of congress; twelve years as a representative of Iowa in congress; twelve years of close association with congressmen, senators, presidents, have fitted Dickinson with the experience so vital to a senator.

Of the present ninety-six senators, Congressman Dickinson served with a third of them as members of the house in the last twelve years.

Congressman Dickinson. Nicholas Longworth, Teddy Roosevelt's Son-in-law.

Speaker of the House Longworth once told Dickinson: "Dick, if you ever need an affidavit that you have been a hell-raiser for agriculture, just call on me."

As a boy, Congressman Dickinson attended public school, worked on his father's farm, and later sold milk from his father's dairy. As a young man, Congressman Dickinson graduated from Cornell college, Mount Vernon, Ia., and from the law college of the State University of Iowa. At the age of 26 he began the practice of law in Algona, Ia.

Actually You SAVE By Using Plenty Of Butter

Sometimes, when grocery bills seem to be soaring, butter suggests itself as an item on which to save. But, let's see whether you actually asve! Bread is one of our best and cheapest foods, but it needs BUTTER to give it complete food value. Bread without REAL Butter means robbing the body of something it should have. And, the delectable flavor of butter, causes the bread plate to be emptied oftener—decreasing the need for more expensive foods. That is one way in which you actually SAVE by using plenty of Butter.

And, there are health values in butter that you can't afford to overlook. BUTTER contains an abundance of Vitamin "A" which builds resistance to colds and similar infections (particularly in children). It contains Vitamin "D"—the sunshine vitamin which builds bone structure and sound teeth.

Use KLEMME CREAMERY BUTTER freely on your table and in your cooking. It gives so much in food value and health value—yet it really costs so little.

Carload of Creosote

Will Be On Track Saturday

To the people who have given us an order for less than barrels bring in your container—leave it at the yard. We will tag it and give you the number of gallons that you want.

To the people who we did not call on or who did not get their order in, we are holding open this exceptional buy until SATURDAY NIGHT. If you want 5, 10, or 15 gallons bring in your container; we will fill it for you at the regular SALE PRICE.

What Creosote is Used for

When ever used on wood its first duty is to PRESERVE and make it LAST LONGER. When used in Hog Houses, Chicken or Brooder Houses it will kill and keep out mites and is a very good DISINFECTANT.

When put in the Corn Cribs and Oat Bins the pesky rat and mouse has "to pull his freight" — he is going where he can gnaw and keep out of the odor and keep from getting his feet burnt!

CORNER POST.— If you want to Creosote some post we have a regular dipping tank that you can use if you want to.

PHONE IN YOUR ORDER IF YOU WANT SOME OF THE BEST AND MOST USEFUL ARTICLE THAT A FARMER CAN HAVE ON HIS FARM.

GET IT BY SATURDAY OR AT LEAST GET IN YOUR ORDER. YOU WILL BE SAVING YOURSELF SOME MONEY—

Banking Service

Banks are becoming more and more the custodians of the funds of the people, of both large and small means. This is due to a wider appreciation of the value of banking service as its usefulness is extended and its methods become better known. In the case of—the best service is assured. Its officers aim in every way to protect the interests of its patrons, making use of every means of precaution. It's up-to-date system of accuracy, promptness and the same careful attention to large or small depositors. It is a safe bank. It is the bank for all the people—men women and children. If you have any banking business to transact, come to the white bank building.

CORRECTION OF ARTICLE ON SWALVE ACCIDENT

Driver Of Car Was Not To Blame In Accident

In the Times of April 30 we told of the accident of Ben Swalve. The article was somewhat mis-leading n that it might attach the blame onto John Suckow, who was driving the car. Mr. Suckow is in no way to blame for the accident as Mr. Swalve, in cutting across the street walked into the rear of the Suckow car, and was NOT struck by the car, as the article stated. It was not the intention of the Times to attach any blame whaever on Mr. Suckow. Those who happened to see the accident agree with us in this statement.

JUNIOR AND SENIOR BANQUET MAY 16

SENIORS TOOK IN $147.00 FROM THEIR CLASS PLAY

Junior Senior Banquet Will Be Put On Friday, May 16th

On Tuesday of this week our high school students wrote several tests prepared at the University of Iowa for the students of all of our Iowa high schools. This will provide a means of comparing the work done by our own students with those of other high schools pursuing the same subjects. Naturally we are anxious for the comparison to be favorable.

As last year, our first and seconds will be given the oportunity to go to Algona on Tuesday of next week to compete with first and seconds of other schools in this section of Iowa and winners at the Algona meet will no doubt be invited to Iowa City to a final scholarship meet.

Senior Class Play A Success

The Senior Class play was quite a success, both in quality of performance and in door receipts; thanks to both players and directors and all others asisting in its performance. Good weather made possible a good crowd both nights and the receipts amounted to more than $147.00.

Junior Senior Banquet Next

The Juniors are now to stage the next event in the form of a Banquet for the Seniors on May 16th. Hamilton's College of Commerce Orchestra has consented to come for the occasion and to furnish the music.

Team Wins From Thornton

Our base ball team defeated the Thornton team here last week and hoped to win against them at Thornton on Wednesday of this week. They then play Britt on their diamond next Tuesday.

Two More Weks Of School

But two weeks of school yet remain after this week. Baccalaureate services will be held Sunday evening, May 18 and the Commencement program will be held on Tuesday evening, May 20. Rev. Grosshuesch will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon and Dr. Ingvolstad from Lansing, Michigan, will deliver the Commencement address.

School Picnic Friday, May 23

There is talk of a picnic on Friday, May 23 which we hope will materialize for there never was a better place to go for ice cream and cake and a lot of other good things. There will probably be a base ball game in the afternoon. Some of our townsmen have already expressed a willihgness to help organize a team to play our high school boys.

Two More Weeks Band Work

Our baud boys will continue this week and next with Mr. Storer of Mason City. We hope a way may be provided to keep the organization intact this summer. Our lads have made a good start towards a first rate town band and if the community will get behind the boys it will continue to improve and our own chaps will be getting in time what has been going to out of town players. It seems wiser to build a band from our own material than to import one.

Home Economics Display

Twelve girls, members of the sewing class, have on exhibit this week at Wellemeyer's Store the work they have completed the first nine weeks of this semester and invite the public's attntion to it.

T. B. TESTING AGAIN

Dr. E. G. Dunn is again back in the county testing all the herds that had one or more reactors when tested the last two times. It should be known that before you have a clean herd they must have had no reactors when tested the last two times. If your last test showed no reactors then it is necessary to test again, and if on the next test no reactors are found you have a clean herd.

LESSON ON NUTRITION GIVEN AT VIRGIL COOK HOME

The fifth lesson in second year Nutrition, "Meals for Special Occasions," was given by Miss Myrtle Johnston at the home of Mrs. Virgil A. Cook, April 30th in Avery township. The following luncheon menu was prepared by the ladies present:

Egg Timbales Mashed Potatoes
Cabbage Salad
Buttered Whole Wheat Parker House Rolls
Jelly Desert Macaroons
Coffee Nuts Mints

A diagram for serving buffet luncheon was discussed and one of the ladies prepared the table for the luncheon, assembling the dishes for the first course on the table and for the second course on a side table. Two of the other ladies present were chosen to sit at the table and serve.

Miss Johnston discussed the use of table decorations, flowers, and also simple favors for the children's birthday parties.

Suggested plans for Achievement Day were also gone over by Miss Johnston.

It was a very rainy day and only five ladies were present.

JOHN SUCKOW IS AWARDED CONTRACT FOR NEW SCHOOL

Liberty Township Will Construct A New School In District No. 1

John Suckow, Klemme building contractor was the lowest and best bidder at the letting held Monday, May 5th, for the construction of a new brick school house in Liberty Township, District No. 1. Mr. Suckow has had a lot of experience n the building line and has constructed several new brick school houses in this county, as well as several modern frame constructions.

When this building is completed, Liberty Township will have 4 brick school houses, al built recently; 3 new frame construction schools and 2 remodeled school houses. All of the nine school houses in the township are equipped with full basement and furnace heated.

Liberty Township can well feel proud of the splendid way in which they have carried out their building program.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Owners of chickens and cows are notified to keep such on their own premises. Mayor.

AROUND THE COUNTY WITH AGENT WEISS

HANCOCK COUNTY CORN WILL SOON BE ALL PLANTED

Interesting Experimental Plot Will Be Found In Twin Lake Twp.

It won't be long now before the corn that is to be planted in Hancock County will be in and the cultivators seen doing their duty eradicating the weeds. Much has already been planted and with another week of good weather there shouldn't be many acres without having felt the planter wheels.

Plants Potatoes On Peat Lands

W. W. Clement, Miller, has utilized most of his peat land by planting potatoes of the Russett and Early Ohio varieties. Mr. Clement, I am sure, knows his sheep raising. He never fails to dock and castrate the young lambs between the ages of seven to ten days. This is a practice that absolutely be followed.

Is Using A Potash Fertilizer

Wm. Utt is going to rcelaim some of his alkaline ground by broadcasting a potash fertilizer at the rate of at least 300 pounds per acre. His straw stack bottoms and straw manure along with sweet clover are going to be applied on the alkaline spots this fall. This is the most economical way of reclaiming the bad spots.

No Argument In This Cace

There should be no argument on who has the better lambs this fall between Robert or Dale Brede, as Robert's three ewes have twin lambs while Dale's two ewes failed to have lambs this spring.

Fred Peterson states that he is going to spray the little quack he has with Sodium Chlorate.

The yearly colt club members had better start grooming their livestock as Alfred Peterson certainly has a nice yearlign entered in club work.

Is Strong For Spraying Trees

Hod Lawhorn certainly is a strong advocate for spraying fruit trees. All his trees have received two sprays and he states that they will receive at least three more before the season is over.

Clean Ground For Pigs

Alfred Jurgemeyer has surely taken a long step in the right direction. He is the hog man on his father's farm and his first step was to move the sows and pigs out on clean ground. He has not stopped with that but has also provided a place where the pigs can get all the tankage, oats and corn they want while the old sows cannot. With this method the weaning time problem is simplified because the pigs have started eating and do not miss the nursing.

George Evans, Corwith, is changing his seed corn and as a result has purchased fifteen bushels of a new variety. Paul Hasty will have very little time to loaf with 150 acres of corn to keep clean.

Corn Test Plot Was Planted

There was plenty of activity at Sam Barber's east of Goodell when a corn test plot was planted on his farm. An experiment is being run testing seven varieties of corn, some given a dust treatment, some given an application of 0-20- fertilizer using a planter attachment while some was given an application of the same fertilizer, only broadcast. It should be interesting to check results as to effect of treating and effect of broadcast and hill dropped fertilizing. The corn experimented with includes five varieties of Hi-Bred, one variety of Western Iowa Grown, Reed's Yellow Dent, McArthur's Golden King and Barber's Yellow Corn. The experimental plot is located just across the road south of the District No. 9 schoolhouse in Twin Lake Township. Stop that Sam will be more than pleased to explain the plots.

RECEIVED LESSON IN SECOND YEAR NUTRITION COURSE

Interesting Meeting Held In Ell Township Yesterday, May 6th

Miss Myrtle Johnston held the last training school on "Second Year Nutrition," Tuesday, May 6th in Ell Township at the home of Mrs. L. Weaver.

The lesson was "Planning and Serving Meals for Special Occasions."

A very attractive noon luncheon was served cafeteria style. Mrs. Weaver was hostess and Mrs. Carl Wille and Mrs. Wm. Schlawin acted as assistant hostesses.

Plans were made for Achievement Day to be held at Britt, June 18th. A good program is being planned. Mrs. Richards will be the speaker.

This was the last meeting with Miss Johnston, our H. D. A. for the past year and a half. We regret to have Miss Johnston leave us, as she is an efficient worker and leader. We wish her success in her school work, and whatever work she takes up after she finishes her degree.

PURPOSE OF HOME PROJECT ACHIEVEMENT DAY

Every county in the state of Iowa holds a Ladies Farm Bureau Home Project Achievement Day each year. The following are the purposes of such a meeting:

1. To serve as a goal to work towards throughout th year.
2. To give means for check up lesson by lesson.
3. To give means for yearly check up.
4. To provide publicity for Home Project work which is a part of the county agricultural program supported by the Farm Bureau.

Hancock County will have their Achievement Day on June 18th at Britt.

In all of the work and through our entire life we like to have goals towards which to work. These goals vary with the type of work which we are doing. As one of the goals of th Farm Bureau this year was to have 1100 members. The dairymans goal may be to increase his sale of milk to ten gallons more per day, the school child's goal may be to get and average of 93 per cent for the year. The farmer may have a goal to raise sixty bushels of corn per acre. A mrchant's goal may be to increase his stock of goods one-third. We may not always reach our goal but it is very desirable to have one to look towards so we can see over the small ruts. It gives us more enthusiasm when we see that we are reaching the goal or going over th top. Thus we can accomplish more with less effort, because real encouragement gives us an ability to do things joyfully which might have been real work for us. When we thoroughly enjoy doing anything we enervate this comfort and desire into other people.

We never know if w are gaining or losing unless we have check-ups. All business organizations make their monthly check up and then their final yearly ones. The townships in Hancock County were quite happy after our check up a few weeks ago when most of them found out that they were making better progress this year in their Nutrition work than they did last year in the Clothing work. Everyone desires to give constructive publicity to his work as this helps it to grow strong and large.

GEORGE KLIPPING HAS RESIDED IN COUNTY 40 YEARS

Mr. George Klipping of Madison township, who is a candidate for the office of supervisor, was in Klemme the other day getting acquainted with the voters in this community.

Mr. Klipping has lived in Hancock County for over 40 years. He is living on his own farm in Madison township. He can devote all of his time to the office he seeks as he has grown up boys to look after the farm.

Mr. Klipping is a member of the farm burau and has served as a director. He has been secretary of the Farmers Elevator at Forest City for 11 years and manager of the Farmers Mutual Telephone Co. for 18 years. He has been active in school work, having served as a director.

Mr. Klipping is a believer in good roads and believes that all townships should be shown equal favor in that line.

FAT LAMB CLUB OF AVERY HAD FINE MEETING

The Fat Lamb Club of Avery Township mt at the home of J. J. Cook, Friday evening May 2nd.

A program arranged by Dolorys Cook was given and was as follows: "Call to Order," by the Chairman Stanley Pals; minutes of the last meeting by Secretary Virgel Prelipp; a talk on "Snakes" by Leo Kearney; recitation "Where the 4-Leafer Clover Grows," by Dolorys Cook; a talk on "Gophrs," by Cortlan Buchanan; piano solo by La Vaugn Sherwood. Dolorys Cook gave out slips of paper on which appeared the motto "Make the best better," and the slogan, "Win without bragging, lose without squeeing."

Singing by the Club members was followed by a talk on "How the 4-H Club Work Started, by V. A. Cook.

The Club members then went to the large basement where games were played until Mrs. Cook called all upstairs where refreshments were served.

A general good time was had and at a late hour the meeting adjourned.

The June meeting is to be held at the home of La Vaugn Sherwood.

Buying Health

At Postage Stamp Prices

The wise housewife gives her family plenty of Butter. She puts it on the table at every meal. She uses it freely in cooking. Because, in buying Butter, she is buying Health at a cost so low as to be insignificant—Health at postage stamp prices. . . . . .

Butter brings health through its appeizing flavor, that helps us enjoy our meals and thus aids digestion. It brings Health through Vitamin D, the sunshine Vitamin so essental to good bones and teeth. It brings Health through its generous supply of Vitamin A hat builds strong bodies.

Trying to save by getting along without Butter is a useless sacrifice, because there is no real saving. When you compare Health value or when you compare food value, you find that Butetr is most economical of all, actually giving you far more for your money.

Here's Matrimonial Ad in Newspaper of 1771

The art of matrimonial advertising seems to be of old standing, judging from an insertion in the Swedish provincial newspaper, the Carlskrona Veckoblad, of 1771, recently unearthed and reproduced in a Stockholm daily. It is as follows: "The honorable public will not too adversely note the following well-meant advertisement. As it sometimes happens that a pretty and well-to-do girl long passes unnoticed just because of the fact that honorable suitors do not know her fortune, or how much her parents will bestow on her as a wedding gift, it is herewith announced that, now, an honorable girl, twenty-one years of age, rather pretty, mannerly, a la mode and well bred, who, besides, understands cooking, washing, baking, etc., which, no doubt, will be further improved through her intelligence when she, through marrying, gets more practice in household things, possesses in property, real and movable, about 15,000 Silver Dalers, besides which she expects a legacy from her old grandmother. If some decent bachelor, preferably a noble, clergyman or otherwise somehow well-situated man, should speculate, a somewhat more precise address of the girl's guardian can be had at the printing office of this paper. But it is stipulated as a condition that none but gallant cavaliers, well built and of good carriage, take the trouble of offering their names; in the opposite case no further particulars will be given."

How Term "Thirty" Came to Symbolize an Ending

Charles Payne Smith gave the following information in the Typographical Journal regarding the origin of "30" as used by newspaper men and telegraphers: "The first press association organized in Civil war times was composed largely of morning papers published near the eastern seaboard. Each paper sent into the central office items of local interest, which were there edited and telegraphed to all members. It happened that the first message sent to the association totaled 30 words and this figure, with the words 'Good night' and the signature of the sender, was placed at the bottom of the sheet by the operator. At that time piecework was the rule on all papers. The daily grist was usually set up, corrected and in the forms by 10 o'clock, but the compositors were compelled to wait around at their own expense until the foreman announced that '30' was in. So '30' became a byword among printers, symbolizing the end."

Curly Maple

The forest service says that the cause of curly maple is not entirely known. It appears to be an accidental phenomenon and it is believed that it is not hereditary. Curly maple is secured from occasional white maple (sugar maple) trees among the stands of white maple trees throughout the Lake states. In the curly maple varieties the bark curls inward, forming a notch or depression. Experienced persons can identify curly maple trees by cutting into the bark. In the curly maple varieties little dimples or depressions will show in the wood. Curly maple can also be identified from the ends of the logs.

Waters From Icefield

The stream which ends in the famous Takakkaw falls in Yoho national park, British Columbia, is fed by the melting waters of the Waputik icefield which lies upon the summit of the Great divide. Flowing down the mountain for over half a mile it reaches the precipice that walls the east side of the Yoho valley. Here it takes a leap of 150 feet over the edge, then, gathering itself together, falls in a glorious curtain 1,000 feet down the face of the cliff, and finally tumbles in a magnificent cascade of 500 feet into Yoho river.

Life of a Sponge

Sponges live their own lives and eat their own food as other animals do. The separate existence of a sponge begins when a tiny particle, after being whirled about for a time by ocean tides and currents, eventually attaches itself to a piece of rock, and from that home it seeks its own livelihood. The food of infant sponges consists of yolk cells, which contain a form of nourishment. Later, as the sponge grows, it requires something more solid, and this is brought in by the currents.

"Great Britain"

Britannia Major, meaning Great Britain, was the name formerly given to the whole island to distinguish it from Britannia Minor, which was the name given to Brittany. James I used the title king of Great Britain, but without the sanction of parliament. It was not officially adopted until after the union of England with Scotland in 1707. After the union with Ireland in 1800 the country became known as the Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

Not for Her!

Small Jeane, who had been used to having her hair cut at home, was taken to the barber shop for the first time. Proudly she was seated in the chair. When the current was turned on so the clippers could be used she became terrified.

"Stop it, stop it!" she sobbed; "I won't have a vacuum sweeper on my head."

Bullhead Fishing Getting Good

Bullhead fishing at Crystal Lake is good, acording to Bill Lau and Don Gibbs, who were at the lake Monday afternoon a short time and came home with 36 of the black beauties. Erick Josten and Eck Zeidler did not fare as well, but they probably forgot to spit on their hooks.

The season on game fish begins next week, May 15th. We caution fishermen to read thru the game laws as there are several changes in the law this year.

And don't forget that you need a fishing license. They can be procured in Klemme at the First National Bank

Edgwood Red Cedar Shingles

Will not warp

EDGWOOD shingles lie tight and flat to the sheathing. That is because they are sawn strictly edge-grain. This vertical and parallel grain equalizes all stresses and strains resulting from exposure to the elements . . . preventing EDGWOODS from cupping, curling, warping, or splitting. Therefore there is no lodgment for flying firebrands, dry leaves, moss, or other combustible matter.

Lease, District Superintendent Will Deliver Address

(By Rev. H. E. Whyte)

hen we recall the story of the lopment of this mid-west coun- we dare not over look the part the Methodist Episcopal church in that development. Scarce- ed the pioneer selected the spot his new home, than there ap- ed the Circuit Rider to pro- the gospel of Jesus Christ, its message of hope,and cour- and faith.

this regard Klemme was no ption. Methodism came to this munity some forty years ago of all thru the avenue of the uit Rider who came at infre- t intervals. As the following it soon became evident that a ch building in Klemme was ed for worship. Therefore in year 1893 the German M. E. rch was constructed, and in the owing year the English M. E. rch was built. For many years e two buildings cared for the ious needs of the Methodist fol- ng in this community. As the s went by these two congrega- s came to have more and more ommon, and there was a grow- feeling that there would be ter strength and satisfaction in erted labor and a unified pro- n which would overcome much less duplication of organization effort. Hence in the fall of 1924 two congregations merged. The equacy of our building to carry real live religious program has evident especially since that e, but conditions had not been rable for a building program. ecame evident this last year that e sort of an improvement was erative, and it was out of this umstance that the dream of a church took form.

fter considerable money had n pledged the congregation came ther on Thanksgiving evening ear the recommendation of the cial Board, which was to launch uilding program to construct a rch building to cost in the neigh- hood of $25,000. The recommen- on of the Board was accepted by congregation by an almost un- mous vote, and the building is well on its way towards realiz- n.

We will hold the service for the ing of the Corner Stone in the k and at the building site this ing Sunday, May 18, 1930 at 0 P. M. An appropriate pro- m is being arranged for this oc- on with Dr. Lease, our District perintendent, delivering the ad- ss. A cordial invitation is ex- ded to every one in the communi- to be present.

Dr. Lease will also preach at the rning service both in Klemme at Liberty. Let us give him a d hearing.

In view of the fact that the Bac- aureate Service is being held on nday evening, there will be neith- League nor preaching service in church.

FARM BUREAU LADIES MEET AT GARNER

A meeting of the township project and publicity chairmen of Hancock County was held at Garner on May 10th. Although this was Saturday and a rainy dav besides, there were eleven townships represented which shows that the busy homemakers are ready for service if sufficient enthusiasm is aroused.

The meeting was for making Posters and Maps for Achievement Day which is to be held June 18 at the Legion Hall at Britt. For several hours these women were busy with rulers, paste and scissors and Miss Johnston, the chairman of the day, was kept busier still answering questions and directing the work. The Co-operative spirit was excellent.

A picnic lunch was enjoyed at noon by all who were there and more recruits were added in the afternoon. On a motion made by Mrs. Roy Chase and seconded by Mrs. Chas. Grau the leaders decided to put on a booth at the Dairy Cattle Congress at Waterloo and Mrs. S. B. Durant, and Mrs. R. A. Wing were chosen as a committee to assist Mrs. Ed. Oxley, the county chairman, to oversee the work.

Achievement Day was fully discussed and planned for. Each township is to have posters on the five lessons given in this year's project and a map and summary o show the work accomplished. A period of ten mnutes is allotted each township in which they will demonstrate some phase of the work by playlet, song, talk or stunt. These will be very interesting and you will want to boost for your own township For the benefit of the township leaders we herewith give the time of their appearance on the program: Madison, Britt, Orthel, Erin, Boone, Magor and Concord in order named from 11:00 to 12:10 a. m.

Liberty, Bingham, Crystal, Ellington, Garfield, Ell, Twin Lake, Amsterdam and Avery from 1:00 to 2:30 P. M.

There will be community singing, Mrs. Richardson will give an address. There will be a picnic lunch at noon and Miss Viola Meintz will be here to do the judging. What more could you ask for a pleasant and instructive holiday? Put a mark around this date on your calendar and remember all roads lead to Britt on Achievement Day, June 18th.

KLEMME PEOPLE INVITED TO ATTEND AREA C. OF H.

Klemme First Aid Team To Compete For Championship

An Area Wide Court of Honor for Boy Scouts and Scouters of the North Iowa Area Council will be held at Mason City Armory Friday evening of this week.

This Court of Honor is the largest to be held durng the year and will be attended by Scouts from nine counties of North Iowa. The beautiful Golden Arch Ceremony will be used and will be of great interest to everyone. Klemme people are especially invited to attend the program and are urged to go.

Klemme Will Compete In First Aid Work

This Court of Honor will be of special interest to Klemme people, as a First Aid Team picked from the local Scout Troop will compete for a Championship and a Silver Cup against three other champion teams. The other teams are from Mason City, Hampton and Nora Springs. An elimination contest will be held at 5:00 p. m. and the two winners will compete for the Championship Cup at about 7:45 p. m.

The Klemme boys have worked hard to win the contest and have put in special work at home and at Mason City with the Mason City Fire Department and with Tom C. Connors, head of Red Cross First Aid work. The team is composed of Byrnes Missman, Harold Jost, Asa Gibbs, Paul Sampson, Dorance Day and Kenneth Kluckhohn.

Other Klemme Scouts will come up for advancement in the line of Merit Badges, and two for First Class, and one for Star.

A large delegation from Klemme is desired.

BUSY WEEK AHEAD FOR SENIOR CLASS

COMMENCEMENT NEXT WEEK TUESDAY EVENING

A Busy Week Is Ahead For The Seniors Of Klemme High

Ball Team Lost To Britt

Our base ball team composed mostly of beginners this year, closed their season on Tuesday afternoon of ths week with a game with Britt which they lost. The team loses Allan Klotzbach, who has been their chief hurler, through graduation next week. Wayne Pavey, Otho Keraus and Raymond Barz, other seniors of the team will be missed next year. Clarence Kluckhohn, one of our Freshmen boys of promise, has recently stopped playing upon his physician's orders.

Freshies Entertain Sophs

The Freshman class entertained the Sophomores at a party at the school houe last Friday evening. After an hour or more of games on the schoolhouse lawn the classes retired to the school gymnasium for refreshments.

The Seniors were entertained at the home of Miss LoisChurch on the same evening.

High Student Tests Listed

We are giving below the names of the upper one-fourth of each of the classes taking the tests sent us by our State University last week. They are as follows:

English Correctness—9th Grade, 1. Doris Carson, 2. La Vohn Larson, 3 Clarice Johnson, 4. Florence Tanner, 5. Cecil Bridges.

10th Grade, 1. Palu Hughes, 2. Blanche Gimer, 3. Nova Koerner, 4. Ethel Barz, 5. Vergie Meinders, 6. Emma Goll.

11th Grade, 1. Esther Greimann, 2 Frances Tanner, 3. Ruby Miller, 4 Floyd Klotzbach.

12th Grade, 1. Clarice Wellemeyer, 2. Otho Keraus, 3. Jane Dutheridge, 4. Wayne Pavey.

American Literature, Grades 11 and 12. 1, Clarice Wellemeyer, 2. Esther Greimann, 3. Wayne Pavey, 4. Gertie Trampel, 5, Otho Keraus, 6. Jane Dutheridge, 7. Reva Elder, 8. Carrie Swalve.

World History. 1. Esther Greimann, 2. Bernard Pringnitz, 3 Floyd Klotzbach, 4. Raymond Schuldt.

9th Grade Algebra. 1. Margaret Gates, 2. Norma Wille, 3. Raymond Drake, 4. La Vohn Larsen, 5. Nellie Stromer.

Klemme Wins In District

In the District Scholarship Meet Algona, our first and second highest wrote other tests in the same subjects in competition with other schools with an enrollment of less than 125, called class "B" schools. Clarice Wellemeyer won second place in English Correctness for Seniors while Paul Hughes won a first in the same subject for Sophomores, while Paul also won first place in Geometry among class "B" Schools. Both may now compete at Iowa City in the finals. Otho Keraus placed well up among the best in physics at Algona, ranking 4th.

Altho sometimes some of our students make a disappointing score on such tests we believe the quality of instruction and class work tends toward improvement by the use of these means of comparison of students of the same school and of several schools. If as much interest could be created in high scores in scholarship as in athletics a much better type of schools would follow.

Junior Senior Banquet Next

Our Junior-Senior Banquet will be given on Friday evening of this week. Baccalaureate services will be held on next Sunday night at the Klemme Reformed Church, and the Graduation Exercises will follow on Tuesday night of next week, May 20. Rev. Grosshuesch will deliver the Sunday evening sermon, while Dr. Fred W. Ingvolstad of Lansing, Michigan, will speak on Tuesday evening.

Our Girls Glee Club will furnish the music Sunday evening and will again sing at Commencement. We believe the orchestra may also be ready to play for Commencement.

School Picnic Next Friday

We should all be set at the picnic on Friday of next week and help make it the big day of the year for a community get-to-gether.

J. R. BAGGS RE-ELECTED AS COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT

At a meeting of representatives of the school boards of the county held at Garner Tuesday morning, Mr. J. R. Baggs was re-elected to serve as Superintendent of Schools for another term. Mr. Baggs has been an efficient officer and deserves the appointment. Following the business session Mr. Baggs invited the visiting representatives to a dinner. Mr. A. D. Gimer of the Klemme school board attended the meeting.

FREE KODAKS ARE ALL GONE ACCORDING TO TELEGRAM

A few weeks ago the Eastman Kodak Co. advertised in several magazines that on May 1st they would give any boy or girl whose 12th birthday came in 1930 a Kodak and a roll of film, until 500,000 kodaks had been given away. Several Klemme boys and girls were in line for the free offer but as there is no Eastman Dealer here they tried eleswhere to get their kodak. They found the supply exhausted. A. D. Gimer wrote the Company explaining the situation and the following telegram will be of interest to the boys and girls who tried to get in on the offer:

Rochester, N. Y., 5-6-30.
A. D. Gimer—Co-Op. Cry. Co.
Klemme, Iowa.
Final allottment of free cameras made many weeks ago (stop) All five hundred thousand distributed to dealers and wholesalers (stop) Greatly regret we are unable to take care of your request. Eastman Kodak Co.

If the company sent a telegram to everyone who inquired, it seems like they could almost issue another 500,000 cameras for what the telegrams would cost!

BIBLE CLASS ELECTED OFFICERS FO RTHE YEAR

At a meeting of the Bible Class of the Reformed Church Tuesday evening which was attended by about forty five young people, an elction of officers for the coming year was held. Harvey Barz, who has served as President for four years, was re-elected to that office. Other officers elected were as follows:

Vice President, Raymond Barz.
Secretary, Emma Goll.
Treasurer, Verner Priebe.

FRED GATES HAS NEW POWER LAWN MOWER

Fred Gates, care taker of the cemetery, has purchased a power lawn mower to use in mowing the grass at the cemetery.

Fred was using the new machine to mow the lawn at the park Monday and was doing a fine job of it. The mower is powered by a small gasoline motor which drives the entire machine, and all Fred has to do is follow it around. The engine s powerful enough so that a cart can be hooked behind it for the operator to ride on if he gets tired of walking.

AROUND THE COUNTY WITH AGENT WEISS

RAIN HAS DELAYED PLANTING CORN IN THIS COUNTY

County Agent Walter Weiss Tells Of Many Farm Activities

Most farmers are thinking how much corn they could have planted had it not rained. There is this much about it, they won't want for something to do as this weather is surely giving the weeds the chance of their lives. Mr. Gordon, near Forest City, states that although it has rained a lot he has managed to get a few rows of corn in from 4:00 p. m. until dark. Mike Sprole should have plenty to do with his dairying, lots of corn and 20 acres of beets.

Will Pool His Wool This Year

Ed. Wood is in the market for a sheep shearer and states that when he has the wool tied and sacked he is going to pool it with the rest of the wool growers in the county.

Kyhl Brothers have the largest wool crop in the county as they have 600 head of western lambs. They, too, plan on pooling their wool. Walter Peterson doesn't have enough work at home resetting trees and planting corn but finds time (sometime up until midnight) shearing his own and the Kyhl Brothers sheep. Other men that are planning on pooling wool are I. V. Rasmus, Mike Tobin, Shorty Aarvig, Vern Gilbert, the Young boys and Louis Schleusner. All of these men certainly have nice ewes resulting in clean heavy fleeces of wool.

Casperson Has Fine Pig Crop

V P. Casperson certainly has a spring crop of pigs to boast about. Just mention pigs to Pete and he will let you know all about them Anyway he claims 71 pigs farrowed from 10 sows and not one lost or a runt in the bunch. Maybe it is that good Holstein skim milk they get that does the trick. You know they say the best cow's milk for babies is Holstein. Of course, the Guernsey men won't agree with the above and why should they?

Mark F. Miller isn't spending any time looking for a sheep shearer as he does his own shearing This rainy weather has helped on this score but has not helped get in the 150 acres of corn he will have this year.

Declared War On Rats!

Melvin Hill took time out from his corn planting about 4:00 one afternoon last week and declared war on the rats about the place. A few shots of Cyanogas under the corn crib saved a few bushel of his corn. The following men have declared the same war on their places with good results: Katter Bros., Otto Schroeder, Henry Katter, John A. Johnson and U. J. Cooper. U. J. Cooper and his brother working for him are certainly doing things on a big scale. They will have 170 acres of corn to keep clean and they also have over 1,000 chicks to care for.

Crystal Township Had Meeting

Crystal is coming to the front with their township meetings. On Friday of last week they enjoyed a lively meeting at the J. J. Hanson School house with a home talent play and some interesting talks. We must mention the eats as all healthy people live to eat and eat to live. Bingham township experienced a similar meeting with a turn out of about sixty persons. Amsterdam township certainly was not outdone because they had a full house at their third meeting of the year. It was the third meeting in three months which shows that they mean business.

We just cannot close this article without mentioning the wool pooling again. The wool will be pooled and shipped on or about June 11th and it is certainly a real chance for the wool producers to get every cent for their wool that can be gotten. The wool will be marketed through the National Co-operative Wool Growers Association which will handle from one-third to one-half the entire wool clip of the U. S. Such a volume of wool should certainly have a direct bearing on the market.

SAYS HE IS STILL IN THE RACE FOR SHERIFF

Mr. George Morgan of Britt, a candidate for Sheriff, was in Klemme Monday interviewing the voters. He says there has been a rumor afloat that he has withdrawn from race for Sheriff. Mr. Morgan wishes to correct the rumor. He says he is out to win if possible and has no intention of quitting.

INSTALLS ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR

John Day had an electrical refrigerating system installed in his display counter at his store last week. This is a mighty fine improvement and a great convenience. Every store in Klemme now enjoys this modern convenience.

Squill Kill

This New Powder Kills RATS and MICE But Nothing Else

Rats Cost Millions Annually.

You can rid your premises of this costly pest without danger to your poultry or domestic animals by using Squill Kill, a Red Squill preparation. Red Squill is recommended by the U. S. Dept. of Agri. in farm bulletin No 1533, as being taken readily by rats and relatively harmless to human beings and domestic animals.

Rats cost the American people $200,000,000 annually. They distribute the virus of plague of hydrophobia of trichinosi, of equine influenza. When you can be rid of these pests by using Squill Kill at a cost of 50 cents, can you afford to have them?

Squill Kill carries a positive guarantee. If used according to instructions your money will be refunded if Squill Kill does not kill rats and mice (4-9-11)

Water Filtration Has Curbed Disease Spread

About 1887 it was announced by Percy Frankland and others that sand filtration removed nearly all the bacteria in water. Five years later came the outbreak of cholera in Hamburg, and a striking demonstration was afforded of protection through filtration. Hamburg and Altona, two cities on the Elbe river, both used the river as a source of water supply. Hamburg used unfiltered water; Altona filtered its supply. When cholera infection of the river water occurred, Altona escaped with only a few cases. Hamburg, on the other hand, had an enormous number.

Following the rapid advance of the science of bacteriology in the '80s and '90s, it was natural to consider the possibility of purifying drinking water by the addition of chemical disinfectants. The first systematic use of chlorine in water is credited to Houston and McGovern in England in 1904 and 1905. The present world-wide use of chlorine disinfectant of public water supplies, however, is due largely to the work of George A. Johnson, who, in 1908, used bleaching powder ("chloride of lime") for the purification of Jersey City's water supply.—New York Times.

Inventions That Would Make Deviser Wealthy

Among the 20 ways of making a million dollars, revealed by Roger W. Babson, economist, in the Forum are: (1) Pills for plants—condensed form of fertilizer, to do away with wasteful spreading. (2) A new gearless automobile which will use a rotary engine, go sidewise as well as forward and backward for convenience in parking. (3) A foolproof helicopter, to lift an airplane directly off the earth, enabling the aviator to light on city streets and building roofs. (4) Gliders for children. Boys will fly around their yards as safely as they now play in their sandpiles. (5) A light that will pierce fog, something greatly needed in the field of air navigation. (6) Talking books—that is, pages that may be fed into a machine and save the bother of reading. (7) Flexible, unbreakable and bulletproof glass. (8) Cold light, to do away with 95 per cent of electric current now wasted on resistance to create glow. (9) Mahogany lumber from native hardwood trees, by inoculating them with dyes and chemicals.

Diet of Lions

Lions in their native habits prey largely upon young antelopes, zebras, buffalos, giraffes and other vegetation-eating animals. For this reason it is often stated that the lion will not eat the flesh of carnivorous or flesh-eating creatures. The fact seems to be that lions will eat the flesh of any animal recently killed, such as animals left by hunters. Certainly lions in captivity are not particular about the kind of flesh they eat. There is also abundant proof that the king of beasts will occasionally attack and eat human beings. Dr. W. Reid Blair, in his book "In the Zoo," tells of two man-eating lions in Africa which carried off 18 men employed in building the Uganda railway.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Small Potatoes

The late Haley Fiske of insurance fame said one evening in a Y. M. C. A. address in Brooklyn:

"It pays big business to be liberal. To save a dollar in a mean small way signifies the loss of hundreds of dollars in good will.

"Whenever a mean, small economy is proposed to me I tell the anecdote about the Scotchman who went into a barber shop and said:

"'Hoo much for a haircut?'

"'Forty cents, sir,' said the barber.

"'Hoo much for a shave?'

"'Twenty cents.'

"'Shave mah head.'"

Purifying Public Water

The first noteworthy movement in this country for the purification of a public water supply was made in 1866, according to the New York Health department, when St. Louis sent James P. Kirkwood to Europe to investigate the methods practiced there. On his return Kirkwood made an elaborate report that water engineers still regard as a classic. In 1872, about five years after Kirkwood's death, a plant was built at Poughkeepsie in accordance with his plans. This was the first practical attempt at purification of a municipal water supply in America.

Unrepose Prose

If a cat doth meet a cat upon a garden wall, and if a cat doth greet a cat, O need they both to squall? Every Tommy has his Tabby waiting on the wall, and yet he welcomes her approach by an unearthly yawl. And if a kitten wish to court upon the garden wall, why don't he sit and sweetly smile, and not stand up and bawl, and lift his precious back up high and show his teeth and moan, as if 'twere colic more than love that made that fellow groan!—Pathfinder Magazine.

Simple

The other day a man, hitherto without a spot on his character, inquired, with well-feigned innocence:

"How can five persons divide five eggs so that each man will receive one and still one remain in the dish?"

After the company went all but distracted in the mazes of this proposition, the fellow meekly said:

"One takes the dish with the egg."
